Water-spouts.—[A water-spout is a large tube formed of clouds by means of the electric fluid, the base being uppermost, and the point let down perpendicularly from the clouds. It has a particular kind of circular motion at the point ; and, being hollow within, attracts vast quantities of water, which it frequently pours down in torrents upon the earth. These spouts are frequent on the coast of Syria ; and, no doubt, the Psalmist had often seen them, and the ravages which they made. See Shaw's Travels, p. 393 1—Bagster.

Ver. 10. With a sword.—A murderous weapon.—Amosworth.

Ver. 11. Health of my countenance.—Heb. "The salvation," &c. as in ver. 5.

PSALM XLIII. Ver. 4. With the harp.—This, we know, was David's favourite instrument, and from this and other places it appears he did not scruple, though a king, to assist in the public worship.

Ver. 5. The health.—Our translators have improperly rendered the Hebrew word for salvation (or salvations) in the fifth verse of the preceding Psalm help, and in this, health.

PSALM XLIV. Title.—Maschil. See note on title Ps. xxxii.

Ver. 2. Didst afflict, &c.—(Or, rather, "how thou didst afflict the people of Canaan,) and madest them (the Hebrews) to shout forth ;" for shalach is their own sword, neither did their own arm save them: but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance, because thou hadst a favour unto them.

4 Thou art my King, O God: command deliverances for Jacob.

5 Through thee will we push down our enemies: through thy name will we tread them under that rise up against us.

6 For I will not trust in my bow, neither shall my sword save me.

7 But thou hast saved us from our enemies, and hast put them to shame that hated us.

8 In God we boast all the day long, and praise thy name for ever. Selah.

9 But thou hast cast off, and put us to shame; and goest not forth with our armies.

10 Thou makest us to turn back from the enemy: and they which hate us spoil for themselves.

11 Thou hast given us like sheep appointed for meat; and hast scattered us among the heathen.

12 Thou sellest thy people for nought, and dost not increase thy wealth by their price.

13 Thou makest us a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us.

14 Thou makest us a byword among the heathen, a shaking of the head among the people.

15 My confusion is continually before me, and the shame of my face hath covered me, 16 For the voice of him that reproacheth and blasphemeth; by reason of the enemy and avenger.

17 All this is come upon us; yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falsely in thy covenant.

18 Our heart is not turned back, neither have our steps declined from thy way;

19 Though thou hast sore broken us in the b De. 4. 37.

c Ho. 1. 7.

d Ps. 132. 18.

e Ps. 74. 1.

f Ja. 3. 31, 32.

g Le. 23. 17.

h De. 28. 35, 64.

i As sheep of meat.

j De. 32. 30.

k Ps. 24. 9.

l Je. 24. 9.

m Ps. 8. 2.

n Da. 9. 13.

o Job. 23. 11.

p Ps. 119. 157.

q or, goings.

r or, goings.

s or, goings.

t or, goings.

u or, goings.

v or, goings.

w or, goings.

x or, goings.

y or, goings.

z or, goings.

a or, goings.

b or, goings.

c or, goings.

d or, goings.

e or, goings.

f or, goings.

g or, goings.

h or, goings.

i or, goings.

j or, goings.

k or, goings.

l or, goings.

m or, goings.

n or, goings.

o or, goings.

p or, goings.

q or, goings.

r or, goings.

s or, goings.

t or, goings.

u or, goings.

v or, goings.

w or, goings.

x or, goings.

y or, goings.

z or, goings.

a or, goings.

b or, goings.

c or, goings.

d or, goings.

e or, goings.

f or, goings.

g or, goings.

h or, goings.

i or, goings.

j or, goings.

k or, goings.

l or, goings.

m or, goings.

n or, goings.

o or, goings.

p or, goings.

q or, goings.

r or, goings.

s or, goings.

t or, goings.

u or, goings.

v or, goings.

w or, goings.

x or, goings.

y or, goings.

z or, goings.

a or, goings.

b or, goings.

c or, goings.

d or, goings.

e or, goings.

f or, goings.

g or, goings.

h or, goings.

i or, goings.

j or, goings.

k or, goings.

l or, goings.

m or, goings.

n or, goings.

o or, goings.

p or, goings.

q or, goings.

place of dragons, and covered us with the shadow of death.

20 If we have forgotten the name of our God, or stretched out our hands to a strange god; 21 Shall not God search this out? for he knoweth the secrets of the heart.

22 Yea, for thy sake are we killed all the day long; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.

23 Awake, why sleepest thou, O Lord? arise, cast us not off for ever.

24 Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and forgettest our affliction and our oppression?

25 For our soul is bowed down to the dust: our belly cleaveth unto the earth.

26 Arise for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies' sake.

PSALM XLV.

1 The majesty and grace of Christ's kingdom. 10 The duty of the church, and the benefits thereof.

To the chief Musician upon a Shoshannim, for the sons of Korah, Maschil, A Song of loves.

MY heart is inditing a good matter: I speak of the things which I have made touching the king: my tongue is the pen of a ready writer.

2 Thou art fairer than the children of men: grace is poured into thy lips: therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

3 Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O most mighty, with thy glory and thy majesty.

4 And in thy majesty ride prosperously because of truth and meekness and righteousness; and thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things.

5 Thine arrows are sharp in the heart of the king's enemies; whereby the people fall under thee.

6 Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: the sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre.

7 Thou lovest righteousness, and hatest wickedness: therefore God, thy God, hath form was neither temporary nor hypocritical. What is said of the cruelty of these ancient heathen, is by no means hypothetical. The temples of the heathen were always the habitations of cruelty, and therefore is this passage applied to the persecution of the primitive Christians by the Romans, who were remarkable for tolerating every worship upon earth, except that of the true God.

On the latter part of the psalm, Bishop Horne remarks—"There is a time, when the triumphs of the adversary, and afflictions of the church, tempt men to think that the eye of Providence is closed or turned away; and that the Almighty hath ceased to remember their sad estate. But the truth is, that God only giveth his people an opportunity of feeling their own insufficiency; and waiteth till, by fervent and importunate prayer, they solicit his help: for so the holy Jesus slept while the ship was covered with the waves, until awakened by the cries of his disciples, he arose to their assistance, and spoke the tempest into a perfect calm."

PSALM XLV. Ver. 1—17. A Song of Loves—or, as Ainsworth reads it, of "the well-beloved virgins;" supposing it to be an epithalamium, (as Bishop Lowth calls it,) or wedding song, chanted by the virgins which attended the marriage ceremony. This among the Jews, was not only considered a sacred solemnity, but also a mystical rite. This is the true foundation for explaining this psalm, the Canticles, and a few other sacred songs, of the union between Jehovah and the Jewish church, or Messiah and the Christian church. (See Isa. v. 1. Matt. xxv. 1—16. Eph. v. 25—32.) It appears to us very probable, that it was composed on the same, or a like occasion, as the book of Canticles, which in style it much resembles; but whether by David, Solomon, or Nathan the prophet, (as Dr. Hales thinks,) we have no sufficient ground to ascertain. One thing is certain, that a greater than David or Solomon is here, namely, king Messiah, to whom certain passages are clearly applied by the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, and in the book of the Revelation. (See note to title.)

The words, "Thou art fairer (more beautiful) than the children (or sons) of men;" while they refer literally to the exterior form, designate chiefly, as they apply to the Messiah, mental purity and perfection; and though the expression, "grace is poured into thy lips," might be explained poetically of Messiah's eloquence, it should, we think, include also the doctrines and precepts of divine grace which he delivered to his hearers. (Luke iv. 22.) The Chaldee explains this of "the spirit of prophecy" bestowed on him.

The virgin choristers, here introduced, may be supposed to represent the angelic hosts, who, at the Messiah's birth, sang "Glory to God and good will to men;" (Luke ii. 14;) and at his ascension proclaimed him through the skies, "the Lord is no other than the Messiah, as is acknowledged by many Jewish writers. The Targum, on verse 3, says, "Thy beauty, malika meshcecha, O King Messiah, is greater than the children of men;" and the Apostle expressly quotes it as such, He. i. 8, 9. It was probably written by David after Nathan's prophetic address, 1 Ch. xvii. 27.)—Baxter.

Ver. 1. My heart is inditing.—See margin; which the Jews consider as an allusion to the frying of the Mincha, or meat-offering, Levit. vii. 2. It has been rendered, "hath revolved," i. e. "teemeth," &c. but we rather conceive, as referring to the agitation of the heart, by the spirit of inspiration.—Touching the king.—"To," or "before the king." This Epithalamium was to be chanted in his presence, as was customary.

Ver. 3. O (most) mighty.—This interesting verse will bear two renderings; either, "Gird thy sword upon the thigh, O thou mighty one, (Arrayed) with thy glory, and thy majesty."

Or, as Dr. Pye Smith renders it, "Gird thy sword upon the thigh, Mighty in thy glory, and thy majesty!"

Ver. 7. God.—See margin. "Both the Hebrew and Greek (says Dr. Pye Smith) would fairly bear this construction; but it could not be proved."

anointed "thee with the oil of "gladness above thy fellows.

3 All "thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made thee glad.

9 Kings' daughters were among thy honourable women: upon thy right "hand did stand the queen in gold of Ophir.

10 Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget "also thine own people, and thy father's house;

11 So "shall the king greatly desire thy beauty: for "he is thy Lord; and worship "thou him.

12 And the daughter of Tyre "shall be there with a gift; even the rich "among the people shall entreat thy "favour.

13 The king's daughter is all glorious within: her clothing "is of wrought gold.

14 She shall be brought "unto the king in raiment of needlework: the virgins her companions that follow her shall be brought unto thee.

15 With gladness "and rejoicing shall they be brought: they shall enter into the king's palace.

16 Instead b of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes "in all the earth.

17 I will make thy name d to be remembered in all generations: therefore shall the people praise thee for ever and ever.

PSALM XLVI.

The confidence which the church hath in God. 8 An exhortation to behold it.

To the chief Musician "a for the sons of Korah, A Song b upon "Alamoth.

strong and mighty," and the "King of glory." Such, indeed, is the character in which he is here introduced—a mighty warrior, armed and arrayed in majesty and glory. But the conquests of Messiah, here referred to, are not those of violence and blood, but of meekness, truth, and righteousness. Keen is his sword and sharp are his arrows; their object, however, is not the destruction, but the conversion of mankind. The triumphs here celebrated, are those of the gospel; and we happily live in a day in which these have been conspicuously displayed, and wherein we may reasonably anticipate still more. "Prosper thou, ride thou" King of saints in all thy majesty, till all thine enemies be subdued by the power of truth and righteousness!

But the dignity of the person here addressed, is evidently a principal object in this psalm. Some persons, from a fear of rendering too high honours to the Son of God, have remarked that princes and magistrates are sometimes addressed as gods, without countenancing any claim to divine origin or power; but here we offer one remark, (in our view equally true and important,) that when men or angels are thus transiently addressed as gods, something is always added to prevent the danger of mistaken honours: both angels and magistrates are called gods, but they are commanded to worship God's illustrious Son; (Psalm ii. 7—12. lxxxii. 6, 7. Heb. ii. 1—9.) But when Christ is called God, as in the passage before us, strength, honour, might, majesty, and eternity, are ascribed to him. "Thy throne, O God! is for ever and ever."

This mighty person, arrayed in splendour and armed with power, is no less attractive by his gentle and amiable virtues than by the more masculine virtues of a sovereign. The perfumed garments, here named, were typical both of the virtues of the Redeemer himself, and of the internal comforts of the Holy Spirit. But the incense fumed upon the golden altar was typical of a far inferior, though of a precious and holy thing: namely, of whatever is pleasing to God, in the faith, the devotions, and the good works of the saints. "Now, (says Bishop Horsley,) the psalmist says that the fragrance breathing from the garments of the king, far excels, not only the sweetest odours of any earthly monarch's palace, but that it surpasses those spiritual odours of sanctity in which the king himself delights. The consolations which the faithful, under all their sufferings, receive from him, in the example of his holy life, the ministration of the word and sacraments, and the succours of the Spirit, are far beyond the proportion of any thing they have to offer in return to him in their praises, their in Is 61.1.

n 1 Ki.1.39, 40.
o Ca.1.3.
p Ca.6.8.
q 1 Ki.2.19.
r De.33.9.
Mat.10.37
s Ca.4.9,&c
t Is.54.5.
u Ps.95.5.
v Is.23.18.
Ac.21.3.6
w Is.60.3.
x face.
y Is.61.10.
Re.19.7,8.
z Ca.1.4.
a Is.35.10.
Jude 24.
b Ps.22.30.
c Re.1.6. d Mal.1.11.
a or, of
b Ps.48.66.
c 1 Ch.15.20

d heart of the seed.
e Ezr.47.1.
12.
f Re.21.2,3.
g when the morning
appeareth.
Ex.14.24, 27.
Ps.30.5.
h a high place for us. i Ezr.39.9, 10.
j Is.2.11,17.
a or, of.

GOD is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

2 Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the "midst of the sea;

3 Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.

4 There is a "river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city "of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High.

5 God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, "and that righteously.

6 The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, the earth melted.

7 The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is "our refuge. Selah.

8 Come, behold the works of the LORD, what desolations he hath made in the earth.

9 He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth "the chariot in the fire.

10 Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted "in the earth.

11 The LORD of hosts is with us: the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

PSALM XLVII.

The nations are exhorted cheerfully to entertain the kingdom of Christ.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm "a for the sons of Korah.

O CLAP your hands, all ye people; shout unto God with the voice of triumph.

prayers, and their good lives: notwithstanding, in these their services he condescends to take delight. This is the doctrine of this highly mystic text, that the value of all our best works of faith and obedience, even in our own eyes, must sink into nothing when they are contrasted with the exuberant mercy of God extended to us through Christ."

The latter part of this most interesting psalm seems particularly to indicate the calling of the Gentiles; for it is that church, and not the Jewish church, which is here called upon to forget her "own people" and her "father's house."

"So shall the King the more rejoice -
In thee, the favourite of his choice;
Let him be lov'd, and yet ador'd,
For He's thy Maker, and thy Lord."—Watts.

PSALM XLVI. Ver. 1—11. A Psalm expressive of faith in God, and gratitude for national deliverance. Neither the author nor the occasion of this psalm is on record: it is however, a very sublime and animated composition. Bishops Patrick and Lenth suppose it to have been written by David, on occasion of his victory over his enemies, as mentioned in the eighth chapter of the second book of Samuel; but the learned Rosenmüller thinks it was written on occasion of the victory of Jehoshaphat, which was celebrated with great rejoicing, as we find in 2 Chron. xx. 26—30. As, however, we have no data, it would be presumptuous to decide. But the psalm appears to us rather to be the language of faith under threatened difficulties, than of triumph over vanquished foes. In that view Luther composed a famous version of it on his journey to the Diet of Worms, where he went boldly to defend the Reformation, at the risk of his own life; and it was often his cry, when threatened with any fresh trouble, "Let us sing the forty-sixth Psalm!"

So Bishop Horne explains it: "The Church, in time of trouble, declares her trust and confidence in God, and doubts not of being preserved safe by this anchor in the most stormy seasons: even then enjoying the comforts of the Spirit, and the presence of God in the midst of her, and bidding defiance to all her foes." Finally, God himself is introduced as speaking the stormy nations into obedience, and burning all the implements of war.

"Silence, O earth! thy Maker own:
Ye Gentiles, he is God alone:
The Lord of hosts is in the field,
The God of Jacob is our shield."—Montgomery.

PSALM XLVII. Ver. 1—9. A Psalm of Joy and Praise,— which some have supposed to be a musical instrument, and others a psalm tune; for neither of which does there appear sufficient ground. Alamoth sometimes signifies virgins, and it has been thought that these sons of Korah were in this case to sing with feigned voices, to imitate the females, an octave above their proper pitch; such seems to have been the sentiment of the Rabbins, but the question is too dry, and the discussion would be too tedious in this place. Compare note on the title of psalm vi.

Ver. 4. There is a river.—Though this may have a literal reference to the streams that watered Zion, we have no doubt but that the psalmist refers to

Ver. 8. All thy garments smell.—This last word smell, is supplementary and unnecessary; Ainsworth and Horsley omit it; "Thy garments (are,)" &c.—Ivory palaces.—Palaces inlaid with ivory, as was not uncommon; or cabinets of ivory, in which the robes, or rather the perfumes, were kept.

Ver. 12. Entreat thy favour.—"Thy countenance," or face. As the pronoun is pointed feminine, this is considered to be addressed to the church, as in the verse preceding.

PSALM XLVI. Title.—A song upon Alamoth.—Upon no word have the commentators on the psalms been more puzzled, than upon this Alamoth, 632

2 For the LORD most high is terrible; he is a great King over all the earth.
3 He shall subdue the people under us, and the nations under our feet.
4 He shall choose our inheritance for us, the excellency of Jacob whom he loved. Selah.
5 God is gone up, <sup>b</sup> with a shout, the LORD with the sound of a trumpet.
6 Sing praises to God, sing praises: sing praises unto our King, sing praises.
7 For <sup>c</sup> God is the King of all the earth: sing ye praises <sup>d</sup> with <sup>e</sup> understanding.
8 God reigneth over the heathen: God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness.
9 The <sup>f</sup> princes of the people are gathered together, even the people of the God of Abraham: for the shields <sup>g</sup> of the earth belong unto God: he is greatly exalted.

PSALM XLVIII.

The ornaments and privileges of the church.

A Song and Psalm <sup>a</sup> for the sons of Korah.
GREAT is the LORD, and greatly to be praised in <sup>b</sup> the city of our God, in the mountain of his holiness.

2 Beautiful <sup>c</sup> for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, on the sides of the <sup>d</sup> north, the city <sup>e</sup> of the great King.
3 God is known in her palaces for a refuge.
4 For, lo, the kings <sup>f</sup> were assembled, they passed by together.
5 They saw it, and so they marvelled; they were troubled, and hasted away.
6 Fear <sup>g</sup> took hold upon them there, and pain, as of a woman in travail.

b Ps. 68. 18, 33.
c Ac. 1. 5. 11
d Zec. 14. 9.
e or, every one that hath understanding.
f 1 Co. 14. 15 Col. 3. 16.
g or, The voluntariness of the people are gathered unto the people of, &c.
h Ps. 30. 5.
i or, of.
j Ps. 65. 1.
k Ps. 50. 2 La. 2. 15.
l La. 14. 13.
m Mat. 5. 35.
n 2 Sa. 10. 6. 19.
o Ex. 15. 14. 16.
p Eze. 27. 25.
q Is. 2. 2.
r Jos. 7. 9. Ps. 113. 3.
s Set your heart to.
t or, raise up.
u Ps. 73. 24. Is. 33. 11.
v or, of.
w Ro. 8. 33, 34.
x Ho. 7. 2.

7 Thou breakest the ships of <sup>a</sup> Tarshish with an east wind.
8 As we have heard, so have we seen in the city of the LORD of hosts, in the city of our God: God will establish <sup>b</sup> it for ever. Selah.
9 We have thought of thy loving-kindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple.
10 According to thy <sup>c</sup> name, O God, so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of righteousness.
11 Let Mount Zion rejoice, let the daughters of Judah be glad, because of thy judgments.
12 Walk about Zion, and go round about her: tell the towers thereof.
13 <sup>d</sup> Mark ye well her bulwarks, <sup>e</sup> consider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following.
14 For this God is our God for ever and ever: he will be our guide <sup>f</sup> even unto death.

PSALM XLIX.

1 An earnest persuasion to build the faith of resurrection, not on worldly power, but on God. 16 Worthily prosperity is not to be admired.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm <sup>a</sup> for the sons of Korah.

HEAR this, all ye people; give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world:
2 Both low and high, rich and poor, together.
3 My mouth shall speak of wisdom; and the meditation of my heart shall be of understanding.
4 I will incline mine ear to a parable: I will open my dark saying upon the harp.
5 Wherefore <sup>b</sup> should I fear in the days of evil, when the iniquity of my heels shall compass <sup>c</sup> me about?

This is generally considered to have been composed by David (though his name is not prefixed,) on occasion of removing the ark to Mount Zion, and probably repeated on its removal to the temple of Solomon. (See 2 Sam. vi. and 2 Chron. v.) But it has been constantly applied by the Christian church to the triumphant ascension of our Saviour into heaven. (Compare Ps. lxxviii. 16—18.)

It appears by this and other psalms, that the public processions of the Hebrews were no less animated and noisy than those of the ancient heathens and nominal Christians; but in one important respect they differed; their rejoicings—their shoutings—were the voice of solemn praise, and not debased (so far as we know) by either intemperance or profaneness. The constant, though distant expectation of the Messiah, seems to have sanctified their joy, and turned their songs of triumph into hymns of praise; and on every great occasion, all who were Israelites indeed, were led to look forward to the great events of the expected "world to come," as the Jews designated the days of their Messiah. Unpardonable, then, is it in professing Christians, to debase their solemn festivals by an admixture of vulgar themes and carnal joys, especially when surrounded by so many circumstances that call for gratitude and praise.

"In Israel stood his ancient throne,
He lov'd that chosen race;
But now he calls the world his own,
And Gentiles taste his grace."—Watts.

PSALM XLVIII. Ver. 1—14. A Song of Praise for a great national deliverance.—The date of this psalm can only be conjectured from internal evidence. Bishop Patrick supposes it to have been composed on the great victory of Jehoshaphat, (2 Chron. xx.) Others conjecture it might be composed for the dedication of the second temple: but we confess we are disposed to refer it to the age of David: it was probably written by him on his victory over the Syrians and their confederates. (2 Sam. x. 15—19.) Nor is the mention of God's temple an objection, since we have met with several instances of the tabernacle itself being called by that name. It even appeared Zion, and to purer streams; that is, to the church of God, and the streams of living water by which it is refreshed and purified.

PSALM XLVII. Ver. 2. Terrible.—Ainsworth, "fearful:" a God of awful majesty.

Ver. 4. The excellency of Jacob.—The tabernacle, (or temple,) and its sacred institutions.

Ver. 5. God is gone up.—That is, the ark, the symbol of the divine presence, unto the hill of Zion.

Ver. 9. The princes.—Marg. "The voluntary of the people;" i. e. the noble volunteers who fought not as mercenaries, but for the freedom of their country; these "are gathered (unto) the people," &c.—The shields of the earth.—That is, its masters, or defenders, its rulers and its warriors, are all in the hands of God, and disposed of by him with the same ease that a soldier wields his shield.

PSALM XLVIII. Ver. 2. Beautiful for situation.—Elevated, salubrious.—On the sides of the north (is) the city of the great King.—That is, Jerusalem and the temple were on the north of Zion.

Ver. 7. The ships of Tarshish.—By these may be understood, large ships; 80 pears to us, that so much would not have been said of Mount Zion if the temple on Mount Moriah had been now erected.

What is said of the ships of Tarshish, meaning the largest ships then known, may not, perhaps, imply the occurrence of an actual storm; but only the total defeat of these confederate powers, as vessels at sea, by the fury of an east wind.

On whatever occasion, however, this psalm was written, the first and more immediate object of the writer was to lead his countrymen to look to the God of Israel as their only sure protection and defence; whether it were from storms at sea, or enemies on land. Zion, indeed, was an elevated situation and well fortified; but her true strength lay, not in her bulwarks, or her towers, but in that God who resided in them. So it is in the Christian church; Messiah, who resides therein, is both her strength and glory.

"This God is the God we adore,
Our faithful unchangeable friend;
His love is not less than his power,
And neither knows measure nor end."

PSALM XLIX. Ver. 1—20. The misery of being rich and great without religion.—The author and occasion of this psalm are alike unknown, nor are there any internal circumstances that can decide. It is, however, generally supposed to have been written during the captivity, and to have been intended to counteract the Epicurean notions of the heathen. It seems, says Dr. Dodd, to be a meditation on the vanity of riches, and the usual haughtiness of those who possess them. As a remedy to this, he sets before them the near approach of death, from which no riches can save, in which no riches can avail. The author considers the subject he is treating as a kind of wisdom concealed from the world; a mystery, an occult science, with respect to the generality of mankind. The style is enigmatical (ver. 4.); we may therefore be prepared for difficulties, of which there are indeed many, as may be seen in our notes: yet some critics, by seeking for more mysteries than the psalm contains, have much increased them. The general design and purport of the psalm we conceive to be as follows:

and the sense may be, that God visited their enemies with a tempest, enough to break the strongest ships, even those built for foreign service. See Taylor's Calmet.

Ver. 10. So to (or be) thy praise.—That is, corresponding to the glory thou hast already acquired.

Ver. 13. Mark ye well her bulwarks.—See Margin; i. e. contemplate.—Consider.—Rather, as Parkhurst, "distinguish, or count." Compare verse preceding.

Ver. 14. Even unto death.—"Beyond death." As an instance that the Hebrew particle signifies beyond, in respect of time, Professor Gesenius refers to Levit. xv. 25. The LXX. render it like the preceding phrase, "for ever."

PSALM XLIX. Ver. 4. Dark saying.—(Ghidah.) An enigma, riddle, or pointed saying.—Bishop Lath.

Ver. 5. The iniquity of my heels.—Rather, "of those that lie in wait for me."—Bishop Lath. [Or, rather, "my suppliants," alcainay, from akar, to supplant, sefrayad; see Gen. xxvii. 38. Jer. ix. 4. xvi. 9. To the same effect the Syriac and Arabic. "Why should I fear in the evil day, when the iniquity of my enemies compasses me about?"—Bagster.

6 They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;
7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him:

8 (For the redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth for ever:)

9 That he should still live for ever, and not see corruption.

10 For he seeth that wise men die, likewise the fool and the brutish person perish, and leave their wealth to others.

11 Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names.

12 Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.

13 This their way is their folly: yet their posterity approve their sayings. Selah.

14 Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling.

15 But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave: for he shall receive me. Selah.

16 Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory of his house is increased;

17 For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away: his glory shall not descend after him.

18 Though while he lived he blessed his soul: and men will praise thee, when thou doest well to thyself.

19 He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light.

20 Man that is in honour, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish.

PSALM L.

1 The majesty of God in the church. 5 His order to gather saints. 7 The pleasure of God is not in ceremonies, 14 but in sincerity of obedience.

A Psalm of Asaph.

THE mighty God, even the LORD, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof.

2 Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.

3 Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and

d Job 36.18.

e Ac. 13.33.

f Ec. 2.16.

21.

g generation and generation.

h 2Sa. 18.18.

i Ps. 39.5.

j delight in their mouth.

k Da. 7.22.

Re. 2.26,

27.

l or,

strength.

m or, the grave being an habitation to every one of them.

n hand.

o or, hell.

p Lu. 12.20.

q in his life

r The soul

shall go.

a Ec. 3.18,

19.

a or, for.

b Is. 9.6.

c Ps. 68.24.

d Re. 22.20.

e Da. 7.10.

f Mat. 24.31.

g He. 12.24.

h Re. 20.12.

i Mi. 6.1-8.

j Ac. 17.25.

He. 10.4,6

k with me.

l Ps. 107.6,

&c.

m Is. 1.11.

15.

n Jn. 4.24.

o Pr. 5.12,13

p or, thou

was.

q sendest.

r Ps. 11.12.

Ro. 2.4.

s Ps. 3.8.

t Ps. 9.17.

u Ps. 2.9.

v dispo-seth his scay.

w Ps. 127.

it shall be very tempestuous round about him.
4 He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people.
5 Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.

6 And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge himself. Selah.

7 Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God.

8 I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt-offerings, to have been continually before me.

9 I will take no bullock out of thy house nor he-goats out of thy folds.

10 For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills.

11 I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are mine.

12 If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof.

13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats?

14 Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High:

15 And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

16 But unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee.

18 When thou sawest a thief, then thou consentedst with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers.

19 Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit.

20 Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son.

21 These things hast thou done, and I kept silence; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thyself: but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes.

22 Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver.

23 Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me: and to him that ordereth his conversation aright will I show the salvation of God.

this is by no means certain. The sense of both is comprised in the following verse.

"Men void of wisdom and of grace,
If honour raise them high,
Live like the beast, a thoughtless race,
And like the beast they die."—Watts.

PSALM L. Ver. 1—23. God's judgment against hypocrisy.—This is the first of twelve psalms attributed to Asaph, the contemporary of king David, and whose compositions rank next to those of the royal psalmist. (1 Chron. xvi. 7.) The introduction has much sublimity and grandeur, the imagery being borrowed from the giving of the law at mount Sinai, (Deut. xxxiii. 2.) only instead of shining forth from the wilderness, God's glory is displayed from Zion. The scene is that of su-

Horsley, "Death is their shepherd;" but query?—Their beauty.—Ainsworth, "image, form," &c.—Shall consume.—Or, "Be consumed" in the grave; or rather, "Their form shall be consumed, the grave (being) their dwelling place."

Ver. 15. From the power of the grave (or hell) shall he rescue me.—The word Sheol being equivocal, has been variously translated. See note on Psal. xvi. 10. We have followed Boothroyd and others, in rejecting the Masoretic pointing of this verse.

PSALM L. (It cannot be certainly determined at what period, or on what occasion, this truly sublime poem was composed; some refer it to the time of David, others to that of Hezekiah, and others to that of the captivity.)—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Gather my saints.—Ainsworth, "My gracious ones;" those who, professing to have received grace and mercy, are bound to display it to all around them.—Those who have made—stricken, or cut a covenant with me by sacrifice; for it was by the death of the sacrifice the covenant was confirmed. Heb. ix. 22.

Ver. 8. I will not reprove, &c.—See Isa. i. 11—15.

Ver. 22. Lest I tear you in pieces.—The Almighty, thus provoked by their hypocrisy, compares himself to an incensed lion. See Hos. v. 14.

Ver. 23. That ordereth his conversation.—i. e. that regulates his conduct by God's word.

The writer, it should seem, was of the poorer class, and his enemies great and wealthy; yet, says he, "Why should I fear them? They are mortal as well as me. None can ransom the life of his brother, nor is there any redemption in the grave. The rich vainly please themselves in perpetuating their names in their possessions and their posterity, and forget that they themselves must die. Yet their carcasses are laid in the grave, like slaughtered sheep; and death, like a voracious wolf, feeds thereon. 'Verily,' says the psalmist, 'God shall redeem my soul; from the hand of the grave he shall rescue me;' which is to me, far greater consolation, than to die possessed of riches or of honours, which would then be perfectly useless."—The last verse so much resembles the twelfth, that some critics have supposed they must have been originally the same; but

Ver. 7. Redeem his brother.—That is, from death, or the grave, as in ver. 9. Ver. 8. It ceaseth for ever.—That is, after death there is no more redemption. Compare Heb. x. 18, 26.

Ver. 11. Their inward thought.—"Their grave is their house for ever, their dwelling place through all generations, though their names are celebrated over countries." All the ancient versions, instead of kirbon, "their inward part," seem to have read ktivom, "their grave;" which is probably the true reading.—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Nevertheless, man, &c.—More literally, "Man in honour resteth not." The original term, according to Ainsworth, means, to take a night's lodging. The sense seems to us, "Man is perpetually restless, never satisfied with his present situation." Most of the ancient versions read, as in the last verse, "understandeth not." So Kennicott and Horsley; but they are not supported by MSS.—He is like the beasts that perish.—Ainsworth, "Are silenced;" Kennicott, "Go down into silence;" Horsley, "Sink into nothing." Compare Eccl. iii. 21.

Ver. 14. Like sheep they are laid in the grave.—Vansittart, "They are laid in the grave like sheep (in a fold)." The sense appears to us, they die and are buried, without being able to resist. See Ps. xlv. 11, 22.—Death shall feed on them.—So the heathen supposed that Cerberus feasted on the bodies in the grave. (Orient. Lit. No. 767.) But the LXX. read, "Death shall feed (or rule) them," as a shepherd does his sheep. So Kennicott and

PSALM LI.

David prayeth for remission of sins, whereof he maketh a deep confession. 6 He prayeth for sanctification. 16 God delighteth not in sacrifice, but in sincerity. 18 He prayeth for the church.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, when <sup>a</sup> Nathan the prophet came unto him, after he had gone in to <sup>b</sup> Bathsheba.

HAVE mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving-kindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot <sup>c</sup> out my transgressions.

2 Wash <sup>d</sup> me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

3 For I acknowledge <sup>e</sup> my transgressions: and my sin <sup>f</sup> is ever before me.

4 Against <sup>g</sup> thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done <sup>h</sup> this evil in thy <sup>i</sup> sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.

5 <sup>j</sup> Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother <sup>k</sup> conceive me.

6 Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden <sup>l</sup> part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

7 Purge <sup>m</sup> me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be <sup>n</sup> whiter than snow.

8 Make me to hear joy and gladness; <sup>o</sup> that the bones <sup>p</sup> which thou hast broken may <sup>q</sup> rejoice.

9 Hide <sup>r</sup> thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.

10 Create <sup>s</sup> in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a <sup>t</sup> right spirit within me.

11 Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not <sup>u</sup> thy holy spirit from me.

a 2 Sa.12.1, &c. b 2 Sa.11.2, 4.
c Is.43.25, 44.22, Ac.3.19.
d Re.1.5.
e Pr.23.13.
f 2 Sa.12.13.
g Lu.15.21.
h Ep.2.3.
i warm.
j Le.14.4, 9, Nu.19.13, He.9.19.
k Is.1.18.
l Mat.5.4.
m Je.16.17.
n Ac.15.9.
o or, constant.
p Lu.11.13.

q 2 Co.3.17.
r Zec.3.1.3.
s bloods.
t Ph.7.23, 24. u Ho.6.6, Mi.6.7,8, He.10.4, 10.
v or, that I should.
w Is.66.2.
x Pa.4.5, Ro.12.1.
a 1 Sa.21.7, 22.9.
b Eccl.22.9.
c Ps.137.1,2.
d Je.8.4,5.

12 Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me <sup>with thy free <sup>a</sup> spirit.</sup>

13 <sup>Then <sup>b</sup> will I teach transgressors thy ways and sinners shall be converted unto thee.</sup>

14 Deliver me from <sup>c</sup> blood-guiltiness, O God, thou God of my salvation: <sup>and my tongue <sup>d</sup> shall sing aloud of thy righteousness.</sup>

15 O <sup>Lord</sup>, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall show forth thy praise.

16 For <sup>e</sup> thou desirest not sacrifice, else <sup>f</sup> would I give <sup>g</sup> it: thou delightest not in burnt-offering.

17 The sacrifices of God <sup>are</sup> a broken spirit: a broken <sup>h</sup> and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

18 Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion: build thou the walls of Jerusalem.

19 Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices of <sup>i</sup> righteousness, with burnt-offering and whole burnt-offering: then shall they offer bullocks upon thine altar.

PSALM LII

1 David, condemning the spitefulness of Doeg, prophesieth his destruction. 6 The righteous shall rejoice at it. 8 David, upon his confidence in God's mercy, gives thanks.

To the chief Musician, Maschil, A Psalm of David, when <sup>a</sup> Doeg the Edomite came and told <sup>b</sup> Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Ahimelech.

WHY boasteth thou thyself in mischief, O mighty man? <sup>the <sup>c</sup> goodness of God endureth continually.</sup>

2 Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs; like a sharp razor, working deceitfully.

3 Thou lovest evil more than good; <sup>and <sup>d</sup> ly-</sup>

preme judgment; but it extends not to the world at large, but to Israel only, the professed people of JEHOVAH, who are summoned from east to west to appear before him, and answer to his charge. This is not the neglect of external sacrifices, for they, alone considered, are of little estimation in the sight of God; but the want of devotion of heart, and purity of life. He who owns all the beasts, both of the fold and the forest, cannot be gratified with the effusion of goats' and bullocks' blood. "He that offereth praise glorifieth God;" and "to him that ordereth his conversation aright," that is, according to his word, "to him will he show his salvation." But to the wicked he speaks in thunder: "What hast thou to do to declare my statutes? or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth?"

Some have applied this psalm to the day of general judgment; and others, as Bishops Horne and Horsley, to the promulgation of the gospel in the end of the Jewish dispensation: to this, indeed, the former prelate has applied it with excellent effect; but in our view, the simple topic is, the danger of hypocrisy.

"God is the judge of hearts: no fair disguises Can screen the guilty when his vengeance rises."—Watts.

PSALM LI. Ver. 1—19. A penitential Psalm of David, on occasion of his sin with Bathsheba.—So it has been universally considered on authority of the title above prefixed, and upon internal evidence, which we think conclusive. As a penitential psalm, it has always been considered as the natural overflowing of a broken heart, deeply penetrated with a sense of extreme guilt: "before God," on which account the writer compares himself to a polluted leper. This is evidently implied in calling for hyssop as a ceremonial purification, while, at the same time, he prays earnestly for pardon; and that he may experience the cleansing and re-creative power of God's Holy Spirit. It is observable also, that he rests not in the confession of actual transgression; but, as Bishop Horne observes, traces his sinful actions to their source in the pollution of his fallen nature: himself a sinner, the child of sinful parents, and they the posterity of the first human, guilty, pair. This, however, though a matter of humiliation, is never pleaded by him as an excuse.

But it is not adultery only that he laments: he complains of "blood-guiltiness," and no doubt his conscience was haunted by the image of his murdered friend Uriah. Sin seems but a little thing when committed, and wears a smiling form; but when it visits the conscience afterwards, it assumes a gigantic size, and its head is shrouded with the storm. As we have in David a most aggravated instance of backsliding, so have we a most exemplary example of the contrition of a heart agitated alternately with grief and shame, and terrified with the judgments of the Almighty.

Bishop Horsley and others, object to the title, as not authentic, because the author prays, in the close of this psalm, that God would build the walls of Jerusalem, which seems to imply that it was written during the captivity. To this, 1. Some have replied that these two last verses, which seem to have no immediate connexion with the rest, might be added by some pious worshipper of that period. 2. It might be said, as some parts of Jerusalem (particularly the strong hold of Zion) had not now been more than about a dozen years in the possession of David, it is very possible that they might then have been much damaged, and not since repaired; and other parts, as Mount Moriah, where the temple was afterwards erected, not yet built on; and that his prayer might have particular reference to the erection of that Temple (already contemplated, 2 Sam. vii. 1, &c.) where sacrifices of unprecedented magnitude were to be offered. 3. Perhaps the expression should be taken rather figuratively than literally. Men build with brick or stone, but God with living stones; and for him to build up a house or a city, is to furnish it with inhabitants, and to crown it with his blessing. (See Psalm lxi. 35; cii. 16; cxlvii. 2.) Lastly, it is probable, or rather more than probable, that this prayer had a particular reference to "the future age" of the Messiah, in whom the Lord has since declared himself not only pleased, but satisfied. (See Dan. ix. 25—27. Amos ix. 11. Matt. iii. 17.)

To return, however, to the psalm before us, the most profitable use that we, as sinners, can make of it, is to make it the model of our own petitions; and the sum of it is well compressed in the following emphatic lines:

"Mercy, good Lord! mercy I ask,
This is the total sum:
For mercy, Lord, is all my suit,
O let thy mercy come!"

PSALM LII. Ver. 1—9. The wicked character and miserable fate of Doeg.—The history of this wretch has already passed under our review transiently; (1 Sam. xxi. 7; xxii. 9, &c.) And from what occurs in this short psalm, we may farther remark, that his character was not only execrable to David, but detestable in the sight of God. Doeg appears to have been one of Ver. 7. Purge me with hyssop.—See Le. xiv. 4.

Ver. 10. A right spirit.—Not fickle, but persevering.

Ver. 12. With thy free spirit.—With a spirit of freedom; i. e. from the slavery of sin. Rom. viii. 15, 16.

Ver. 14. From blood-guiltiness.—See Margin; the plural being used for emphasis.

PSALM LII. Ver. 1. Why boasteth, &c.—Doeg is here represented as boasting of his successful treachery and savage cruelty, in murdering a multitude of unarmed and unsuspecting priests, and of women and children, as if he had performed some great exploit; and perhaps he menaced David, and his company with the same vengeance. But the Psalmist, by contrasting Doeg's malice

PSALM LI. Title.—When Nathan, &c.—See 2 Sam. xii. 1, &c.

Ver. 1. Blot out, &c.—See note on Numb. v. 23.

Ver. 4. Against thee, &c.—only.—The prefix (named) sometimes means before, in the presence of, and is so rendered, Gen. xxiii. 11; xlv. 1. See also Genesis. This answers Bishop Horsley's first objection. David's adultery was a secret sin, before God only.—That thou mightest.—Rather, "Therefore thou wilt be justified when thou speakest, (i. e. to pronounce sentence,) and clear when thou judgest."—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 5. I was shapen.—The Hebrew word is of extensive import, and means either to be formed in the womb, as De. xxxii. 18. or otherwise, Ps. xc. 2.—Conceive.—May not this refer to bearing in the womb?

ng rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.
4 Thou lovest all devouring words, * O thou deceitful tongue.

5 God † shall likewise ‡ destroy thee for ever, he shall take thee away, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling place, and † root thee out of the land of the living. Selah.

6 The righteous also shall see, and fear, and shall laugh at him :

7 Lo, this is the man that made not God his strength; but trusted † in the abundance of his riches, and strengthened himself in his † wickedness.

8 But I am like † a green olive tree in the house of God : I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever.

9 I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it : and I will wait † on thy name ; for † it is good before thy saints.

PSALM LIII.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their own conscience. 6 He gloryeth in the salvation of God.

To the chief Musician upon Mahalath, Maschil, A Psalm of David.

THE † fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. Corrupt † are they, and have † done abominable iniquity : there is none that doeth good.

2 God † looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God.

3 Every one of them is gone back : they are altogether become filthy ; there is none that doeth good, no not one.

those sycophants, with whom tyrants are generally surrounded, and who are ready to engage in any dirty work which they think will recommend themselves to promotion or reward. His first wish was, no doubt, to betray David ; but, being disappointed by David's prudence and activity, he wreaks his vengeance on God's high priest and his attendants. On his unmanly cowardice, in falling upon the unarmed priests and their helpless families, David seems here to taunt him—"Oh, mighty man!" and "Oh, deceitful tongue!"

It is probable that, by this time, the vengeance of God had overtaken him, for (in ver. 7.) he points at him and says, "Lo! this is the man that made not God his strength, but trusted in his riches," &c. Now Doeg, as chief of Saul's herdsmen and master of his mules, might take care to enrich himself ; but he was a stranger to God, and probably never worshipped in his house. On the contrary, David represents himself "like a young olive fresh and green," planted, and flourishing in the house of God.

PSALM LIII. Ver. 1—6. The folly of wickedness.—This psalm differs very little from the fourteenth ; and it is not known, nor has it been conjectured with much probability, on what account, or for what reason, the same sentiments are repeated in almost the same words. The variations, however, are sufficient to show, that the psalm in one place was intentionally altered from that in the other ; and it is probable, that it was in consequence of some change in the psalmist's circumstances, or some events which had occurred subsequent to its first publication.—The word Mahalath seems to denote a hollow instrument of music, a flute or pipe, and Maschil, or instructing, implies the scope of it, viz. an instruction or warning against impiety towards God, and rebellion against his anointed king.

The folly of sinners greatly appears in their acting, as if they could escape the notice of Omnipotence, prosper in defiance of Omnipotence, or be happy in rebellion against the Source of all and mischief with the persevering goodness of God, sharply reproved him : and, in fact, relying on the faithful and merciful promises of God, he set him and all his other enemies at defiance.—T. Scott.

Ver. 5. Shall destroy thee, &c.—An accumulation of most expressive metaphors is here used, to mark the certainty of that dreadful and eternal punishment, which awaited this prosperous and haughty persecutor : and which awaits all who bear the same character, however in other respects distinguished.—T. Scott.

Ver. 6. And fear.—Instead of wygyernao, "and fear," three MSS. with the Syriac, have wygyernachao, "and rejoice;" which, from the following words, appears the true reading.—Bagster.

Ver. 7. In his wickedness.—As he was Saul's chief herdsman, it is probable his riches consisted chiefly in cattle.

Ver. 8. Green olives.—The olive tree produces the oil which is useful to man, and was employed in the worship of God. Thus David, being rooted in love to the ordinances of God, would abide and be fruitful in his house ; while Doeg, who was "detained before the Lord," became a firebrand to destroy others and himself.—T. Scott.

PSALM LIII. Title.—Mahalath is supposed to mean the same (or nearly so) with Nehloth, title of Psalm v. which see. Maschil has occurred repeatedly.

Ver. 5. Where no fear was.—See Deut. xxviii. 65. Instead of the words fol-e or, and the.

f Pr.19.5,9.

g beat thee
down.

h Pr.2.22.

i 1 Ti.6.17.

j or, substance.

k Ps.1.3.
92.12.

l 1 La.3.25,
26.

m Ps.73.23.

a Ps.14.1,
&c.

b Ge.6.5,12.

c Ep.5.12.

d Ps.11.4.

e they feared a fear.

f Pr.28.1.

g Je.6.30.

h Who will be salvations,
&c.

i Ps.125.1,3.

a 1 Sa.23.19.

b Ps.36.1.

c Ps.118.7.

d those that observe me.

e Ps.5.8.

f 1 Sa.26.24.

4 Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people as they eat bread: they have not called upon God.

5 There † were they in great † fear, where no fear was: for God hath scattered the bones of him that encampeth against thee : thou hast put them to shame, because † God hath despised them.

6 Oh † that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion ! When † God bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM LIV.

1 David, complaining of the Ziphim, prayeth for salvation. 4 Upon his confidence in God's help he promises sacrifice.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, Maschil, A Psalm of David, when the † Ziphims came and said to Saul, Doth not David hide himself with us ?

SAVE me, O God, by thy name, and judge me by thy strength.

2 Hear my prayer, O God ; Give ear to the words of my mouth.

3 For strangers are risen up against me, and oppressors seek after my soul : † they have not set God before them. Selah.

4 Behold, God is my helper: the † Lord is with them that uphold my soul.

5 He shall reward evil unto † mine enemies: cut them off in thy truth.

6 I will freely sacrifice unto thee : I will praise thy name, O Lord ; for it is good.

7 For he † hath delivered me out of all trouble : and mine eye hath seen his desire upon mine enemies.

felicity. Those who go back from a religious profession, generally become most filthy, or most malicious persecutors, who of all sinners are most infatuated : for God "hath despised," and will confound and destroy them ; as he has often scattered the bones of powerful armies, who have encamped against his church. A guilty conscience and a dread of vengeance frequently fill the enemies of God with fears, where nothing formidable can be perceived ; but at length their worst terrors will be awfully realized : and as the deliverance and prosperity of the church on earth will be attended with the ruin of all anti-christian opposers ; so the eternal joys of the redeemed will be attended with the everlasting shame and misery of all their impenitent oppressors.—T. Scott.

PSALM LIV. Ver. 1—7. Prayer for deliverance.—Our nearest relations may prove more unkind than strangers that who ought to protect us may become our oppressors ; and mere professors of true religion will generally behave to believers with malignity and treachery, which even heathens would avoid and condemn. So that, looking unto David betrayed by the men of Judah, and to Jesus betrayed by his apostle, and delivered to death by the Jewish rulers and people : what can we expect from any who "have not set God before them," except ingratitude, treachery, malice, and cruelty ? But God is the Helper of his people : he will favour and prosper those "that uphold their souls," while he confounds their persecutors : and his truth is engaged to reward evil to their enemies. Let us trust him and call upon him, when injured or tempted : for his name's sake he will then save us, and plead our cause with all his power. We should recollect past deliverances to encourage our faith and prayer in present trials ; and it is good and acceptable for us to sacrifice freely our spiritual oblations of grateful praise for the past, while we wait for farther mercies. As the risen and ascended Jesus could adopt the psalmist's words, and say, "He hath delivered me from all trouble, and mine eye hath looked upon mine loving in Psalm xiv. viz. "God is in the congregation of the righteous," which gave his enemies sufficient ground to fear, the expression seems here applied to Israel : They feared where there was no ground to fear, considering God was on their side, as is since evident, by his scattering the bones of their besiegers ; i. e. he hath destroyed them utterly. We are inclined to consider the former psalm as the original, written by David, and this as altered by some later prophet, to adapt it to another occasion.

PSALM LIV. The history referred to in the title of this psalm, we have already remarked upon in 1 Sam. xxiii. 19, &c. ; xxvi. 1, &c. The Ziphim, in order to obtain favour with Saul, betrayed David : and the troops of Saul had nearly surrounded him and his company, when they were sent for away to repel an invasion of the Philistines ; and thus David providentially escaped, and penned this short psalm in grateful acknowledgment of the mercy.

Ver. 3. Strangers.—[For zairim, "strangers," twenty-one MSS. and apparently two others, with the Chaldee, have zaidim, "the proud," and the Ziphites, who were of the same tribe as David, could scarcely be called strangers.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Mine eye.—[Or rather, "though mine eye hath seen my enemies : " though they were so near, that I could plainly perceive them, yet they were not permitted to approach me.]—Bagster.

PSALM LV.

David in his prayer complaineth of his fearful case. 9 He prayeth against his enemies, of whose wickedness and uncharity he complaineth. 16 He comforteth himself in God's preservation of him, and confusion of his enemies.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, Maschil, A Psalm of David.

GIVE ear to my prayer, O God; and hide not thyself from my supplication.

2 Attend unto me, and hear me: I mourn in my complaint, and make a noise;

3 Because of the voice of the enemy, because of the oppression of the wicked: for they cast iniquity upon me, and in wrath they hate me.

4 My heart is sore pained within me: and the terrors of death are fallen upon me.

5 Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath overwhelmed me.

6 And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest.

7 Lo, then would I wander far off, and remain in the wilderness. Selah.

8 I would hasten my escape from the windy storm and tempest.

9 Destroy, O Lord, and divide their tongues: for I have seen violence and strife in the city.

10 Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof: mischief also and sorrow are in the midst of it.

11 Wickedness is in the midst thereof: deceit and guile depart not from her streets.

12 For it was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him.

13 But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance.

14 We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company.

15 Let death seize upon them, and let them go down quick into hell: for wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them.

16 As for me, I will call upon God; and the Lord shall save me.

17 Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice.

enemies:" so will his risen people at length be enabled to join in them. O Lord, help us to bear our cross without repining, and at length bring us to behold, and to share thy victories and glory.—T. Scott.

PSALM LV. Ver. 1—23. David's prayer against his enemies.—There seems no doubt but this psalm was composed with reference to Absalom's rebellion, and the desertion of Ahithophel to his cause, as recorded. (2 Sam. xv. 30—37.) A period this of great alarm and singular distress, which led David not only to pray to God, but to wish for "the wings of a dove," that he might find refuge in the wilderness. The circumstance which seemed most to affect David was, that Ahithophel, who had been one of his confidential counsellors, should join in the conspiracy, a circumstance which has been compared with the conduct of Judas, who betrayed our Lord, though it does not appear that Judas was ever remarkable for his wisdom, or distinguished by his master above his other apostles, as was the case with Peter, James, and John; nor did our Lord follow his betrayer with execrations, as David did Ahithophel, and the other traitors, a circumstance that marks conspicu-

PSALM LV. Ver. 2. I mourn.—Boothroyd, "Am distressed, confused, distracted."—And make a noise.—"Like the waves of the sea."—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 4. My heart is sore pained.—"Trembleth with pain."—Ainsworth, Thammond, &c.

Ver. 5. Dove.—The dove is a bird of a very rapid and unwearying wing; to which the classic bards of Greece and Rome make frequent allusions, Sophocles, in a passage not very dissimilar to that of the Psalmist, says, "O that, with the rapid, whirlwind flight of a dove, I could cleave the ethereal clouds!"—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Windy storm.—[From the sweeping wind and tempest; Absalom and his rebellious party.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Dove's tongue.—That is, their counsels, which actually came to pass. 2 Sam. xvii. 7.—Violence and Strife are here personified, as sentinels, or patrol, who guard the city; Sorrow, Sickness, &c. as reigning in the midst.

Ver. 14. We took sweet counsel.—See Margin: is sweetened by friendship. Ver. 15. Quick into hell.—Or, "alive into the grave," like Korah and his company. Num. xvi. 30. "Or rather," "Death shall seize on them; they shall descend quickly into the grave," which is a prediction of the sudden destruction which befel the ringleaders of this unnatural rebellion.]—Bagster.

a 2Sa.15.7.

b Ps.116.3.

c covered.

d Je.6.7.

e Ps.41.9.

f according to my rank.

g 2Sa.15.12.

h who sweetened counsel.

i Ps.42.4.

j Nu.16.30.

k or, the grave.

l Ps.73.28.

m Da.6.10.

n Ac.3.1.

o or, with whom also there be no changes, yet they.

p Ps.73.5.

q profaned.

r Mat.6.25.

s or, gift.

t Ps.121.3.

u men of blood and deceit.

v have.

w Pr.10.27.

x a or, a golden Psalm of David.

y Ps.16.10.

z 1Sa.21.11.

a Ho.8.8.

b observers.

c 1Sa.30.6.

d Lu.12.4.5.

e Lu.11.54.

f Ps.37.32.

g Ec.8.8.

h Mal.3.16.

18 He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me: for there were many with me.

19 God shall hear, and afflict them, even he that abideth of old. Selah. Because they have no changes, therefore they fear not God.

20 He hath put forth his hands against such as be at peace with him: he hath broken his covenant.

21 The words of his mouth were smother than butter, but war was in his heart: his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords.

22 Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee: he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.

23 But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction: bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days; but I will trust in thee.

PSALM LVI.

David, praying to God in confidence of his word, complaineth of his enemies. 9 He professeth his confidence in God's word, and promisth to praise him.

To the chief Musician upon Jonatheh Rechokim, a Michtam of David, when the Philistines took him in Gath.

BE merciful unto me, O God: for man would swallow me up; he fighting daily oppresseth me.

2 Mine enemies would daily swallow me up: for they be many that fight against me, O thou Most High.

3 What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.

4 In God I will praise his word, in God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me.

5 Every day they wrest my words: all their thoughts are against me for evil.

6 They gather themselves together, they hide themselves, they mark my steps, when they wait for my soul.

7 Shall they escape by iniquity? in thine anger cast down the people, O God.

8 Thou tellest my wanderings: put thou my tears into thy bottle: are they not in thy book?

ously the difference between the type and antitype, and between the Jewish and Christian dispensations.

Toward the close, however, of this psalm, mingled with language which seems the result of aggravated and exasperated feelings, we have some sentiments full of piety and wisdom, from which we shall select the sixteenth verse. "Cast thy burden (or allotment) upon the Lord," &c.; on which we may remark, that whatever allotment we receive from God, whether of prosperity or adversity, it is our duty to refer it back to him: "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," and he will repay him; or if our lot be adverse, "he will sustain" under every burden, and "never suffer the righteous to be moved" from his foundation.

"His arm will well sustain

The children of his love;

The ground on which their safety stands

No earthly power can move."—Watts.

PSALM LVI. Ver. 1—13. Comfort of the promises amid trials.—The heavy and continued trials through which many of the Lord's servants have passed, should teach us to be si-

Ver. 18. From the battle (or conflict) that was against me.—Or, (as the LXX.) "from them that draw near to (fight) me."—For there were many with me.—Or rather, "Many (to fight) with me." See Ainsworth.

Ver. 19. Even he that abideth of old.—Ainsworth, "from antiquity." Boothroyd, "from eternity."—Because they have no changes, ("no reverses," &c.) therefore, &c.—That is, they suppose they also shall live for ever; or, at least that things will go on the same for ever. See 2 Pe. iii. 4.

Ver. 21. His words were drawn swords.—That is, weapons of destruction.

Ver. 23. Shall not live out half, &c.—I. e. they shall be cut off in the midst of their days. See Jer. xvii. 11.

PSALM LVI. Title.—Jonatheh rechokim. "The dumb dove in far (or distant) places." The late learned Editor of Calmet, from comparing this title with verse 6. of the psalm preceding, had a suspicion that it is here misplaced, and belonged originally to that psalm.

Ver. 2. Mine enemies.—"Spies." The same term is used in several other psalms.

Ver. 8. Put thou my tears in thy bottle.—[This is probably an allusion to an ancient custom, which we know long prevailed among the Greeks and Romans, of putting the tears which were shed for the death of any person into small phials, called lacrymatories or urna lacrymales, and offering them on the tomb of the deceased.]—Bagster.

9 When I cry unto thee, then shall mine enemies turn back: this I know; for <sup>k</sup> God is for me.

10 In God will I praise his word: in the LORD will I praise his word.

11 In God have I put my trust: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

12 Thy vows are upon me, O God: I will render praises unto thee.

13 For thou hast delivered my soul from death: wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling, that I may walk before God in the light of the living?

PSALM LVII.

David in prayer, fleeing unto God complaineth of his dangerous case. 7 He encourageth himself to praise God.

To the chief Musician, <sup>a</sup> Al-taschith, Michtam of David, when <sup>b</sup> he fled from Saul in the cave.

BE merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me: for my soul trusteth in thee: yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast.

2 I will cry unto God most high; unto God that performeth all things for me.

3 He shall send from heaven, and save me <sup>d</sup> from the reproach of him that would swallow me up. Selah. God shall send forth his mercy and his truth.

4 My soul is among lions: and I lie even among them that are set on fire, even the sons of men, whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue <sup>e</sup> a sharp sword.

5 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens; let thy glory be above all the earth.

6 They have prepared a net <sup>f</sup> for my steps; my soul is bowed down: they have digged a k Ro.8.31.

a or, Destroy not, A golden Psalm.

b 1 Sa.22.1. Ps.142, tide.

c Ps.63.7.

d or, he reproacheth

e Ps.22.2.

f Mt.7.2.

g or, prepared.

h Ps.108.1. 5.

a or, Destroy not, A golden Psalm of David.

b Ps.21.11.

c from the belly.

d Ro.3.13.

e according to the likeness of.

f or, asp.

g or, be the charmer never so cunning.

h Ex.15.15.

pit before me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves. Selah.

7 My heart is <sup>g</sup> fixed, O God, my heart is fixed: I will sing and give praise.

8 Awake up, my glory: awake, <sup>h</sup> psaltery and harp: I myself will awake early.

9 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people: I will sing unto thee among the nations.

10 For thy mercy is great unto the heavens and thy truth unto the clouds.

11 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

1 David reproveth wicked judges, 3 describeth the nature of the wicked, 6 devoteth them to God's judgments, 10 wherethe righteous shall rejoice.

To the chief Musician, <sup>a</sup> Al-taschith, Michtam of David.

DO ye indeed speak righteousness, O congregation? do ye judge uprightly, O ye sons of men?

2 Yea, in heart <sup>b</sup> ye work wickedness; ye weigh the violence of your hands in the earth.

3 The wicked are estranged from the womb: they go astray <sup>c</sup> as soon as they be born, speaking lies.

4 Their <sup>d</sup> poison is <sup>e</sup> like the poison of a serpent: they are like the deaf <sup>f</sup> adder that stoppeth her ear;

5 Which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, <sup>g</sup> charming never so wisely.

6 Break their teeth, O God, in their mouth: break out the great teeth of the young lions, O LORD.

7 Let them melt <sup>h</sup> away as waters which run continually: when he bendeth his bow to shoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces.

8 As a snail which melteth, let every one of lent and patient under our lighter afflictions. "We have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin." Our good words may indeed be wrested to an evil meaning, and our footsteps watched by those, who devise evil against us: but we are not in general endangered by furious assailants, who would swallow us up, and destroy us; or at least, those who would oppress us have their hands bound or otherwise employed. Yet are we often tempted to repine and despond under our lighter sorrows! For this we should check and condemn ourselves: and, under every disquieting fear, we should place our confidence in God, and pray more earnestly for his pardoning mercy. Meditation on the power of the Most High, engaged by his most gracious and faithful promises to his people, will encourage us to say with boldness, "The Lord is my Helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." The believer's soul, body, character, and interest, are all safe under the divine protection; and when he prays earnestly, his enemies will be driven back and disappointed. Men may for a time prosper in and by iniquity; but God in his anger will soon cast them down: and our only security lies in escaping from iniquity. The Lord graciously notes and orders the removals of his people: while they keep in the path of duty, they cannot be driven from his gracious presence; and their tears of godly sorrow, and those which are extorted by persecution or sympathy with the sufferings of others, will be reserved to be jewels in their crown of glory. Let us then be careful to discharge our own obligations.—General vows are upon us as Christians, which have been ratified at baptism and the Lord's supper; and we have made promises and engagements in seasons of trouble and distress. Let us conscientiously perform them when delivered; and then we may leave all the rest with the Lord: and if his grace have delivered our souls from the death of sin, he will deliver our feet from falling, and bring us to heaven, to walk before him for ever "in the light of the living" in the bright world of perfect knowledge, love, purity, and felicity.—T. Scott.

PSALM LVII. Ver. 1—11. David again implores protection from his enemies, under the shadow of the Almighty's wings.—This is a very ancient image, as may be seen in the Egyptian hieroglyphics, and in classic authors; but is by none so beautifully employed as by the sacred writers. We meet with it first in the narrative of the creation, when the Spirit of God "brooded" upon the chaos, as a dove over her nest. (Gen. i. 2.) Again, Moses represents the Almighty as bearing up his people as an eagle doth her young upon her wings. (Deut. xxxii. 11, 12.) And the Psalmist here, and elsewhere, speaks of the divine Being under the same image, as spreading abroad his wings for the protection of his children from their enemies (Psalm xc. 1—4.)

The occasion of this psalm appears to have been David's conscientiously refraining from doing any injury to Saul, when he had him wholly in his power: (1 Sam. xxiv.) An act of honour and generosity this, which, for the moment, appears to have affected the obdurate heart of Saul; but not to have broken the confederacy of his enemies against him. These enemies were men of fierce and fiery dispositions, setting all on fire around them, and being themselves set on fire of hell. (See James iii. 6.) As to himself, he declares his resolution fixed to glorify God, both with heart and tongue, which he calls his glory. "The tongue then becomes the glory of man, (says Bishop Horne,) when it is employed in setting forth the glory of God."

PSALM LVIII. Ver. 1—11. The depravity of the wicked, and especially of the men that had conspired against the Psalmist's life.—This and the next psalm, according to Bishop Patrick, precede the foregoing in date; and their order appears to

Ver. 13. Thou hast delivered.—The event here referred to, will be found 1 Sam. xix. 3, &c. We omit this psalm for the same reason as we omitted the 54th. The first verses will be found in the psalm following; the last, in psalm cxvi. 8.

PSALM LVII. Title.—Al-taschith.—[This Psalm is supposed to have been called al-taschith, or, "destroy not," because David thus addressed one of his followers when about to kill Saul in the cave; and michtam, or "golden," because written, or worthy to be written in gold.]—Bagster. The two psalms following bear the same title.

Ver. 1. In the shadow of thy wings.—The hieroglyphic here referred to, is that of the winged globe in the front of their temples. The classical writers Æschylus and Euripides, have been referred to; but the image is so natural, that we believe it may be found in the poets of almost all countries.

Ver. 3. And save me.—Ainsworth and Horsley place a semicolon at me; and render the next line, "He hath or shall put to reproach them." &c.

Ver. 4. Are set on fire.—With rage and malice.

Ver. 7. Is fixed.—Ainsworth, "Firmly prepared."

Ver. 8. Awake early.—Literally, "I will awaken the morning," or dawn; highly poetical expression, which Milton and others have borrowed:

"Cheerily rouse the slumbering morn."—Bagster them pass away: like the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not see the sun.

9 Before your pots can feel the thorns, he shall take them away as i with a whirlwind, i both living, and in his wrath.

10 The righteous shall rejoice k when he seeth the vengeance: he i shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked.

11 So that a man shall say, Verily there is m a reward for the righteous: verily he is a God that judgeth n in the earth.

PSALM LIX.

1 David prayeth to be delivered from his enemies. 6 He complaineth of their cruelty. 8 He trusteth in God. 11 He prayeth against them. 16 He praiseth God.

To the chief Musician, "Al-taschith, Michtam of David; b when Saul sent, and they watched the house to kill him.

DELIVER c me from mine enemies, O my God: d defend me from them that rise up against me.

2 Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and save me from bloody e men.

3 For, lo, they lie in wait for my soul: the mighty are gathered against me; yet f for my transgression, nor for my sin, O LORD.

4 They run and prepare themselves without g fault: awake to h help me, and behold.

5 Thou, therefore, O LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel, awake to visit all the heathen: be not merciful to any wicked transgressors. Selah.

6 They return at evening: they make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city.

7 Behold, they belch out with their mouth: swords a are in their lips: for who, say they, doth hear?

8 But thou, O LORD, shalt laugh i at them; thou shalt have all the heathen in derision.

1 Pr. 10.25.

j as living

as wrath.

Re. 11.17,

18.

1 Ps. 63.23.

m fruit of,

Is. 3.10.

n Ps. 8.16.

a Ps. 57.12.

b Isa. 19.11,

&amp;c.

c Ps. 18.43.

d set me on high.

e Ps. 139.19.

f 1 Sa. 24.11,

17.

g meet.

h Pr. 12.18.

i Ps. 2.4.

j high place.

k Ps. 21.3.

l observers.

Ps. 56.2.

m Ge. 4.12,

15.

n Re. 9.6.

o Pr. 12.13.

p Ps. 46.10,

11.

p to eat.

Is. 65.13.

q or, if they be not satisfied,

then they will stay

all night.

r Ps. 35.5.

s Ps. 18.1.

t Ps. 50. title.

u or, a golden Psalm.

c 2 Sa. 8.3.

13.

1 Ch. 13.3

-12.

d Ps. 44.9.

e broken.

f Lu. 3.31, 32

Zec. 10.6.

9 Because of his strength will I wait upon thee: for God is my defence.

10 The God of my mercy shall prevent k me: God shall let me see my desire upon mine enemies.

11 Slay m them not, lest my people forget: scatter them by thy power; and bring them down, O LORD our shield.

12 For n the sin of their mouth and the words of their lips let them even be taken in their pride and for cursing and lying which they speak.

13 Consume them in wrath, consume them: that they may not be: and o let them know that God ruleth in Jacob upon the ends of the earth. Selah.

14 And at evening let them return; and let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city.

15 Let them wander up and down p for meat, and grudge if they be not satisfied.

16 But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the r morning: for thou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17 Unto s thee, O my strength, will I sing; for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

PSALM LX.

1 David, complaining to God of former judgment, 4 now, upon better hope, prayeth for deliverance. 6 Comforting himself in God's promises, he craveth that help whereto he trusteth.

To the chief Musician a upon Shushan-eduth, b Michtam of David, to teach; when c he strove with Aram-naharaim and with Aram-zobah, when Joab returned, and smote of Edom in the valley of salt twelve thousand.

O GOD, thou d hast cast us off, thou hast e scattered us, thou hast been displeased; O turn f thyself to us again.

be retrograde; the next being of earlier date than this, and this of earlier date than the preceding. The faction of Saul are here addressed as confederated to take away David's life—"Do ye, indeed, speak righteousness, (or righteously,) O ye confederates?" and describes them, from their natural depravity and depraved habits, as having their minds full of the poison of serpents, and the ferocity of lions; and not to be won upon by any acts of generosity or kindness, as was sufficiently evident, from the fact referred to in the preceding psalm, when the psalmist not only refused to injure, but resolutely protected Saul's life. Saul, for the moment, appears to have been charmed by it: but they were like deaf adders, who could not be charmed. (See 1 Sam. xxiv. 16-22.)

David then predicts their ruin in language, which, though imprecatory in its form, should rather be considered as prophetic. To break the teeth of a lion, is to deprive him of the power of destruction; and the melting of an army, is its defeat and being scattered. The metaphor of the pot and the thorns is an evident allusion to the manners of the Arabs, who, when they want to cook their food, collect bushes and brambles, living or dead, (that is, green or dry,) to make a blaze; but, says he, "before your pots can feel the thorns," (that is, before they can be sensibly affected with heat,) they shall be melted like the snow, or swept away as with a whirlwind, in a manner indicative of the power which does it; so that men shall say, "Verily, there is a reward for the righteous."

"Thus shall the judgment of the Lord, Safety and joy to saints afford;

And all that hear shall join and say,

'Sure there's a God that reigns on high,

A God that hears his children cry,

And under sufferings well repay.'"—Watts.

PSALM LIX. Ver. 1-17. Prayer the means of comfort.—

Ver. 9. Both living, and in his wrath.—See Margin; but some critics apply the phrase to the fuel here referred to, both green and dry. So Bishops Patrick and Lancelotti.

Ver. 11. A reward of the righteous.—Reward is the fruit of obedience.

PSALM LIX. Title.—[The seven poems of the celebrated Arabian poets who flourished before the time of Mohammed, called Maalakat from being suspended on the walls of the temple of Mecca, were also called Madhabat, "golden," because they were written in letters of gold on the Papyrus; and probably for the same reason the six poems of David were called michtam, or golden.]—Bassier.

Ver. 4. They run and prepare.—That is, to attack me (David) without my fault; i.e. without any just provocation.

Ver. 5. To any wicked transgressors.—Those were probably Canaanitish slaves, who had been previously devoted to destruction; but having been spared in war, were incorporated into Saul's army against David, as more likely to find him out, and more ready to destroy him, than his own countrymen. Bishop Horne, however, renders this verse in the future tense, instead of the imperative: "Thou wilt not be merciful." &c.

Ver. 6 and 14. Go round about the city.—It should be recollected, that in the

In this psalm "David expresses what his thoughts and affections were, when Saul sent officers to watch his house all night, and to slay him when he came out of his doors in the morning." Bishop Patrick.—His triumphant confidence in God in this extreme danger, and his anticipated fervour of gratitude, for the deliverance which he fully expected, show a peculiarly pious and happy state of mind, in such trying circumstances.

When we suffer for well-doing, we are conformed to our Redeemer, and have an evidence of our acceptance with God. We should indeed greatly fear suffering as "evil-doers, or busybodies in other men's matters;" but we ought not to be either afraid or ashamed of the hatred of the workers of iniquity, when "they prepare themselves, and are gathered together against us without our fault." They may be both mighty and bloody; their words may be as swords, and their actions may correspond with them: but the Lord will awake, and behold, and hasten to the help of his servants.—In vain did Saul and his mighty men seek the life of David: they could not prevent his advancement to the throne, but they occasioned their own ignominy and ruin. Nor could the rulers of the Jews, by crucifying Jesus, prevent his glorification but they thus hastened their own destruction: and neither tempters nor persecutors can succeed any better in lying in wait for the soul of the believer. The serpent and his seed bruised the heel of the Redeemer, but he will crush their head. "Because of the LORD's strength" his servants may then confidently wait on him: and if we trust in him as the God of our mercy, and have recourse to him in every temptation and tribulation, he will assuredly be our Defence against all those who rise up against us.—T. Scott.

PSALM LX. Ver. 1-12. David rejoices in the prospect of victory over all his enemies.—The history here referred to has East does are not domesticated as with us, but surround the walls of a town, where they howl, and watch for prey.

Ver. 7. They belch out.—Ainworth, "utter;" pour out, like a fountain. See Jer. vi. 7.

Ver. 9. His strength.—[Instead of yazo, "his strength," fourteen MSS. and all the ancient versions, read uzzee, "my strength." O my Strength, I will wait upon thee.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Consume them.—The Hebrew literally means, to Anish, bring to an end; namely, the banditti. The Psalmist, ver. 11, prays, "Slay them not;" i.e. take not away their lives as individuals; but put an end to the conspiracy. Bishops Horne and Horsley, who suppose the psalmist to speak in the person of the Messiah, apply this to the dispersion of the Jews, and the overthrow of their establishment, not observing that they are twice said (verses 5 and 8) to be heathen. See on ver. 5. for meat.—See Margin. Hervey. (still better) "to devour."—And grudge, &c.—See Margin. So the elegant writer just cited.

PSALM LX. Title.—Shushan-eduth. These words literally mean, "The liv of the testimony;" but what that means, it seems in vain to conjecture;

2 Thou hast made the earth to tremble; thou hast broken it: heal the breaches thereof; for it shaketh.

3 Thou hast showed thy people hard things: thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment.

4 Thou hast given a banner to them that feared thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth. Selah.

5 That thy beloved may be delivered; save with thy right hand, and hear me.

6 God hath spoken in his holiness; I will rejoice, I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth.

7 Gilead is mine, and Manasseh is mine; Ephraim also is the strength of my head; Judah is my lawgiver;

8 Moab is my wash-pot; over Edom will I cast out my shoe: Philistia, triumph thou because of me.

9 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

10 Will not thou, O God, which hadst cast us off? and thou, O God, which didst not go out with our armies?

11 Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man.

12 Through God we shall do valiantly: for ne it is that shall tread down our enemies.

been already considered on 2 Sam. chap. viii. to which we must refer our readers. The enemies here named, are the Syrians of Mesopotamia and of Zobah, and the Edomites in the valley of salt, so called probably from its salt-pits. The victory here ascribed to Joab, is, in the passage above referred to, ascribed to David, and in 1 Chron. xviii. 12. to Abishai, Joab's brother. The fact, as Ainsworth remarks, appears to have been, that Abishai began the attack and slew 6000, Joab followed and slew 12,000; and both being David's generals, of course they contributed to the increase of David's fame, especially as he was himself a military prince, and the subdued powers would naturally refer their defeat to him.

It should be recollected, that Israel had been in a low state during the reign of Saul, (1 Sam. xiii. 19–22.) to which they were probably again reduced, by his defeat and death, about sixteen or seventeen years before these victories; and that David had not been more than ten years upon the throne of all Israel. Even more recently, as Michaelis (in Louth) observes, some unfortunate circumstances must have occurred that are not recorded, from the Idumeans having penetrated so far as the valley of salt, which he considers not more than a day's journey from Jerusalem. These victories, however, completely changed the aspect of affairs; but this animated song of triumph seems to have been written prior to the victories, and to have been rather the language of faith in their anticipation, than of thanksgiving afterwards. What is said of the earth, or the land of Israel (as the Chaldee explains it) being made to tremble, must be taken metaphorically, for the convulsions into which the country had been thrown by the threats and invasions of the enemy.

Of the places here mentioned, Shechem was near Samaria; the valley of Succoth, the land of Gilead, &c. were on the east side of Jordan. These places had probably been invaded by their enemies, lying in the most exposed parts of the country; of them he not only anticipates the recovery, but also the subjugation (in part at least) of Moab, Edom, and Philistia, as in the sequel came to pass; but the epithets here made use of may require some explanation. The mention of Gilead and Manasseh intimates that all Israel had now submitted to David's government. Ephraim, as a powerful and warlike tribe, mainly contributed to the strength of his kingdom; it was his strength or horn. Judah being the tribe of David, who was now king, may be said to have given law to the whole country, and therefore is called the lawgiver. Moab having fallen into a state of degrading idolatry, is compared to a vessel for washing the feet—a "wash-pot." Casting the shoe over Edom was from the lily being a six-leaved flower, it has been supposed that the word may also mean a six-stringed instrument.—Aram-naharaim: the Syrians of Mesopotamia.—Aram-zobah: the Syrians of Zobah.

Ver. 3. Hard things.—That is, severe trials.—The wine of astonishment.—By this we understand that they were stupefied with these afflictions, like persons stupefied with wine; perhaps wine whose effects had been increased with deleterious drugs. (See Isa. li. 17–23.)

Ver. 4. Given a banner.—A pledge of safety and protection. See Orient. Lit. No. 772.

Ver. 6. God hath spoken in his holiness.—Or, by his holy one, (as Bishop Horne), i. e. by his holy oracle. This seems to refer to the promise of dividing the whole land of Canaan to Israel, Josh. i. 6. Psalm lxxxix. 35.—I will divide, &c.—Dividing and meting out denote possession; being an allusion to the dividing and measuring out of land. The sense of the following verses, stripped of metaphor, appears the following: "Gilead and Manasseh

g 2 Ch. 7. 14.
Je. 30. 17.
h Ps. 71. 20.
i Is. 51. 17, 22

j Ca. 2. 4.
k Ps. 108. 6, &c.

l or, over me: (by an irony)

m city of strength.

n exaltation

o Is. 63. 3.

a Is. 54. 11.

b Pr. 18. 10.

c or, make my refuge

d shall add days to the days of the king.

e generation and generation.

f Ps. 43. 3.

g 1 Ch. 25. 1, 3.

h or, only.

i Is. 51. 1.

1 David fleeth to God upon his former experience. 4 He voweth perpetual service to him, because of his promises.

To the chief Musician upon Neginah. A Psalm of David.

HEAR my cry, O God; attend unto my prayer.

2 From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher than I.

3 For thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy.

4 I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever: I will trust in the covert of thy wings. Selah.

5 For thou, O God, hast heard my vows: thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name.

6 Thou wilt prolong the king's life: and his years as many generations.

7 He shall abide before God for ever: O prepare mercy and truth, which may preserve him.

8 So will I sing praise unto thy name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows.

PSALM LXII.

1 David, professing his confidence in God, discourageth his enemies. 5 In the same confidence he encourageth the golly. 9 No trust is to be put in worldly things. 11 Power and mercy belong to God.

To the chief Musician, to a Jeduthun, A Psalm of David.

TRULY my soul waiteth upon God: from him cometh my salvation.

an ancient form of taking possession. (See Ruth iv. 7.) But the apostrophe to Philistia is the language of irony, and of defiance: "Philistia, triumph thou over me!" as if he had said, "Thou hast been used to insult and triumph over me; but circumstances are now reversed, and it is my turn to shout and triumph over thee." (See Psalm cviii. 9.)

Such seems the literal import of this interesting psalm; but we must not conclude here. As David was a type of Christ, so was the Jewish of the Christian church; and this psalm has evidently a prospective view to the future triumphs of Messiah, when Jews and Gentiles shall be united under his government, and there shall be but "one Lord, and his name one, in all the earth." (Zech. xiv. 9.)

PSALM LXI. Ver. 1–8. The psalmist triumphs in the divine protection.—This psalm is generally, and naturally, supposed to have been written by David, while excluded from the metropolis by Absalom. When driven from place to place, and from rock to rock for shelter, he prays to be directed to a rock higher than he could reach; that is, that the Lord himself would be his rock, his shelter, and his tower. "Such," (says he,) thou hast been, therefore will I return to thy tabernacle, to pay the vows offered in my distress, and there abide for ever." Such expressions can scarcely be restrained to a frail and mortal life, which seldom exceeds the bounds of seventy years, but must necessarily include a reference to another life, another tabernacle, another king, of whom he considered himself a type only: a king, whose life should endure to many generations, and of whose dominion there should be no end. So the Chaldee applies it to the king Messiah.

"O lead me to the rock
That's high above my head;
And make the covert of thy wings,
My shelter and my shade."—Watts.

PSALM LXII. Ver. 1–12. David encourages himself in the divine power and mercy.—The occasion of this psalm is unknown; but it was evidently written when he was in a happy frame of mind, trusting in God, and encouraging others to trust in him also;—to wait in silence, and with patience, the fulfilment of his promises, and to pour out their hearts in prayer before him. The doctrines of the latter part of the psalm are chiefly two: 1. The folly and danger of putting our trust in man. "Men of low degree are vanity!" they have no stability "Men of high degree are a lie," which is still worse: they have no regard to truth; no fidelity to their engagements. These assertions are, however, to be understood generally, and not without exception; for there are good men, though but few of have submitted to me; Ephraim furnishes me with valiant men; and Judah with men of prudence and wisdom. I will reduce the Moabites to servitude; I will triumph over the Edomites, and make them slaves; and the Philistines shall add to my triumph."—Bagster.

Ver. 9. The strong city.—i. e. the fortified city; probably referring either to Rabbah, 2 Sam. xii. 26, &c. or to Bosrah, Isa. lxiii. 1, &c.

PSALM LXI. Title.—Upon Neginah, or Neginah; the singular of Neginah, title of Ps. iv., vi., &c.

Ver. 2. Higher than I.—That is, than I can climb to.—Ainsworth.

Ver. 6. Thou wilt prolong, &c.—See margin. His years (shall be) as generation and generation.

PSALM LXII. Title.—To Jeduthun. See title Ps. xxxix.

Ver. 1. Truly my soul waiteth.—That is, in patient silence. So the Hebrew implies, as marked in the margin.

2 He only is my rock and my salvation; he is my <sup>d</sup> defence; I shall not be <sup>e</sup> greatly moved.
3 How long will ye imagine mischief against a man? ye shall be slain all of you: as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence.

4 They only consult to cast him down from his excellency: they delight in lies: they bless with their mouth, but they curse <sup>f</sup> inwardly. Selah.

5 My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him.

6 He only is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence; I shall not be moved.

7 In God is my salvation and my glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God.

8 Trust in him at all times; ye people, pour <sup>g</sup> out your heart before him: God is a refuge for us. Selah.

9 Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance, they are <sup>h</sup> altogether lighter than vanity.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.

11 God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this; that <sup>i</sup> power <sup>j</sup> belongeth unto God.

12 Also unto thee, O LORD, belongeth mercy: for <sup>k</sup> thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM LXIII.

1 David's thirst for God. 2 His manner of blessing God. 3 His confidence of his enemies' destruction, and his own safety.

A Psalm of David, <sup>a</sup> when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early <sup>b</sup> will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth <sup>c</sup> for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and <sup>d</sup> thirsty land, <sup>e</sup> where no water is;

2 To see <sup>f</sup> thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the <sup>g</sup> sanctuary.

3 Because thy loving-kindness is <sup>h</sup> better than life, my lips shall praise thee.

4 Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.

them, in every walk of life. The best of men must not be put in the place of God: they are weak, and may be deceived or overcome; they are mortal, and must shortly die. To be laid in the balance, therefore, against God, they are, even all taken together, vanity, yea, "lighter than vanity," or nothing. 2. Our salvation is the result of the union and harmony of the divine perfections. It is, indeed, an exertion of divine power, but not of power only; we are saved by sovereign mercy, which predominates in all the divine conduct toward mankind, even in the final judgment; for though every man shall be "rewarded according to his works," mercy shall measure out that reward to the righteous; and, in the present life at least, mercy is mingled with all the sufferings of the wicked.

"For sovereign power reigns not alone,
Grace is a partner of the throne:
Thy grace and justice, mighty Lord, Shall well divide our last reward."—Watts.

PSALM LXIII. Ver. 1—11. The blessedness of communion with God in his house.—This psalm appears to have been penned by David, while in the wilderness either of Hareth or of Ziph, (1 Sam. xxii. 5; xxiii. 14.) both which were within the tribe of Judah. To the drought and barrenness of this spot, producing scarcely any vegetation, the psalmist compares his own mind, while at a distance from the ordinances of religion; those ordinances, and the consolations enjoyed in them, he likens to the fountain and the stream whereby we are occasionally refreshed. The provisions of God's house, meagre as they appear to worldly minds, are marrow and fatness to all those who have a spiritual appetite: and the moral beauties there exhibited, though invisible to carnal eyes, are displays of the divine power and glory. It is on those accounts that the d high place

e Ps. 37. 24.

f in their inward parts.

g 1 Sa. 1. 15.

h or, alike.

i or, strength.

j Re. 19. 1.

k 2 Co. 5. 10.

l 1 Sa. 22. 5.

m 23. 14. 16.

n Ps. 8. 17.

o Ca. 3. 1. 3.

p Ps. 42. 2.

q Jn. 7. 37.

r weary.

s without soaker.

t Is. 41. 17.

u Ps. 27. 4.

v Ps. 84. 2, 11.

w Is. 60. 13.

x Ps. 30. 5.

y 1 Jn. 3. 2.

z

i Ca. 1. 4.

j fatness.

k Ca. 5. 2.

l Ps. 18. 35.

m make him run and like water by the hands of the sword.

n Ca. 2. 15.

o Is. 65. 16.

p Ge. 49. 6.

q Je. 9. 3.

r Pr. 1. 11. 13.

s or, speech.

t to hide.

u or, we are consumed by that which they have thoroughly searched.

v a search searched.

w their wound shall be.

5 My soul shall be satisfied <sup>a</sup> as with <sup>b</sup> marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:

6 When I remember thee upon <sup>c</sup> my bed, and meditate on thee in the night watches.

7 Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.

8 My soul followeth hard after thee: thy <sup>d</sup> right hand upholdeth me.

9 But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.

10 They shall <sup>e</sup> fall by the sword: they shall be a portion for <sup>f</sup> foxes.

11 But the king shall rejoice in God; every one that sweareth <sup>g</sup> by him shall glory: but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM LXIV.

1 David prayeth for deliverance, complaining of his enemies. 7 He promiseth himself to see such an evident destruction of his enemies, as the righteous shall rejoice at it.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

HEAR my voice, O God, in my prayer:

2 Hide me from the secret counsel <sup>a</sup> of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:

3 Who <sup>b</sup> whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words:

4 That they may shoot in secret at the perfect: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.

5 They <sup>c</sup> encourage themselves in an evil <sup>d</sup> matter: they commune <sup>e</sup> of laying snares privily; they say, Who shall see them?

6 They search out iniquities; <sup>f</sup> they accomplish <sup>g</sup> a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.

7 But God shall shoot <sup>h</sup> at them with an arrow; suddenly <sup>i</sup> shall they be wounded.

8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: all that see them shall flee away.

9 And all men shall fear, and shall declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.

souls of believers cling to their great Benefactor and Protector, whose "right hand upholdeth them."

"The king," that is, the royal author of the psalm, "shall rejoice in God," as the great object of his dependance and his hope: "Every one that sweareth by him, (i. e. the true God,) shall glory." To swear by or in the name of Jehovah, was to swear fealty or allegiance to him: it was an act of worship, distinguishing Israelites from idolaters. The former had an object of adoration, in which they might well glory; the latter served "lying vanities," and were therefore considered as liars, deceiving and deceived.

"I'll lift my hands, I'll raise my voice,
While I have breath to pray and praise;
This work shall make my heart rejoice,
And fill the remnant of my days."—Watts.

PSALM LXIV. Ver. 1—10. Confidence in God whilst in troubles.—The continuance or renewal of our trials will render the repetition of the same petitions requisite: but varied expressions may often be affecting and useful to ourselves and others. When faith in God triumphs over the fear of powerful and malicious men, our prayers are certainly heard, and final deliverance from the danger will in due time follow. The most blameless will be reviled, and the most useful hated, by such men as took secret counsel, or made open insurrection, against the perfect and divine Saviour; and whetted their tongues, and shot their sarcasms, against him, before they shed his blood. Such transgressors are often inwardly alarmed with the dread of consequences: but they encourage each other, till they flatter themselves with the hopes of impunity, and despise the all-seeing eye of God. Actuated by the most malignant enmity, with deep dissimulation "they search out iniqui-

Ver. 3. A tottering fence.—That is, a fence shoved against.—See Ainsworth.

Ver. 4. Curse inwardly.—I. e. from their hearts.—The Syriac and several MSS. read as, instead of in, (Ki) for Beth, differing less than the Roman C and G.) like the parallel text of Ps. cxliii. 6.

Ver. 8. My soul followeth, &c.—("My soul cleaveth (Heb. davekah) after Thee," which not only shows the diligence of the pursuit, and the nearness of the attainment, but the fast hold he had of the mercy of God.—Baxter.

Ver. 10. A portion for foxes.—The little wild foxes, called jackals, seem here intended, who often devour dead bodies, and sometimes the sick and helpless, even before death. They have been known to devour persons intoxicated, as they lay in the streets of Calcutta.—Orient. Lit. No. 773.

Ver. 11. Every one that sweareth by him shall glory.—That is, over those that swear by idols, who can neither help nor punish them; they therefore can give no pledge for their truth, and their mouths shall be stopped.

PSALM LXIV. Ver. 3. Bitter words.—Properly compared to arrows; we more usually call them daggers.

10 The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM LXV.

David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup> waiteth for thee, O God, in Zion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed.

2 O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come.

3 <sup>b</sup> Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt <sup>c</sup> purge them away.

4 Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we <sup>d</sup> shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.

5 By terrible <sup>e</sup> things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea:

6 Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being girded with power.

7 Which <sup>f</sup> stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people.

8 They also that dwell in the uttermost parts are afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to <sup>g</sup> rejoice.

9 Thou visitest the earth, and <sup>h</sup> waterest it: thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.

10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly: thou <sup>i</sup> settlest the furrows thereof:

a is silent. Ps. 62.1.

b words, or, matters of iniquities.

c 1 Jn. 1.7,9.

d Ps. 63.5.

e Ps. 45.4.

f Mat. 8.26.

g or, sing.

h or, after thou hast made it to desire rain.

i or, causeth rain to descend into.

j dissolvest

k of.

l are girded with joy.

m Is. 55.12.

n the earth.

o lie, or, yield

p yielded obedience. Ps. 81.15.

q Ex. 14.21.

r putteth.

thou <sup>j</sup> makest it soft with showers: thou blest the springing thereof.

11 Thou crownest the year <sup>k</sup> with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness.

12 They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills <sup>l</sup> rejoice on every side.

13 The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they <sup>m</sup> shout for joy, they also sing.

PSALM LXVI.

1 David exhorteth to praise God, 5 to observe his great works, 8 to bless him for his gracious benefits. 12 He voweth for himself religious service to God. 16 He declareth God's special goodness to himself.

To the chief Musician, A Song or Psalm.

MAKE a joyful noise unto God, all ye <sup>a</sup> lands: 2 Sing forth the honour of his name; make his praise glorious.

3 Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works! through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies <sup>b</sup> submit themselves unto thee.

4 All the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.

5 Come and see the works of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men.

6 He <sup>c</sup> turned the sea into dry land; they went through the flood on foot: there did we rejoice in him.

7 He ruleth by his power for ever; his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious <sup>d</sup> exalt themselves. Selah.

8 O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard:

9 Which <sup>e</sup> holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.

ties," that they may pretend zeal for God's glory, while they are murdering his people: but all their malice will rebound upon themselves, and God himself will fight against them and destroy them; and all who behold their doom, especially in a future state, will reverence his power and justice in it. But it is our wisdom now to fear because of the judgments of God, and to flee from the wrath to come; to declare and consider his works, and to shun the rock on which others have split. For the righteous alone can rejoice and trust in this holy Lord God: and all who uprightly rely on his mercy, and seek to know and do his will, shall glory in him as their Salvation and eternal Portion.—T. Scott.

PSALM LXV. Ver. 1—13. A Psalm of thanksgiving for the blessings of Providence.—"In this psalm God is praised for his providential government of the material world. It seems to have been a thanksgiving for the getting in of the fruits of the earth, and might be composed for the feast of Tabernacles. But, considering the manifest allusion to redemption, and the conversion of the Gentiles, in the former part of the psalm, "I cannot but think (says Bishop Horsey) that the blessings of the gospel are adumbrated under the image of genial showers and luxuriant crops." Taking the same view of the psalm with this learned prelate, we shall briefly consider it in reference to the bounties of divine providence, and the riches of divine grace.

The feast of Tabernacles was about the end of our September, when the fruits of the earth were gathered in, and the praises of Israel were waiting in silence (as it were) ready to burst from every grateful heart, in joyful shouts and songs, at the commencement of this festival. The Chaldee labours to give an idea of the extraordinary rejoicings by an hyperbolic expression: "The praise of angels is accounted as silence before thee, O God, whose majesty is in Zion;" being intended to intimate, that the shouts of Israel were far louder than the songs of angels.

The imagery employed in the following verses, is eminently sublime and beautiful. He girdeth together the mountains by his strength, as with a girdle: he stilleth the roarings of the sea, and the still louder ravings of the people. He maketh the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice. The former idea is amplified and illustrated in the nineteenth psalm, (verses 5 and 6,) and the latter alluded to in the eighth: no scenes in nature can be more beautiful, or more cheerful, than the rising of the morning sun, or the moon "walking in brightness" in the evening sky. The watering of the earth with showers, or with full and flowing streams, is another display of providential goodness; but the crowning mercy is the gathering in of the harvest. The expression (in ver. 11.) is peculiarly elegant and impressive, "His paths drop fatness." In other psalms, the Almighty is represented as walking or riding "upon the wings of the wind;" (Psalm xviii. 10; civ. 3:) the clouds, therefore, are his pathways, and the showers which distil from them enriching the earth, may be said poetically, to "drop fatness" upon it; and from the cheerful and useful vegetation which clothes the hills and valleys, they are said to become joyful, and even to "shout and sing."

But we must not confine our remarks to blessings merely temporal. The psalmist complains of iniquities prevailing against him, and prays to be delivered from them: he speaks of the blessedness of attending God's house, and considers communion with him as the highest privilege of man. The floods of heaven, and the rivers of earth, are both used to typify the gifts of the Holy Spirit and the diffusion of divine truth, (Acts ii. 17, 18,) which produces the same effect in the moral, as water in the natural world. This psalm may therefore be considered as no less rich in spiritual unction than in poetic beauty; and is especially interesting to us Gentiles, residing in "the ends of the earth," as our part of Europe was considered.

"Blest is the man whom thou shalt choose,
And give him kind access to thee;
Give him a place within thy house,
To taste thy love divinely free."—Watts.

PSALM LXVI. Ver. 1—20. A Psalm of praise and exhortation.—The author and occasion of this psalm are alike un-

PSALM LXV. Ver. 1. Praise waiteth.—The Heb. term means, to wait in silence, as slaves in the presence of their master.

Ver. 3. Purge them.—Expiate them: the allusion is to the cover of the mercy seat. See Ainsworth.

Ver. 5. By terrible things.—Ainsworth, "Fearful;" Horne, "wonderful" things.

Ver. 7. Which stilleth.—[Thou art sovereign over all the operations of sea and land. Earthquakes are under thy control: so are the flux and reflux of the sea; and all the storms and tempests by which it is agitated.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Thy tokens.—Or signs. [Thunder and lightning, storms and tempests, eclipses and meteors, tornadoes and earthquakes, are proofs to all that there is a Supreme Being, who is wonderful and terrible in his acts.]—Morning.—The rising and setting sun, the morning and evening twilight, the invariable succession of day and night, are all ordained by Thee, and contribute to the happiness and continuance of man and beast.]—Bagster.

16 For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us, as silver <sup>e</sup> is tried.

11 Thou broughtest us into the <sup>f</sup> net; thou laidst affliction upon our loins.

12 Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads; we went through fire and through water: but thou broughtest us out into a <sup>g</sup> wealthy place.

13 I will go into thy house with burnt-offerings: I will pay thee my vows, 14 Which my lips have <sup>h</sup> uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.

15 I will offer unto thee burnt-sacrifices of <sup>i</sup> fatlings, with the incense of rams; I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.

16 Come <sup>j</sup> and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what <sup>k</sup> he hath done for my soul.

17 I cried unto him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue.

18 If <sup>l</sup> I regard iniquity in my heart, the LORD will not hear <sup>m</sup> me:

19 But verily God hath heard <sup>n</sup> me; he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

20 Blessed <sup>o</sup> be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

PSALM LXVII.

A prayer for the enlargement of God's kingdom, 3 to the joy of the people, 6 and the increase of God's blessings.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, A Psalm or Song.

GOD <sup>a</sup> be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause <sup>b</sup> his face to shine <sup>c</sup> upon us. Selah.

2 That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all <sup>d</sup> nations.

3 Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.

4 O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and <sup>e</sup> govern the nations upon earth. Selah.

5 Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.

6 Then <sup>f</sup> shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us.

<sup>e</sup> Is 48.10.
<sup>f</sup> 1 Pe. 1.7.
<sup>g</sup> Ho. 7.12.
<sup>h</sup> moist.
<sup>i</sup> opened.
<sup>j</sup> marrow.
<sup>k</sup> Ps. 24.2.11
<sup>l</sup> k Pr. 23.9.
<sup>m</sup> a Nu. 6.25.
<sup>n</sup> b Ps. 4.6.
<sup>o</sup> c with.
<sup>p</sup> Mat. 58.19.
<sup>q</sup> e lead.
<sup>r</sup> 1 Le. 26.4.
<sup>s</sup> Eze. 34.27.
<sup>t</sup> Ho. 2.21.
<sup>u</sup> 22.

<sup>v</sup> g Ps. 22.27.
<sup>w</sup> a Nu. 10.35.
<sup>x</sup> Is 33.3.
<sup>y</sup> b from his face.
<sup>z</sup> c Ho. 13.3.
<sup>aa</sup> d Mi. 1.4.
<sup>ab</sup> e 1 Th. 5.16.
<sup>ac</sup> f rejoice with gladness.
<sup>ad</sup> g Je. 49.11.
<sup>ae</sup> h a house.
<sup>af</sup> i Ps. 107.10.
<sup>ag</sup> j Hab. 3.13.
<sup>ah</sup> k Ex. 19.16.
<sup>ai</sup> l shake out.
<sup>aj</sup> m De. 11.11.
<sup>ak</sup> n 14.
<sup>al</sup> o Mat. 11.5.
<sup>am</sup> p army.
<sup>an</sup> q did flee, did flee.
<sup>ao</sup> r Ps. 81.6.

7 God shall bless us; and all <sup>a</sup> the ends of the earth shall fear him.

PSALM LXVIII.

1 A prayer at the removing of the ark. 4 An exhortation to praise God for his mercies, 7 for his cure of the church, 19 for his great works.

To the chief Musician, a Psalm or Song of David.

LET <sup>a</sup> God arise, let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him flee <sup>b</sup> before him.

2 As <sup>c</sup> smoke is driven away, so drive them away: as wax <sup>d</sup> melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish in the presence of God.

3 But let the righteous be glad; let them rejoice <sup>e</sup> before God: yea, let them <sup>f</sup> exceedingly rejoice.

4 Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH, and rejoice before him.

5 A father of the <sup>g</sup> fatherless, and a judge of the widows, <sup>h</sup> is God in his holy habitation.

6 God setteth the solitary in <sup>i</sup> families: he bringeth out those which are bound with chains: but the rebellious dwell in a dry land.

7 O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou didst march through the wilderness; Selah:

8 The earth <sup>j</sup> shook, the heavens also dropped at the presence of God: even Sinai <sup>k</sup> itself was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel.

9 Thou, O God, didst <sup>l</sup> send a plentiful <sup>m</sup> rain, whereby thou didst <sup>n</sup> confirm thine inheritance, when it was weary.

10 Thy congregation hath dwelt therein: thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the <sup>o</sup> poor.

11 The LORD gave the word: great was the <sup>p</sup> company of those that published it.

12 Kings of armies <sup>q</sup> did flee apace: and she that tarried at home divided the spoil.

13 Though ye have lien among the <sup>r</sup> pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered known. Bishop Patrick supposes it to have been composed by David after some great providential deliverance, for which he promises to offer numerous sacrifices; and the latter part of the psalm inclines us to this opinion, though Calmet and Dr. Gray refer it to the period of the building of the second temple. The former part of the psalm relates to the power and goodness of God in delivering his people Israel; and the memorable passage of the Red sea is distinctly and pointedly alluded to: but the latter relates to the psalmist's own experience, who calls upon all true Israelites to hear what God had done individually for himself. The closing sentiment merits our particular attention. God heareth not the prayers of hypocrites. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me," says the psalmist; but he has heard me, and therefore do I not so regard it. On this, we shall only add the beautiful comment of a pious poet.

"Throughout mankind, the Christian kind at least,
There dwells a consciousness in every breast,
That fully ends where genuine hope begins,
And he that finds his heaven must lose his sins."—Cowper.

PSALM LXVII. Ver. 1-7. A short Psalm of thanksgiving.—This short but sweet psalm, is an echo to the blessing which the priests were taught to pronounce upon the people of Israel

PSALM LXVI. Ver. 10. Proved us.—[This is a metaphor taken from melting and refining metals: afflictions and trials of various kinds are represented as a furnace where ore is melted, and a crucible where it is refined. And this metaphor is especially used to represent cases where there is a doubt concerning the purity of the metal, the quantity of alloy, or even the nature or kind of metal subjected to the trial. So God is said to "try the Israelites that he might know what is in them; and whether they would keep his testimonies;" and then, according to the issue, his conduct towards them would appear to be founded on reason and justice.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. A wealthy place.—That is, a rich and fruitful soil.

Ver. 15. Burnt-offerings of fatlings.—Ainsworth renders this, "Marrowed (or fat) rams, with incense." So Dr. Boothroyd.

Ver. 18. Iniquity.—[If I have seen, race thee, iniquity in my heart,—"if I have known it was there, and encouraged it,—"if I pretended to be what I was not,—if I loved iniquity, while I professed to pray and be sorry for my sin,—"then the Lord would not have heard me.""]—Bagster.

PSALM LXVII. Ver. 2. Saving health.—"Salvation." Verses 3 and 5. Let the people praise thee—[is the chorus of the psalm. PSALM LXVIII. Ver. 4. Extol him.—[Or, as Symmachus, Jerome, Bishop Lath, Merrick, and others render, "Prepare the way for him who rideth through the deserts:" i. e. who rode through the wilderness on the cherubim; alluding to the passage of the ark.]—Bagster. Dr. Boothroyd observes, that this is now admitted to be the true sense of the word Guarabab. So Bishops at the close of the morning service, and which has been already noticed by us in Numb. vi. 24-26. From the concluding verses, we may, in addition, draw the following important doctrines: 1. That gratitude for mercies received, either by a nation or individuals, is the way to obtain farther blessings. To bless God for mercies received is the surest way to multiply them. 2. That the blessing of God, if rightly understood, will lead to the fear of God, and is, indeed, absolutely necessary to the spread of true religion. Men plough and sow utterly in vain, unless God smiles upon their endeavours: and so is it in religion: neither the earth itself, nor the heart of man, will bring forth any thing good, unless God cause his face to shine upon us. Those who duly appreciate the mercies which they enjoy, will be anxious that others should partake with them. Most of the psalms which speak of the blessings of the gospel, put in a wish or a prayer for the conversion of the heathen, that "all the ends of the earth" may know and fear the God of Israel.

PSALM LXVIII. Ver. 1-35. The removal of the ark, as typical of the ascension of Messiah.—This psalm opens with the words pronounced by Moses, (and probably echoed by the priests,) upon the removal of the ark in the wilderness, (Numb. x. 35.) whence it is reasonably concluded that it was composed on some such occasion: Bishop Horne thinks, on the re-

Loveth and Horsley; Drs. Kennicott, Chandler, and others.—Jah.—[Jah, is an abbreviation of Jehovah, and signifies self-existence.—He who derives his being from none, but gives being to all.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Thou didst send.—i. e. from the clouds.—A plentiful rain.—Ainsworth, "A rain of liberalities." This is understood of the manna in the wilderness, which is said to have been rained down from heaven. Exod. xvi. 4. Psalm lxxviii. 24.

Ver. 10. Congregation.—[Or, "Thy living creatures:" probably a reference to the immense number of quails which were miraculously brought to the camp of the Israelites, and, in a manner, dwelt around it.]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Compare.—[The original word is feminine, and is supposed to refer to a chorus of women, who, on occasions of victory, published the glad tidings. Compare 1 Sam. xviii. 6, 7.]

Ver. 12. Kings of armies.—Rather, "Kings (and) armies."—Did flee apace.—Bishop Lath supposes this verse to be the chorus which they sung: and Dr. Chandler adds the verse following.

Ver. 13. Though ye have lien among the pots.—[That is, probably, "Though ye have laboured and lain down between the brick-kilns in Egypt—a poor, enslaved, and oppressed people, yet ye shall gradually rise to dignity, prosperity, and splendour; as a dove, which has been defiled with dirt, disordered, and dejected, by washing herself in a running stream and trimming her plumage, gradually recovers the serenity of her disposition, the purity of her colour, and the richness and varied elegance of her appearance."—Bagster.

with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

14 When <sup>a</sup> the Almighty scattered kings <sup>b</sup> in it, it was white as snow in Salmon.

15 The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan; a high hill as the hill of Bashan.

16 Why leap ye, ye high hills? <sup>a</sup> this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in; yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever.

17 The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even <sup>a</sup> thousands <sup>a</sup> of angels: the LORD is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place.

18 Thou <sup>a</sup> hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive: thou <sup>a</sup> hast received gifts <sup>a</sup> for men; yea, for the rebellious <sup>a</sup> also, that the LORD God might dwell <sup>a</sup> among them.

19 Blessed be the LORD, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation. Selah.

20 He that is our God is the God of salvation; and <sup>a</sup> unto God the LORD belong the issues from death.

21 But God shall wound <sup>a</sup> the head of his enemies, and the hairy scalp of such an one as goeth on still in his trespasses.

22 The LORD said, I will bring again from <sup>a</sup> Bashan, I will bring <sup>a</sup> my people again from the depths of the sea:

23 That thy foot may be <sup>a</sup> dipped in the blood <sup>a</sup> of thine enemies, and the tongue of thy dogs in the same.

24 They have seen thy goings, O God; even the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.

25 The singers <sup>a</sup> went before, the players on instruments followed after; among them were the damsels playing with timbrels.

s Jos.12.1, &c.
l or, for her, she was.
u 1 Ki.9.3.
v or, many thousands.
w De.33.2.
x Ac.1.2.9. Ep.4.5.
y Ac.2.4.23.
z in the man.
a 1 Co.6.9. 11.
1 Ti.1.13, 15.
b Re.21.3.
c De.32.39. Re.1.18.
d Hab.3.13.
e Nu.21.33.
f Ex.14.22.
g or, red.
h Is.63.1.6.
i Re.15.2.3.

j or, ye that are of.
k or, with their company.
l Is.40.31.
m or, the beauty of the raeels.
Je.51.32.
n or, he scattereth.
o Is.19.18. 25.
p Zep.3.10. Ac.3.27.
q give.
r or, heavens.
s Ex.15.11.
t Is.45.24.
u Ps.45. title.

26 Bless ye God in the congregations, even the LORD, <sup>a</sup> from the fountain of Israel.

27 There is little Benjamin with their ruler, the princes of Judah <sup>a</sup> and their council, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naph-tali.

28 Thy God hath commanded thy <sup>a</sup> strength: strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us.

29 Because of the temple at Jerusalem shall kings bring presents unto thee.

30 Rebuke <sup>a</sup> the company of spearmen, the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people, till every one submit himself with pieces of silver: <sup>a</sup> scatter thou the people that delight in war.

31 Princes shall come out of <sup>a</sup> Egypt; Ethiopia <sup>a</sup> shall soon stretch out her hands unto God.

32 Sing unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth; O sing praises unto the LORD; Selah:

33 To him that rideth upon the heavens of heavens, which were of old; lo, he doth <sup>a</sup> send out his voice, and that a mighty voice.

34 Ascribe ye strength unto God: his excellency is over Israel, and his strength is in the <sup>a</sup> clouds.

35 O God, thou art terrible <sup>a</sup> out of thy holy places: the God of Israel is he <sup>a</sup> that giveth strength and power unto his people. Blessed be God.

PSALM LXIX.

1 David complaineth of his affliction. 13 He prayeth for deliverance. 22 He devoteth his enemies to destruction. 30 He praiseth God with thanksgiving

To the chief Musician upon <sup>a</sup> Shoshannim, A

Psalm of David.

SAVE me, O God; for the waters are come in unto my soul.

moval of the ark to mount Zion: (as were probably several other psalms:—) but Dr. Boothroyd supposes, that it was on occasion of returning the ark to Zion after the conquests over the Ammonites. (See 2 Sam. xi. 11; xii. 31.) As every thing under that dispensation was typical or prophetic, it was very natural for the inspired author to look forward to Messiah's triumphant ascension to the Zion above, of whom the ark and the tabernacle and the temple itself were all figures; and so we find the psalm applied by St. Paul himself. (Ephes. iv. 8, 9.)

As a composition, Professor Michaelis, who thinks the character of David's poetry to be rather sweetness than sublimity, allows this psalm to be eminently sublime, though, (as Bishop Lenth's remarks,) not without considerable obscurity, which Burke has shown to be, in many instances, essential to the sublime.

Dr. S. Chandler divides this psalm into five parts, on each of which we shall offer a remark or two. Part I. (comprising ver. 1 to 6.) our author considers as sung, when the Levites took up the ark upon their shoulders, which was their way of carrying it. Part II. (ver. 7—14.) Dr. C. supposes to have commenced when the procession began with slow and solemn pace. Part III. (ver. 15—17.) he conceives to have been chanted immediately on their coming within sight of Zion:—"This is the hill which God hath desired to dwell in." The imagery in Parts II. and III. is certainly obscure. The general idea is supposed to be, the wonderful change in the situation of Israel, in being delivered from slavery in Egypt, and raised to pre-eminence in Zion, and adorned with all the beauty of the eastern dove; but for a particular explication of the metaphors, we must refer to our notes below: only on ver. 18. we may remark, that Zion is here resembled to Sinai, as the special residence of the divine presence, and a type of the future glories of Messiah. Part IV. (ver. 18—23.) celebrates the triumphant entrance of Messiah into his glory after his resurrection, loaded (as we may say.) not only with the trophies of his victory, but the blessings of salvation, to bestow upon penitent Jews and Gentiles, at the same time as ruin and destruction must necessarily overwhelm his enemies. In Part V. (from ver. 24 to the end,) we have a description of the procession. The ark went first, with the attendant priests; then followed the singers, and after them the players upon instruments, among whom we must conceive of David dancing in his ephod, with a portable harp in his hands, and the damsels playing with timbrels, the proper accompaniment of dancing. The concluding verses anticipate the triumphs of Jehovah and his Messiah among the Gentiles. The brutes that delight in war shall all be scattered, and ambassadors of peace from all countries shall seek the favour of the God of Israel. "Sing praises unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth: O sing praises unto the Lord!"

PSALM LXIX. Ver. 1—36. David complains of his afflictions, in which he was a type of the Messiah.—That several parts of this psalm belong to the Messiah, we doubt not, for they are quoted by him, and are applied to him in the New Testament; but we resist the principles, that because some parts are, the whole must therefore be so applied. Ainsworth hath made the important remark on our Lord's quoting the thirty-first Psalm, (ver. 5.) that, while he used the first member of the verse, which was applicable to his circumstances, he seems purposely to have omitted the following words as inapplicable. (See our exposition.) And we may add, that though our Lord has quoted and applied to himself many passages

Ver. 14. Kings in it, i. e. for Israel, his dove.—(White) as snow.—The original has not a word of whiteness. It reads literally, "When the Almighty scattered kings (and their armies) for her, (his people,) they (their enemies) were like (i. e. were scattered) as flakes of snow in Salmon." (or Zalmon), a high hill near Shechem, said by Ainsworth to be full of caves and glens, and would therefore attract the snow; not regularly, but in patches: thus lay the vanquished enemies of Israel on the field of battle. Compare Ps. cxlvii. 16.

Ver. 15. A high hill.—"A gibbous hill," says Parkhurst; and the LXX. render it, a cheese-like hill, which Dr. Shaw explains, by saying, that in the East, their cheeses are made like loaves.

Ver. 16. Why leap ye?—Dr. Chandler renders it, "Why look askance?" i. e. with jealous leer malign, as Milton expresses it. "Why are ye jealous?"

Ver. 17. The chariots of God.—That is, his angels. See 2 Kings vi. 16, 17. Heb. xii. 22.—Even thousands.—Literally, "duplicated thousands," or housans, upon thousands; meaning, a multitude innumerable.—(As in) Sinai.—Rather, "Sinai (its pomp and glory) is in the Holy Place."

Ver. 18. Captivity captive.—That is, many captives. See Judges v. 12.—Gifts for men.—Or, "unto men," Ephes. iv. 8, meaning Christ, in his human nature; but we prefer the former.—The rebellious also.—Meaning, that he has gifts for his captives, which shall convert them to himself.

Ver. 22. I will bring again from Bashan.—That is, I will perform for my people the like wonders that I did at Bashan, and in the Red sea.

Ver. 26. From the fountain of Israel.—See margin; i. e. true Israelites.

2 I sink in <sup>b</sup> deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into <sup>c</sup> deep waters, where the floods overflow me.

3 I am weary of my crying: my throat is dried: mine eyes fail while I wait for my God.

4 They <sup>d</sup> that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of my head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away.

5 O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my <sup>e</sup> sins are not hid from thee.

6 Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of hosts, be ashamed for my sake: let not those that seek thee be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel.

7 Because for thy sake I have borne reproach: shame hath covered my face.

8 I <sup>f</sup> am become a stranger unto my brethren, and an alien unto my mother's children.

9 For <sup>g</sup> the zeal of thy house hath eaten me up; and <sup>h</sup> the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.

10 When <sup>i</sup> I wept, and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.

11 I made sackcloth also my garment; and I became a proverb to them.

12 They that sit in the gate speak against me; and I was the song of the <sup>j</sup> drunkards.

13 But as for me, my prayer <sup>k</sup> is unto thee, O Lord, in an acceptable <sup>l</sup> time: O God, in the multitude of thy mercy <sup>m</sup> hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.

14 Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.

15 Let <sup>n</sup> not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and let not the pit <sup>o</sup> shut her mouth upon me.

16 Hear me, O Lord; for thy loving-kindness <sup>p</sup> is good: <sup>q</sup> turn unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

17 And hide not thy face from thy servant; for I am in trouble: <sup>r</sup> hear me speedily.

18 Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeem it: deliver me because of mine enemies.

19 Thou hast known my <sup>s</sup> reproach, and my b the mire of the depth.

c depth of.
d Jn.15.25.
e guiltiness.
f Jn.7.5.
g Jn.2.17.
h Ro.15.3.
i Ps.35.13, &c.
j drinkers of strong drink.
k Is.49.8.
l Co.6.2.
m He.5.7.
n Is.43.1,2.
o Ps.16.10.
p Ac.2.21, &c.
q Ps.86.16.
r Mt.7.19.
s make haste to hear me.
t Ps.22.6,7.
u He.12.2.

r Is.63.5.
s lament with me.
t Ma.14.50.
u Mat.27.34,28.
v Jn.19.29,30.
w Ro.11.8.10.
x 2Co.3.14.
y 1Th.2.15,16.
z psalm.
a Mat.23.38.
a there not be a dueller.
b Zec.1.15.
c Is.53.4.
d day wounded.
e or, punishment of iniquity.
f Mat.23.38.
g Re.13.8.
h or, meek h crepeath.
i Eze.36.35,36.
j Jn.14.23.
k Re.21.27.
l Ps.38. title.
m Ps.40.13.
n 17.
o my help.

shame, and my dishonour: mine adversaries are all before thee.

20 Reproach hath broken my heart; and I am full of heaviness: and I <sup>t</sup> looked for some to <sup>u</sup> take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none.

21 They <sup>v</sup> gave me also gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

22 Let <sup>w</sup> their table become a snare before them: and that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap.

23 Let their eyes be darkened, that they <sup>x</sup> see not; and make their loins continually to shake.

24 Pour out <sup>y</sup> thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

25 Let their <sup>z</sup> habitation be <sup>a</sup> desolate; and let <sup>b</sup> none dwell in their tents.

26 For <sup>c</sup> they persecute him whom thou hast <sup>d</sup> smitten; and they talk to the grief of <sup>e</sup> those whom thou hast wounded.

27 Add <sup>f</sup> iniquity unto their iniquity: and let them not come into thy righteousness.

28 Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written <sup>g</sup> with the righteous.

29 But I am poor and sorrowful: let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.

30 I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving.

31 This also shall please the Lord better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs.

32 The <sup>h</sup> humble shall see this, and be glad: and your heart shall live that seek God.

33 For the Lord heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners.

34 Let the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that <sup>i</sup> moveth therein.

35 For God will save Zion, and will build <sup>j</sup> the cities of Judah: that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.

36 The seed also of his servants shall inherit it: and they <sup>k</sup> that love his name shall dwell therein.

PSALM LXX.

David solliciteth God to the speedy destruction of the wicked, and preservation of the godly.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, to <sup>l</sup> bring to remembrance.

MAKE <sup>m</sup> haste, O God, to deliver me; make haste to <sup>n</sup> help me, O Lord.

The first verses are highly metaphorical, and resemble many other passages in this sacred book, in which troubles and dangers are compared to sinking in the mire and in the flood; and may certainly, without violence, be applied to Him who bore our griefs and carried our sorrows, and whose sympathies still take part in the afflictions of his people. It is true, that neither type nor antitype derived any assistance or support from his family connexions; but, on the contrary, both were reproached, deserted, and betrayed. On one occasion, at least, it seems they gave the psalmist sour wine, (or vinegar,) with some bitter ingredients, which he calls by the name of gall; a name probably used for any bitter or deleterious substance mixed with wine: (See Deut. xxix. 18;) and this we know was literally the case with our Lord himself in his last agonies. (See Matt. xxvii. 34.)

The following verses are, in the original, partly in the imperative and partly in the future tense; and should not, therefore,

then, but also among the more cold-hearted Israelites. His conduct in dancing before the ark, was one instance, (2 Sam. vi. 16.) and his religious observance of the sacred fasts, (ver. 10.) was probably another.

Ver. 21. Gall for my meat.—Bochart, from a comparison of this passage with John xix. 29. thinks that rosk is the same herb as the Evangelist calls hyssop: a species of which, growing in Judea, he proves from Isaac ben Orhman, an Arabian writer, to be so bitter as not to be eatable. Theophylact expressly tells us, that the hyssop was added as being deleterious, or poisonous; and Nonnus, in his paraphrase, says, "One gave the deadly acid mixed with hyssop."—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Their habitation—Or tower. But Gesenius explains it of a village of moveable tents, which seems to suit best the context.

Ver. 27. Add iniquity.—See margin. "To their iniquity." That is, suffer them to fill up the measure of their iniquity, until they are ripe for destruction.

Rom. i. 24, 28. Lord heareth.—Venema and others conjecture, that from this verse to the end of the Psalm was added in the time of the Babylonian captivity; while others, from the expressions occurring in these verses, without sufficient reason, refer the whole Psalm to that period.

Ver. 31. Make haste, &c.—[This Psalm is almost word for word the same as the five last verses of Ps. xl.; and it is written as a part of the succeeding Psalm in about 27 MSS. Both Psalms evidently appear to have been written by David during the rebellion of Absalom, and probably 't from the Psalms of David, we know of no one of them in which he either confesses or laments his sins, or implores mercy. We can by no means, therefore, allow the application to him of the fifth verse of the Psalm before us, in which David says, "O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my sins are not hid from thee." If we are questioned, "How shall we decide what parts are or are not applicable?" we reply, 1. We admit this of all which are so applied, by either Christ or the inspired writers: and, secondly, we object not to the accommodation of any passages not inconsistent with Messiah's character. The parts applied to him in this psalm, we shall notice as they occur, premising, however, that we find no passage wholly inapplicable to David, who probably composed it, as is suggested by Bishop Patrick, during Absalom's rebellion, when banished from Jerusalem; and during which period he seems to have fallen among false friends, who aggravated his afflictions by ill-treatment and reproaches.

Ver. 2. In deep mire.—Deep waters; Heb. "Waters of depth." See Psalm xl. 2.

Ver. 4. I restored that which I took not away.—May not this refer to David's surrendering up Jerusalem to the party of Absalom?

Ver. 5. Thou knowest my foolishness.—On this passage, Bishop Horsley adopts Dr. Kennicott's strange translation: "Thou knowest my plan of recovery;" but finding that rendering insupportable, he returns to the common version, and remarks, "Perhaps he, who although he was without sin, was yet tempted in all points like unto us: mist, in his humility, speak of the moment of the passions in his own mind, as weakness and fault, making confession of it before the father!" What then? was it a point of humility in the immaculate Saviour, to confess himself "in fault?" But see John xiv. 30.

Ver. 8. Alien.—[In the East, where polygamy prevails, the husband is a stern and unfeeling despot; his harem a group of trembling slaves; and the children, while they regard their common father with indifference or terror, cling to their own mother with the fondest affection, as the only parent in whom they feel an interest. Hence it greatly aggravated the affliction of David that he "had become an alien to his mother's children;" the enmity of the other children of his father, the children of his father's other wives, gave him less concern.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. The zeal of thy house.—David's zeal for the worship of Jehovah, probably exposed him to much obloquy and reproach, not only among the heathen, but also among the more cold-hearted Israelites. His conduct in dancing before the ark, was one instance, (2 Sam. vi. 16.) and his religious observance of the sacred fasts, (ver. 10.) was probably another.

Ver. 21. Gall for my meat.—Bochart, from a comparison of this passage with John xix. 29. thinks that rosk is the same herb as the Evangelist calls hyssop: a species of which, growing in Judea, he proves from Isaac ben Orhman, an Arabian writer, to be so bitter as not to be eatable. Theophylact expressly tells us, that the hyssop was added as being deleterious, or poisonous; and Nonnus, in his paraphrase, says, "One gave the deadly acid mixed with hyssop."—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Their habitation—Or tower. But Gesenius explains it of a village of moveable tents, which seems to suit best the context.

Ver. 27. Add iniquity.—See margin. "To their iniquity." That is, suffer them to fill up the measure of their iniquity, until they are ripe for destruction.

Rom. i. 24, 28. Lord heareth.—Venema and others conjecture, that from this verse to the end of the Psalm was added in the time of the Babylonian captivity; while others, from the expressions occurring in these verses, without sufficient reason, refer the whole Psalm to that period.

Ver. 31. Make haste, &c.—[This Psalm is almost word for word the same as the five last verses of Ps. xl.; and it is written as a part of the succeeding Psalm in about 27 MSS. Both Psalms evidently appear to have been written by David during the rebellion of Absalom, and probably 't

2 Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul: let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.

3 Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame that say, Aha, aha.

4 Let all those that seek <sup>d</sup> thee <sup>e</sup> rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.

5 But I am poor and needy: make haste unto me, O God: thou art my help and my deliverer; O Lord, make no tarrying.

PSALM LXXI.

<sup>1</sup> David, in confidence of faith, and experience of God's favour, prayeth both for himself, and against the enemies of his soul. <sup>14</sup> He promiseth constancy. <sup>17</sup> He prayeth for perseverance. <sup>19</sup> He praiseth God, and promiseth to do it cheerfully.

I <sup>a</sup> thee, O Lord, do I put my trust: let me never be put to confusion.

2 Deliver me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape: incline thine <sup>b</sup> ear unto me, and save me.

3 Be thou <sup>c</sup> my strong habitation, whereunto <sup>d</sup> I may continually resort: thou hast given commandment to save me; for thou art my rock and my fortress.

4 Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.

5 For thou art my <sup>e</sup> hope, O Lord God: thou art my trust from my youth.

6 By <sup>f</sup> thee have I been holden up from the womb: thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels: my <sup>g</sup> praise shall be continually of thee.

7 I am as a wonder <sup>h</sup> unto many; but thou art my strong refuge.

8 Let my mouth be filled with thy praise and with thy honour all the day.

9 Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth.

10 For mine enemies speak against me; and they that <sup>i</sup> lay wait for my soul take counsel <sup>j</sup> together, 11 Saying, God hath forsaken him: persecute and take him; for there is none to deliver him.

12 O God, be not far from me: O my God, make haste for my help.

13 Let them be confounded and consumed

d La. 3.25.
e Ps 77.12.
Is 61.10.
a Ps 31.1.3.
b Ps 34.15.
c to me for a rock & habitation.
d Pr 18.10.
e Je 17.7,17.
f Ps 22.9,10.
Is 45.3,4.
g Ps 143.1,2.
h Zec 3.8.
i watch, or, observe.
j 2 Sa. 17.1, &c.
Mat. 27.1.
k Ps 139.17.
l Is 45.24,25.
Ph 3.3.
m unto old age and gray hairs.
n Is 46.4.
o thine arm.
p Is 55.9.
q Ho 6.1,2.
r instrument of psaltery.
s Ps 150.3.
t Ps 92.3.
a, or, of, Ps 127. title.
b 1 Ki 1.36, 37.
c Is 11.2.5.
32.1,17.
d Ps 85.11.

that are adversaries to my soul; let them be covered with reproach and dishonour that seek my hurt.

14 But I will hope continually, and will yet praise thee more and more.

15 My mouth shall show forth thy righteousness and thy salvation all the day; for <sup>k</sup> I know not the numbers thereof.

16 I will go in the strength of the Lord God: I will make mention of thy <sup>l</sup> righteousness, even of thine only.

17 O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.

18 Now also <sup>m</sup> when I am old <sup>n</sup> and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not; until I have showed <sup>o</sup> thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come.

19 Thy righteousness also, O God, is very <sup>p</sup> high, who hast done great things: O God, who is like unto thee!

20 Thou, which hast showed me great and sore troubles, shalt <sup>q</sup> quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.

21 Thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.

22 I will also praise thee with the <sup>r</sup> <sup>s</sup> psaltery, even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the <sup>t</sup> harp, O thou Holy One of Israel.

23 My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and my soul, which thou hast re-deemed.

24 My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: for they are confounded, for they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.

PSALM LXXII.

<sup>1</sup> David, praying for Solomon, sheweth the goodness and glory of his, in type, and <sup>13</sup> the truth, of Christ's kingdom. <sup>15</sup> He blesseth God.

A Psalm <sup>a</sup> for Solomon.

GIVE <sup>b</sup> the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son.

2 He <sup>c</sup> shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment.

3 The mountains <sup>d</sup> shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness.

4 He shall judge the poor of the people, he be all translated as imperative, as by our translators. On the contrary, Dr. Hammond, Dr. Kennicott, Bishop Horne, and some other expositors, render the whole in the future, as prophetic; and in no other sense can they be applied to our Redeemer, who cursed nothing but a barren fig tree, and that only as a warning to his countrymen. (Matt. xxi. 19.) It is true that one verse, and one only, is here applied to the case of Judas, and that all the judgments here imprecated, were poured upon the Jews his murderers; but it was not by the prayer of the illustrious sufferer, who prayed only for their salvation. (Luke xxiii. 34.)

The zeal of David in behalf of God's house and worship, is alluded to by St. John as typical, on occasion of Christ's clearing the temple of the money changers, (John ii. 17;) and the misery of his betrayer and persecutors is evidently referred to by St. Peter, in speaking of the apostate Judas: but it would be going too far, to conclude that David had, in his own mind, any direct reference to either of these events. Such allusions were common among both Jewish and classical writers, and form some of the chief beauties of their composition: beside which, a style deeply imbued with scripture phraseology is one of the chief excellencies of either a Christian preacher or theological writer.

PSALM LXXI. Ver. 1—24. A Psalm of David in his old age, surrounded by enemies and infirmities.—"The psalmist, sorely distressed in his old age (see verses 9 and 18), by the rebellion of Absalom, which was his great affliction at that period of life, prayeth for divine assistance<sup>1</sup> and consolation; pleading God's gracious promise, and the mercies already received by him. He then complains of being deserted and given up by man, in his old age; and of the taunts and insults of his enemies, whose downfall he predicts. At the same time, he encourages himself in the divine promise, and with the hope of spending his last days in praise and comfort. Although we have no express authority for applying this psalm to our Lord Christ, we do not observe in it any thing to render such application improper.

PSALM LXXII. Ver. 1—20. The prosperous reign of Solo-

the crisis when he heard of the sanguinary counsel which Abithophel had given respecting him; or, as some <sup>s</sup> suppose, when beyond Jordan, 2 Sa. xvii. 1—21.] —Bagster. (For exposition and notes, see Psalm 40.)

PSALM LXXI. Ver. 2. Deliver me.—[Display thy righteousness in delivering me, and punishing my enemies. This kind of <sup>p</sup> appeal to the justice of God, in David's circumstances, seems the most natural interpretation; but some suppose the faithfulness of God to his promises is meant.] —Bagster.

Ver. 4. Wicked.—[Probably, his unnatural son Absalom, called rasha, the wicked one, because he had violated all laws, both human and divine.] —Bagster. —Cruel man.—[Leavened man.] —Ainsworth. [Most probably Abithophel, who was the iniquitous counsellor of a wicked and rebellious son.] —Bagster.

Ver. 7. As a wonder.—[Kemopheth, (as a prodigy:) "my low estate,"—my slaying the lion and bear,—conquering the Philistine,—escaping the fury of Saul,—being raised to the throne of Israel,—enduring such uncommon trials and afflictions,—and experiencing such wonderful deliverances, all mark me out as the subject of "wonder unto many; but thou art my strong Refuge." —Bagster.

Ver. 9. Old age.—[This determines the period when this Psalm was composed; for it was in David's old age that the rebellion of Absalom took place.] —Bagster.

PSALM LXXII. Title.—A Psalm for Solomon.—Or, "of Solomon." [This Psalm seems to have been composed by David, in his last days, when he had set his beloved son on the throne. "Then," says Calmate, "transported with joy and gratitude, he addressed this psalm to God, in which he prays him to pour out his blessings on the young king, and upon the people. He then, wrapped up in a divine enthusiasm, ascends to a higher subject; and sings the glory of the Messiah, and the magnificence of his reign." —Bagster.

Ver. 1. Give the king. . . . and . . . the king's son.—Namely, Solomon, to whom both characters agree.—Mudge, Chandler, Bishops Horne and Horsley, &c.

Ver. 3. The mountains shall bring (i. e. bring forth) peace, and the little hills, by righteousness.—"And the hills (also bring forth peace) with righteousness." Ainsworth. The Chaldee explains it of "the inhabitants of the mountains" bringing forth peace; i. e. announcing the tidings of peace to the surrounding country. See Isa. iii. 7.

shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor.

5 They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations.

6 He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass : as showers that water the earth.

7 In his days shall the righteous flourish ; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

8 He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

9 They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him ; and his enemies shall lick the dust.

10 The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents : the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts.

11 Yea, all kings shall fall down before him : all nations shall serve him.

12 For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth ; the poor also, and him that hath no helper.

13 He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy.

14 He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence : and precious shall their blood be in his sight.

15 And he shall live, and to him shall be e Is. 51. 12,

13.
Jr. 12. 10.
f 2 Sa. 23. 4.
Ho. 6. 3.
g All there be no moon.
h 1 Ki. 4. 20.
24.
Ps. 89. 25,
36.
Zec. 9. 10.
i Mt. 7. 17.
j 2 Ch. 2. 11.
Mat. 2. 11.
k Is. 49. 7, 23.
l He. 7. 25.
m Re. 1. 13.
n one shall give.

o 2 Ch. 9. 1.
p Jude. 15.
q Ho. 14. 5, 7.
r be.
s as a son to continue his father's name for ever.
t Ep. 1. 3.
u Ex. 15. 11.
v Re. 5. 13.
w Nu. 14. 21.
Hab. 2. 14.
a or, for.
b or, Yet.
c clean of heart.
d Ps. 13. 26.
Mat. 5. 3.
d Ps. 37. 1.
Ja. 4. 5.

given of the gold of Sheba : prayer also shall be made for him continually ; and daily shall he be praised.

16 There shall be a handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains ; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon : and they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth.

17 His name shall endure for ever : his name shall be continued as long as the sun : and men shall be blessed in him : all nations shall call him blessed.

18 Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things.

19 And blessed be his glorious name for ever : and let the whole earth be filled with his glory ; Amen, and Amen.

20 The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended.

PSALM LXXIII.

1 The prophet, prevailing in a temptation, 2 sheweth the occasion thereof, the prosperity of the wicked, 13 The wound given thereby, diffidence. 15 The victory over it knowledge of God's purpose, in destroying of the wicked, and sustaining the righteous.

A Psalm of Asaph.

TRULY God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.

2 But as for me, my feet were almost gone ; my steps had well nigh slipped.

3 For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.

mon as typical of Messiah's kingdom.—Commentators, ancient and modern, have generally considered this psalm as the composition of David, with reference to his son Solomon ; yet there are not wanting writers of eminence who have ascribed it to Solomon himself, to which we feel strongly inclined, for reasons given in the notes below. As both, however, were inspired writers, it makes no difference as to the divine authority of the psalm. The occasion was evidently Solomon's accession to the throne ; and Bishop Lowth, who calls it an inaugural psalm, thinks it "impossible, in the whole compass of literature, sacred or profane, to find such a union of sublimity with sweetness and grace." (Lect. xxv.) In another lecture, the Bishop compares the allegory of this with that of the second psalm, and thus distinguishes them. In the second psalm, he finds a display of the pomp and splendour of victory, but in the seventy-second, (now before us), "the placid image of peace and felicity." The style is "more calm and temperate, more ornamented." Both, pointing to king Messiah under the character of Solomon as a typical prince, and the son of David ; and, in his application, he has certainly the sanction of the highest Jewish as well as Christian authorities, and (what is more) of the inspired writers of the New Testament.

In this psalm, Solomon, or David for him, (if we consider him as the author,) implores judgment and righteousness to qualify him to govern the tribes of Israel—the very request which, we know, Solomon did personally make ; "Give thy servant an understanding heart, to judge thy people." (1 Kings iii. 8, 9.) We know, also, from the same authority, that such a heart was given him, and with that, riches and honour unprecedented, also a long and peaceful reign : thus constituting him, not only a great prince, but an eminent type of him, whose greatness was without limit, and whose government is without end.

The blessings here announced, are peace and righteousness, which were to be proclaimed upon the hills, (as was customary, by a chorus of females, to the inhabitants throughout the country. But peace and righteousness were to be accompanied with a numerous population and abundant harvests. So, in ver. 16, "A handful of (seed) corn" scattered "on the top of the mountains," should bring forth so fine and plentiful a harvest, that the corn should "shake" and rustle in the wind like the trees of "Lebanon ;" and at the same time the population of "the city shall flourish like the grass of the earth."

These blessings were, in a degree, realized in the reign of Solomon ; they have been partly realized in the Christianization of the world, and we have reason to expect that the latter blessing, an increase of population and of human food, will take place, in a degree altogether unprecedented, in the latter days, when, to the suppression of infanticide, human sacrifices, and negro slavery, and the full cultivation of the earth, with hundreds of islands as yet perhaps unknown, shall be added the general suppression of war : who then can calculate the happy issue ? Let us join in the doxology which concludes this psalm, and say—

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun Does his successive journeys run ;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore,
Till moons shall wax and wane no more."—Watts.

PSALM LXXIII. Ver. 1—28. A dangerous temptation triumphed over.—This psalm is ascribed to Asaph, like the fiftieth and ten others ; but who this Asaph was is uncertain. We have supposed him to have been the contemporary of David ; but as some of his psalms seem to refer to the times of his captivity, Bishop Patrick and others attribute them to one of his descendants. It is very possible there may have been two sacred writers of that name ; but the question is neither important, nor easy to be decided.

This psalm relates to the process of a temptation by which the writer had been much afflicted, and which had occasioned in his mind a long and painful struggle ; namely, "the prosperity of the wicked," and the afflictions of the just. The former are often exempted from those trials with which the just are visited ; and advanced to dignity and power, which they abuse to oppress the poor ; and even in death they are often exempted from those anxieties of mind and bodily pangs, which good men suffer.

The tenth verse is admitted to be difficult of explanation. Mudge renders the verse, "Therefore let his people come before them, and waters of a full cup are wrung from them." In part only adopting his, we should rather read, "Therefore his people (i. e. God's) return to them." The profane world, and "waters of a full (cup)," i. e. abundance of bitter tears, are wrung out of them." Yet are these wicked men heedless of the consequences, and say, "How doth God know ?" &c. "Behold, these are the ungodly !"

From a contemplation of these facts, the Psalmist was tempted to think that he had served God in vain, and was puzzled to account for this unequal distribution of the blessings of providence : nor was he able to do it till he went into God's words for part of the psalm itself, understand thereby, that herein was contained a summary of his prayers and wishes on the behalf of Solomon, which sense the words themselves may bear. But Ainsworth, Patrick, Kemmick, Michaelis, Boothroyd, &c. consider this merely as a note of the prophet, or scribe, who had thus far collected and arranged them ; this being the end of the book, as the Jews divide them. These being all composed by David, except this and a few others, the whole book might very properly be ascribed to David, as we now ascribe the whole collection, (150,) though perhaps not much more than half of them were actually composed by him.

PSALM LXXIII. Title.—(This Psalm is supposed to have been composed on occasion of the destruction of Sennacherib's army, 2 Ki. xix. compare ver. 18—20.)—Bagster.—A Psalm of Asaph.—"For Asaph." See note on ver. 7. "Asaph the Seer." (2 Chron. xxix. 30.) and "Asaph, the father of Joah, the recorder," (2 Kings xviii. 18.) Bishop Patrick thinks the two last were the same person, and probably the author of these psalms.

Ver. 3. Envious.—(It seems to have been a maxim among the ancient heathen, "The prosperity of the wicked is a reproach to God ;" but they had no just conception of a state of future rewards and punishments.)—Bagster

Ver. 6. Mown grass.—Gaz more properly denotes pastured grass : and it seems to be a reference to the thick night dew which in summer fall on the pasturages, and become the means of restoring the grass consumed in the day time. This is finely expressed by Virgil, "And as much as the flocks crop in the long days, so much shall the cold dew restore in one short night."—Bagster.

Ver. 8. The ends of the earth.—Or, "land ;" viz. Canaan ; but when we apply this to Messiah, we must extend our ideas much farther, and include the Gentiles. Ps. li. 8.

Ver. 9. Lick the dust.—That is, prostrate themselves in the dust before him.

Ver. 10. Kings of Tarshish.—That is, of the isles and sea-coasts.—Sheba and Seba.—That is, of Arabia and Ethiopia. Boothroyd.

Ver. 13. He shall spare.—Ainsworth, "Mercifully spare."

Ver. 17. His name shall be continued.—See margin. "The word jinnom, (or jannin,) says Ainsworth, cometh of Nin, which is a son ;" Bishop Patrick therefore paraphrases it, "His memory and fame shall never die ; but be propagated from father to son, as long as the sun shall shine." The text will not admit a translation exactly literal.

Ver. 20. The prayers of David. . . are ended.—Some, taking these 4 For there are no bands in their death: but their strength is <sup>a</sup> firm.

5 They are not in <sup>t</sup> trouble as other men; neither are they plagued <sup>s</sup> like other men.

6 Therefore pride compasseth them about as a chain; violence covereth them as a <sup>h</sup> garment.

7 Their eyes stand out with fatness: they have more than heart could wish.

8 They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: they speak <sup>i</sup> loftily.

9 They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth.

10 Therefore his people return hither: and waters of a full <sup>cup</sup> are wrung out to them.

11 And they say, <sup>h</sup>How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?

12 Behold, these <sup>are</sup> the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches.

13 Verily <sup>i</sup>I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency.

14 For all the day long have I been plagued, and <sup>m</sup> chastened every morning.

15 If I say, I will speak thus; behold, I should offend <sup>against</sup> the generation of thy children.

16 When I thought to know this, it <sup>was</sup> <sup>n</sup> too painful for me;

17 Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their <sup>o</sup> end.

18 Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castedst them down into destruction.

19 How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors.

20 As a dream <sup>p</sup> when one awaketh; so, O LORD, when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image.

21 Thus my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins.

22 So foolish <sup>w</sup>as I, and <sup>q</sup>ignorant: I was <sup>a</sup>as a beast <sup>r</sup>before thee.

23 Nevertheless I <sup>am</sup> continually with thee: thou hast holden <sup>me</sup> by my right hand.

24 Thou <sup>s</sup>halt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive <sup>me</sup> to glory.

25 Whom have I in heaven <sup>but</sup> thee? and <sup>e</sup> sat.

<sup>f</sup> the trouble of.

<sup>g</sup> with.

<sup>h</sup> Ps. 109. 18.

<sup>i</sup> pass the thoughts of the heart.

<sup>j</sup> Jude 16.

<sup>k</sup> Job 22. 13.

<sup>l</sup> Ps. 94. 7.

<sup>m</sup> my chastisement was.

<sup>n</sup> labour in mine eyes.

<sup>o</sup> Ps. 37. 38.

<sup>p</sup> La. 29. 7, 8.

<sup>q</sup> I knew not.

<sup>r</sup> with.

<sup>s</sup> Ps. 48. 14.

<sup>t</sup> rock.

<sup>u</sup> La. 3. 24.

<sup>v</sup> or, A Psalm for Asaph to give instruction.

<sup>w</sup> or, tribe.

<sup>x</sup> La. 2. 7. &c.

<sup>y</sup> sent thy sanctuary into the fire.

<sup>z</sup> break.

<sup>a</sup> Ps. 44. 4.

there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee.

26 My flesh and my heart faileth: <sup>but</sup> God is the <sup>t</sup>strength of my heart, and my portion <sup>u</sup> for ever.

27 For, lo, they that are far from thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them that go a whoring from thee.

28 But <sup>it</sup> is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my trust in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works.

PSALM LXXIV.

<sup>1</sup> The prophet complaineth of the desolation of the sanctuary. <sup>10</sup> He moveth God to help in consideration of his power, 18 of his reproachful enemies, of his children and of his covenant.

Maschil <sup>o</sup> of Asaph.

O GOD, why hast thou cast us off for ever <sup>why</sup> doth thine anger smoke against the sheep of thy pasture?

2 Remember thy congregation, <sup>which</sup> thou hast purchased of old; the <sup>b</sup>rod of thine inheritance, <sup>which</sup> thou hast redeemed; this mount Zion, wherein thou hast dwelt.

3 Lift up thy feet unto the perpetual desolations; <sup>even</sup> all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.

4 Thine <sup>c</sup>enemies roar in the midst of thy congregations; they set up their ensigns <sup>for</sup> signs.

5 <sup>A</sup> man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees.

6 But now they break down the carved work thereof at once with axes and hammers.

7 They have <sup>d</sup>cast fire into thy sanctuary, they have defiled <sup>by</sup> casting down the dwelling-place of thy name to the ground.

8 They said in their hearts, Let us <sup>e</sup>destroy them together: they have burned up all the synagogues of God in the land.

9 We see not our signs: <sup>there</sup> is no more any prophet: neither <sup>is</sup> there among us any that knoweth how long.

10 O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?

11 Why withdrawest thou thy hand, even thy right hand? <sup>pluck</sup> it out of thy bosom.

12 For God <sup>is</sup> my King <sup>f</sup>of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth.

sanctuary. "Then (says he) understood I their end." But how so? By hearing the word of God there read, (for the Hebrews had not Bibles as we have) he learned that these wicked men, though prosperous in the world, were under the curse of God: and, firm as they might seem, they were in slippery places, and in the road to everlasting ruin! He saw now that their felicity was all a dream, and that when God should arise and awaken them to the judgment, "the vain show," the image of splendour in which they walked, would appear altogether despicable. (See Psalm xlix. 6.)

But the Psalmist now reverses the scene, and contemplates himself—poor, destitute, and afflicted,—yet in the hand of God—guided by his counsel, and advancing steadily in the way to glory. And then he breaks out into a devotional rapture—"Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire compared with thee."

<sup>o</sup> Lord, 'tis enough that thou art mine.
My life, my portion, and my God."—Watts.

PSALM LXXIV. Ver. 1.—23. The psalmist laments the destruction of the temple by the heathen, and implores divine interference.—We have hinted that some of Asaph's psalms had reference to the time of the captivity, and this is one of that number, as it refers to the destruction and burning of the temple. It could not be composed by the first Asaph, but by one of his descendants. The psalmist observes, that time was, when men acquired fame by felling the woods; now they sought promotion and reward by cutting down the sacred ornaments of the temple, and burning them with fire. He calls upon the Lord, therefore, to return quickly to his temple, and plead his own cause against the heathen.

In order to stir up the Almighty (as it were) to avenge the cause of his church, he is put in mind that it is his own cause, that her enemies are his also, and that those who reproach her blaspheme her God. He is also reminded of his irresistible power, and what he had done for the salvation of his people in times of old, particularly at the Red sea, and is entreated to remember also his covenant of old, and to save his "turtle dove," (so the church is called,) from the hands of his and her enemies.

An important passage here occurs, as relates to the cause of Ver. 4. No bands.—Or, "pangs." Bishop Horne. See Job xxi. 13, 23, 24.

Ver. 10. Return hither.—Or, "to them!" i. e. seduced by the boasting language of these profane men, they are sometimes tempted back to the world, and then it costs them abundance of tears and sufferings, before they can return.

Ver. 8. Oppression.—Dr. Boothroyd joins this word to the latter clause, thus: "Concerning oppression they speak loftily." This we think preferable.

Ver. 15. I will speak.—"Reckon," or "reason." Peters on Job.
Ver. 20. When thou awakest.—Or, "When thou awakest them?" viz. from the grave.—Ainsworth.

Ver. 25. Beside thee.—Heb. "With." in comparison of "thee."—Horne.

Ver. 27. Go a whoring.—That is, after idols. See Exod. xxxiv. 15, 16.

Ver. 28. All thy works.—(The LXX., Vulgate, Arabic, and Ethiopic, add, "in the gates of the daughter of Zion;" which makes a better conclusion; but it is not acknowledged by any MS. yet collated.)—Bagster.

PSALM LXXIV. Ver. 2. The rod.—Measured portion, or lot. See Deut. xxii. 9. Jer. x. 16. Or, as margin, "Tribe?" viz. Judah. (Shaiwet, also signifies a sceptre; and may here mean "the sovereignty of thine inheritance;" alluding to the theocracy of the Israelites.)—Bagster Ver. 3. Lift up thy feet.—That is, hasten to our deliverance.

Ver. 4. Thine enemies roar.—Like lions. Amos iii. 8. (The Chaldeans, rushing into the temple, shouting for victory amid the affrighted worshippers, and setting up their standards, or erecting trophies of their success, on that sacred ground, seem to be here described.)—Bagster.—They set up their ensigns (adorned with their idolatrous emblems) for signs.—To show that their idols have got the ascendancy.

Ver. 8. Burned all the synagogues.—[Moaddim, rendered "congregations" in ver. 4, is supposed by Prideaux to mean rather proseuchæ than synagogues, i. e. rather open courts where the people met to pray each man for himself, than covered buildings where a public service was performed.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. We see not our signs.—That is, miracles: the usual signs of the divine presence.—No more any prophet.—Bishop Patrick hence infers, that mass had been after the death of Jeremiah; but if he were in prison, it was the same; they could not consult him.

Ver. 11. Pluck it out.—[As the outward habit of the easterns has no sleeves, the hands and arms are frequently covered with the folds of the robe; and, in order to do any thing, the hand must be disentangled and drawn out.]—B.

13 Thou <sup>2</sup> didst <sup>b</sup> divide the sea by thy strength: thou brakest <sup>i</sup> the heads of the <sup>j</sup> dragons in the waters.

14 Thou brakest the heads of leviathan in pieces, and gavest him to be meat <sup>k</sup> to the people inhabiting the wilderness.

15 Thou didst cleave <sup>i</sup> the fountain and the flood: thou driedst <sup>m</sup> up <sup>n</sup> mighty rivers.

16 The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun.

17 Thou hast set all the borders of the earth: thou hast made <sup>o</sup> summer and winter.

18 Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD, and that the <sup>p</sup> foolish people have blasphemed thy name.

19 O deliver not the soul of thy turtle-dove <sup>q</sup> unto the multitude of the wicked: forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever.

20 Have respect unto the <sup>r</sup> covenant: for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty.

21 O let not the oppressed return ashamed: let the poor and needy praise thy name.

22 Arise, O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily.

23 Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the tumult of those that rise up against thee <sup>s</sup> increaseth continually.

PSALM LXXV.

1 The prophet praiseth God. 2 He promiseth to judge uprightly. 4 He rebuketh the proud by consideration of God's providence. 9 He praiseth God, and promiseth to execute justice.

To the chief Musician, <sup>a</sup> <sup>b</sup> Al-taschith, A Psalm or Song <sup>c</sup> of Asaph.

UNTO thee, O God, do we give thanks, unto thee do we give thanks: for that thy name is near thy wondrous works declare.

2 When <sup>d</sup> I shall receive the congregation I will judge <sup>e</sup> uprightly.

3 The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved: I bear up the pillars of it. Selah.

4 I said unto the fools, Deal not foolishly: and to the wicked, Lift not up <sup>f</sup> the horn:

g Ex. 14. 21.

h break.

i Is. 51. 9, 10. Eze. 27. 3.

j or, whales.

k Nu. 14. 9.

l Ex. 17. 5, 6. Nu. 20. 11.

m Jos. 3. 13, &c.

n rivers of strength.

o them.

p Ps. 94. 7, 8.

q Ca. 2. 14.

r Ge. 17. 7, 8. Le. 26. 45. 2 Sa. 23. 5. Ps. 106. 45. Je. 33. 20, 21. He. 8. 10.

s ascendeth.

Jo. 1. 2.

a or, Desolation.

b Ps. 57. title.

c or, for.

d or, shall I take a set time.

e 2 Sa. 23. 3, 4.

f Zec. 1. 21.

g desert.

h 1 Sa. 2. 7, 8.

i Re. 14. 9, 10.

j Ps. 101. 8.

a or, for.

b Ps. 43. 1, &c.

c De. 4. 7, 8.

d Ps. 132. 13.

e Is. 57. 35, 36.

f Is. 46. 12.

g Je. 51. 39.

h Zec. 12. 4.

i Je. 10. 7.

j Na. 1. 6.

k Ex. 19. 10, &c.

l Da. 2. 19, 23.

m Ps. 65. 7.

5 Lift not up your horn on high: speak not with a stiff neck.

6 For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the <sup>s</sup> south.

7 But God is the judge: he <sup>b</sup> putteth down one, and setteth up another.

8 For in the hand of the LORD there is a <sup>i</sup> cup, and the wine is red; it is full of mixture; and he poureth out of the same: but the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them.

9 But I will declare for ever; I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.

10 All <sup>i</sup> the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSALM LXXVI.

1 A declaration of God's majesty in the church. 11 An exhortation to serve him reverently.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, A Psalm or Song <sup>a</sup> of Asaph.

IN <sup>b</sup> Judah <sup>c</sup> is God known: his name is great in Israel.

2 In <sup>d</sup> Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling-place in Zion.

3 There <sup>e</sup> brake he the arrows of the bow, the shield, and the sword, and the battle. Selah.

4 Thou art more glorious and excellent than the mountains of prey.

5 The stout-hearted <sup>f</sup> are spoiled, they have slept <sup>g</sup> their sleep: and none of the men of might have found their hands.

6 At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse <sup>h</sup> are cast into a dead sleep.

7 <sup>i</sup> Thou, even thou, art to be feared: and who <sup>j</sup> may stand in thy sight when once thou art angry?

8 Thou <sup>k</sup> didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven; the earth feared, and was still.

9 When God arose to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth. Selah.

10 Surely the wrath of man <sup>l</sup> shall praise thee: the remainder <sup>m</sup> of wrath shalt thou restrain.

missions. "The dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty:" from which we may infer, that, instead of ignorance being the "mother of devotion," or paganism a harmless system, we shall always find the habitations of cruelty in the lands of ignorance and idolatry. Infanticide, self-immolation, witchcraft, and human sacrifices, are found more or less in all the regions of idolatry.

"Kingdoms wide that sit in darkness,
Let them have the glorious light;
And from eastern coast to western
May the morning chase the night.
Let the gospel
Soon resound from pole to pole."

PSALM LXXV. Ver. 1—10. The psalmist praises God and predicts divine judgments on the wicked.—This psalm is also attributed to Asaph, and Bishop Patrick thinks it must have been Asaph the Seer, in the time of Hezekiah, because the Levites were appointed to praise God in "the words of David and of Asaph the Seer." (2 Chron. xxix. 30: see note below.) Bishop Horne (without giving any reason) attributes the psalm to David, as speaking in the person of Messiah; and some parts

Ver. 14. Heads of leviathan.—These terms seem here used for Pharaoh and his military captains.—People.—Or wild inhabitants of the desert: the beasts and birds of prey, that doubtless feasted on the drowned carcasses when thrown on shore. See Bishop Horne. Compare Isa. li. 9—11. and Rev. xix. 17.

Ver. 15. Thou didst cleave.—This verse refers to the miracle of cleaving the rock for water, and drying up the Jordan.

Ver. 19. To the multitude.—[Or, rather, "O deliver not thy turtle-dove to the beasts (or birds) of prey." Thy people Israel are afflicted and miserable, and weak, helpless, and defenceless, as a turtle-dove, the smallest of her tribe—O, deliver them not into the power of their brutal adversaries.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Dark places.—[The caves, dens, and woods of the land are full of robbers and murderers, who are continually destroying thy people; so that the holy seed seems as if it would be entirely cut off, and the covenant promise thus be rendered void.]—Bagster.

PSALM LXXV. Title. [Some consider this Psalm to have been written by David on his accession to the throne over all Israel; others refer it to the time of the captivity, considering it as a continuation of the subject in the preceding; but Bishop Patrick and others are of opinion that it was composed by Asaph to commemorate the overthrow of Sennacherib's army, 2 Kings xix. 1—35.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. When I shall receive the congregation.—See margin. The same word signifies both a set time, and a set meeting.

Ver. 8. The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved.—That of it, especially the last verse, will hardly apply to any inferior character. The representation of the Almighty as administering, from his throne of judgment, their due portions of punishment, while the righteous rejoice around him, is eminently grand and awful. Compare Rev. xiv. 10, &c.

PSALM LXXVI. Ver. 1—12. Praise for a signal interference of divine mercy.—"It is obvious, (says Bishop Horne,) to any one who reads this psalm, that it was composed as a thanksgiving hymn, on account of some great deliverance wrought for his people by the immediate hand of God. The miraculous destruction of the Assyrian army by the angel, in the days of king Hezekiah, is generally pitched upon as the subject of it, and affirmed to be so by the ancient Greek inscriptions prefixed to it in the Septuagint version.

The prophet speaks with rapture of the glory which Jehovah had acquired by former deliverances of Israel, as well as in the present instance; and contemplates with delight the fact, that God had long made Zion his chosen residence, and Judah his favourite tribe. By their sins, indeed, he had been provoked to withdraw his presence; but the mercy recently received, encouraged the psalmist to hope that the Most High, is, things are returning to a moral chaos.—I bear up the pillars of it.—I am left alone, to support the sinking state.

Ver. 5. Stiff neck.—[Bruce observes that the Abyssinian kings have a horn on their diadem; and that the keeping it erect, or in a projecting form, makes them appear as if they had a stiff neck; and he refers to this passage for the antiquity of the usage, and the appearance also.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. From the south.—The land of Canaan had a desert at both ends, north and south. The Jews were not to look for support to any of the surrounding nations.

Ver. 10. All the horns, &c.—To cut off the horn, is to reduce to insignificance, to lift the horn, is to raise to power and dignity. A silver horn on the top of the head is a part of the Abyssinian dress.

PSALM LXXVI. Ver. 2. In Salem.—The poetical name of Jerusalem. See Gen. xiv. 18.

Ver. 3. Arrows.—[Rishphey kasheth, "fiery arrows of the bow" which Servius describes as a dart or javelin with a spherical leaden head to which fire was attached. When thrown by a powerful hand, it killed those whom it hit; and set fire to buildings, &c.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Mountains of prey.—[This is an address to Mount Zion; which was more illustrious and excellent than all the mountains of prey, i. e. where wild beasts wander, and prey on those that are more helpless than themselves.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Chariot and horse.—Poetically, charioteers and horsemen.—In a dead sleep.—The sleep of death.

David's combat with diffidence. PSALMS.—LXXVII., LXXVIII. The law of God recommended.

11 Vow, and pay unto the LORD your God: let all that be round about him bring presents unto him that ought to be feared.

12 He ° shall cut off the spirit of princes: he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM LXXVII.

* The psalmist sheweth what fierce combat he had with diffidence. 10 The victory which he had by consideration of God's great and gracious works.

To the chief Musician, to a Jeduthun, A Psalm of Asaph.

I CRIED unto God with my voice, even unto God with my voice; and he gave ear unto me.

2 In the day of my trouble I sought the LORD: my ° sore ran in the night, and ceased not: my soul refused to be comforted.

3 I remembered God, and was troubled: I complained, and my spirit ° was overwhelmed. Selah.

4 Thou holdest mine eyes waking: I am so troubled that I cannot speak.

5 I have considered ° the days of old, the years of ancient times.

6 I call to remembrance my song ° in the night: I commune ° with mine own heart: and my spirit made diligent ° search.

7 Will the LORD cast off for ° ever? and will he be favourable no more?

8 Is his mercy clean gone for ever? doth his promise fail ° for evermore?

9 Hath God forgotten ° to be gracious? hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? Selah.

10 And I said, This ° is my infirmity: but I will remember the years of the right hand of the Most High.

11 I will remember the works ° of the LORD: surely I will remember thy wonders of old.

12 I will meditate also of all thy work, and talk of thy doings.

13 Thy way, O God, is ° in the sanctuary: who ° is so great a God as our God!

14 Thou art the God that doest wonders: thou hast declared thy strength among the people.

15 Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy n to fear.

o Ps.25,10.

a Ps.62.title.

b or, for.

c hand.

d Ps.143,4,5

La.3,17, &c

e De.32,7.

Is.63,11.

f Ps.42,8.

g Ps.4,4.

h La.3,40.

i Ps.74,1.

La.3,31, 32.

j to generation and generation.

k Is.49,15.

l Ps.31,22.

m Ps.111,4.

n Ps.62,24.

o Ex.15,11, &c.

p Hab.3,8, &c.

q were poured forth with water.

r 2Sa.22,14.

s Is.63,11.

a Ps.74,1,4,10.

b Is.51,4.

c Mat.13, 13,35.

d Ex.13,8, 14.

e De.6,7. 11,19.

f Ps.102,18.

g Eze.20,18.

h Eze.2,2,3.

i prepared not their heart.

2Ch.20,33

people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah 16 The waters ° saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee; they were afraid: the depths also were troubled.

17 The clouds ° poured out water: the skies sent out a sound: thine arrows also went abroad.

18 The voice ° of thy thunder was in the heaven: the lightnings lightened the world. the earth trembled and shook.

19 Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known.

20 Thou ° leddest thy people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

PSALM LXXVIII.

1 An exhortation both to learn and to preach the law of God. 9 The story of God's wrath against the incredulous and disobedient. 67 The Israelites being rejoyced, God chose Judah, Zion, and David.

Maschil ° of Asaph.

GIVE ° ear, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 I will open my mouth in a ° parable: I will utter dark sayings of old:

3 Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4 We ° will not hide them from their children, showing to the generation to come the praises of the LORD, and his strength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.

5 For he established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law ° in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children:

6 That ° the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born; who should arise and declare them to their children:

7 That they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments:

8 And ° might not be as their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious ° generation; a generation that ° set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God.

9 The children of Ephraim, being armed, was then in the sea, and his footsteps unseen. His paths are still in the deep waters, untraceable by mortal eye: but still his way is a way of holiness. "The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works." (Psalm cxlv. 17.)

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm."—Cooper.

PSALM LXXVIII. Ver. 1—35. God's dealing with Israel in the wilderness.—This is the first of the historical psalms: the others are Psalms cv. and cvi.; all which contain retrospective narratives of the Lord's dealings with the people of Israel, from "their departure from Egypt to the reign of David particularizing and illustrating all the leading events. The style (says Bishop Lowth) is simple and uniform; but the structure is poetical, and the sentiments are occasionally splendid." The psalmist, in the exordium, speaks of opening his mouth in a parable and uttering enigmas, or dark sayings. And "It is observable (Bishop Horne remarks) that our Lord is, by St. Matthew, said to have addressed the multitude in ten during the captivity, this could hardly be referred to the sanctuary, which was destroyed. Ainsworth renders it, "in sanctity;" Horne and Lowth, "in holiness."

Ver. 18. Thy way is in the sea—Rather, (for there is no verb in the text) "was in the sea;" namely, in the Red sea, as in the context.

PSALM LXXVIII. (Or, a Psalm for Asaph, to give instruction. Psalm lxxviii. title. This Psalm was probably written, as Calmet and others suppose, by Asaph in the days of Asa, who had gained, by the aid of the Syrians, a great victory over the Israelites; and brought back to the pure worship of God many of the tribes of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon, 2 Ch. xv., xvi. It is a poetical abstract, or chronological poem, of the ancient history of the Hebrews; and must have greatly assisted the people in becoming better acquainted with the wonderful deeds of Jehovah in their behalf.)—Bagster.

Ver. 2. In a parable.—(Bishop Lowth renders maschal, a grave, sententious, and elevated discourse, or a poetic composition, elevated and grave, weighty, and powerful, highly ornamented with comparisons, figures, and imagery.—Dark sayings.—Or, "pointed sayings;" for there is nothing dark or mystical in this psalm; except as the history of Israel, like the parables of Christ, was a picture or similitude of heavenly things.)—Bagster.—Of old.—Relative to ancient times.

Ver. 5. For he established, &c.—This verse may be read as a parenthesis. Ver. 9. The Children of Ephraim.—(Some think this refers to a defeat of who had rebuked the heathen by this deliverance, would again dwell in Zion. Thus the wrath of man, which had attempted not only to crush, but even to annihilate his people, was made to praise him, in being overruled for their deliverance. And thus has it often happened, that when the enemies of the church have attempted its destruction with peculiar energy, the Lord has restrained and overruled their wrath for the display of his own glory, and the salvation of his own people.

PSALM LXXVII. Ver. 1—20. The psalmist, Asaph, relates the exercises of his mind with regard to God's dealings with his people Israel in their captivity.—He relates, particularly, his meditations by night upon his bed, while his eyes were withheld from sleep and his hands stretched out in prayer. Reflecting on the melancholy state of things with respect to the Jewish church, he was ready to exclaim, "Hath God forgotten to be gracious? Hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies?" But turning back his reflections upon God's dealings towards his people of old, and especially in the deliverance from Egypt, (which was always a favourite topic with the Hebrew poets,) he encourages himself to hope for fresh deliverances. His way

Ver. 11. Bring presents.—That is, offer tribute, and submit; i. e. unto him who alone is to be feared. See Gen. xxxi. 42.

PSALM LXXVII. (This Psalm is allowed by the best judges to have been written during the Babylonian captivity.)—Bagster.

Ver. 2. My sore.—(Or, rather, "my hand was stretched out by night, and ceased not," or without intermission: so Symmachus and Jerome. He continued the whole night with his voice and hands lifted up to God, imploring his gracious and efficacious assistance.)—Bagster.

Ver. 6. I call to remembrance.—Some of the ancient versions and modern translators join this verb to the preceding line, thus: "The years of ancient times I called to mind." This verse may then read, "My (harp) strings (neginah) in the night communed with my heart;" (this though it may be new) is highly poetical, and agrees with a suggestion of Ainsworth, that the psalmist might have taken his harp, and lamented to it, in the night.

Ver. 10. The years (Ainsworth, Horne, &c. "the changes") of the right hand.—(Or, as Dr. Waterland renders, "This my affliction is a change of the right hand of the Most High," i. e. it proceeds from a change of God's conduct towards me. De Dieu renders, "To pray, this is my business; to change the right hand of the Most High." I can do nothing else than pray: God is the Ruler of events. N. M. Berlin, "To grieve is my portion; to change (my condition) belongs to the right hand of the Most High.")—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Thy way . . . is in the sanctuary.—If this psalm were writ-and <sup>1</sup>carrying bows, turned back <sup>2</sup>in the day of battle.

10 They <sup>1</sup>kept not the covenant of God, and refused to walk in his law;

11 And forgot <sup>2</sup>his works, and his wonders that he had showed them.

12 Marvellous things <sup>3</sup>did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan.

13 He divided <sup>4</sup>the sea, and caused them to pass through; and he made <sup>5</sup>the waters to stand as a heap.

14 In <sup>6</sup>the day-time also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire.

15 He clave <sup>7</sup>the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink <sup>8</sup>out of the great depths.

16 He <sup>9</sup>brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

17 And they sinned yet more against him by provoking <sup>10</sup>the Most High in the wilderness.

18 And <sup>11</sup>they tempted God in their heart by asking meat for their lust.

19 Yea, they spake against God; they said, Can God <sup>12</sup>furnish a table in the wilderness?

20 Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed; can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

21 Therefore the LORD heard <sup>13</sup>this, and was <sup>14</sup>wroth: so a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel;

22 Because they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation:

23 Though he had commanded the clouds from above, and opened the doors <sup>15</sup>of heaven, 24 And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven.

25 <sup>16</sup>Man did eat angels' food: he sent them meat to the full.

26 He caused an east wind to <sup>17</sup>blow in the heaven: and by his power he brought in the south wind.

27 He <sup>18</sup>rained flesh also upon them as dust, and <sup>19</sup>feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea:

parables, "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables," &c. citing the second verse of the psalm now before us. (Matt. xiii. 35.) If it doth not follow from this citation, that the prophet actually speaks this psalm in the person of Christ, as we think it does not; "yet," continues the Bishop, in which we agree, "thus much at least is evident from it, that the history of old Israel somewhat resembles the letter of the gospel parables, and contains, shadowed out under it, the history of a correspondent state of things in the new Israel, or church Christian." The sum of this is, as St. Paul explains it, "All these things"—the trials which they suffered, and the deliverances they received—"happened to them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." (1 Cor. x. 11.) If it be asked, in what respect are these things ensamples to us? We reply, inasmuch as they show the same depravity and guilt—the same proneness to ingratitude and forgetfulness of God, on their part; and on the part of God, the same long-suffering and compassion, the same hatred to sin, and the same determination to punish it, though he might spare or save the sinners: "For when he slew them," that is, the chief offenders, "then they," the sur-

the Ephraimites mentioned in 1 Ch. vii. 20–22; but it probably refers to the conduct and defeat of the ten tribes, of which Ephraim was the head.—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Field of Zoan.—Zienn, the ancient capital of the Pharaohs, where Moses wrought so many miracles, is rendered by the Chaldee, LXX., and Vulgate, Tanis, and Coptic Tane, from the Coptic ten, plain, flat, level; being situated in the low ground of the Delta, on one of the eastern branches of the Nile, bearing its own name, near a large lake, now called the lake of Menzula, 44 miles west of Pelusium, and 169 miles east of Alexandria, according to the Antonine Itinerary, and three miles from the Mediterranean, according to the Geograph. Nubiens. There are ruins still remaining to mark the site of Zoan, or Tanis, called San by the Arabs; comprising broken obelisks, capitals of the Corinthian order, a granite monument.]—Bagster.

Ver. 24. Corn of heaven.—[The manna fell about their camp in the form of seeds; and as it appeared to come down from the clouds, it was not improperly termed degan shamayim, "the corn of heaven," or, "heavenly grain;" the term heaven being frequently used to denote the atmosphere.]—Bagster.

growing forth.

k De. 1.41.

44.

l 2 Ki. 17.15.

m Ps. 105.13

n Ex. c.7.

12.

o Is. 19.11.

13.

p Ex. 14.21.

q Ex. 15.8.

r Ex. 13.21.

s Ex. 17.6.

Nu. 20.11.

1 Co. 10.3.

4.

t Ps. 105.41.

u De. 9.22.

He. 3.16.

19.

v Ex. 16.2.

&c.

w order.

x Nu. 11.1.

&c.

y Mal. 3.10.

z or. Every one did eat the bread of the mighty.

Ps. 103.20.

a go.

b Nu. 11.13.

c fowl of

wing.

d Ps. 106.15.

e made to bow.

f or, young.

Is. 40.30,

31.

g Is. 26.16.

Ho. 5.15.

h De. 32.4.

15.

i De. 5.28,29

J Nu. 14.18,

20.

k Is. 48.9.

l Is. 103.14.

m Is. 4.14.

n or, rebel against.

o Ps. 95.8.

10.

p ver. 19,20.

q or, afflic-tion.

r ed.

s ver. 12.

t Ex. 7.30.

u Ex. 8.6,24

v Ex. 10.13.

28 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29 So they did eat, and were well filled: for <sup>20</sup>he gave them their own desire;

30 They were not estranged from their lust. But while their meat <sup>21</sup>was yet in their mouths, 31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them, and <sup>22</sup>smote down the <sup>23</sup>chosen men of Israel.

32 For all this they sinned still, and believed not for his wondrous works.

33 Therefore their days did he consume in vanity, and their years in trouble.

34 When <sup>24</sup>he slew them, then they sought him: and they returned and inquired early after God.

35 And they remembered that God <sup>25</sup>was their <sup>26</sup>rock, and the high God their redeemer.

36 Nevertheless they did flatter <sup>27</sup>him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues.

37 For their heart was not right with him; neither were they steadfast in his covenant.

38 But he, <sup>28</sup>being full of compassion, forgave <sup>29</sup>their iniquity, and destroyed them not: yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and <sup>30</sup>did not stir up all his wrath.

39 For he remembered <sup>31</sup>that they <sup>32</sup>were but flesh; a wind <sup>33</sup>that passeth away, and cometh not again.

40 How oft did they <sup>34</sup>provoke <sup>35</sup>him in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert!

41 Yea, they turned back and tempted God, and limited <sup>36</sup>the Holy One of Israel.

42 They remembered not his hand, <sup>37</sup>nor the day when he delivered them from <sup>38</sup>the enemy.

43 How he had <sup>39</sup>wrought his signs in Egypt, and his wonders <sup>40</sup>in the field of Zoan:

44 And had turned their rivers into <sup>41</sup>blood; and their floods, that they could not drink.

45 He <sup>42</sup>sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured them; and frogs, which destroyed them.

46 He <sup>43</sup>gave also their increase unto the caterpillar, and their labour unto the locust.

vivors, "sought him: and they returned and inquired early after God. And they remembered that God was their rock, and the high God their Redeemer."

"Great God, how oft did Israel prove,
By turns thine anger, and thy love!
There in a glass our hearts may see How fickle and how false they be."—Watts.

Ver. 36–72. The narrative of God's dealings with Israel continued to the reign of David.—This portion of the psalm informs us, that even the penitence and repentance of Israel was often hypocritical. When they inquired after God, yet "their heart was not right with him; neither were they steadfast in his covenant." True religion always begins with inquiring after God; but such inquiries are not always either earnest or sincere. It is possible to flatter the Almighty Father, even in our devotions; and men may use a thousand names, either of awe or of endearment, without feeling either the reverence or affection of his children. It is alone the spirit of adoption that can give us either access to, or communion with him.

The three chief points in the portion of this psalm now before us, are, the miracles in Egypt, the passage of the wilderness, and the conquest of Canaan. The former, we should think,

Ver. 25. Man did eat angels' food.—See margin. The Hebrew says nothing about angels, but the original (abrim) means persons of the higher classes; signifying, that it was bread fit for princes.

Ver. 27. Feathered fowls.—i. e. flying fowls, in distinction from domestic poultry.

Ver. 35. High God.—[All elyon godolom, "the strong God, the Most High, their redeemer," or kinsman: that One who possessed the right of redemption; the nearest a kin to him who had forfeited his inheritance, as the word originally means; and hence is used for a redeemer; and here denotes Him who redeemed them from Egyptian bondage.]—Bagster.

Ver. 37. A wind.—[Or, as the Hebrew may be rendered, "the spirit goeth away, and returneth not again." To this purpose the Arabic, "He remembered that they were flesh; and a spirit which, when it departs, returneth not; and these are easily separated, and when separated, the body turns to dust, and the spirit returns no more to animate the body in a state of probation. So He caught, after it has passed the barrier of the teeth."—Bagster. 65]

47 He <sup>w</sup> destroyed their vines with <sup>x</sup> hail, and their sycamore trees with <sup>y</sup> frost.

48 He <sup>z</sup> gave up their cattle also to the hail, and their flocks to <sup>a</sup> hot thunderbolts.

49 He cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble, by sending evil angels among them.

50 He <sup>b</sup> made a way to his anger; he spared not their soul from death, but gave their <sup>c</sup> life over to the pestilence;

51 And smote all the <sup>d</sup> first-born in Egypt; the chief of their strength in the tabernacles of Ham:

52 But made his own people to go forth like sheep, and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

53 And <sup>e</sup> he led them on safely, so that they feared not: but the sea <sup>f</sup> overwhelmed their enemies.

54 And he brought them to the border of his sanctuary, even to this mountain, which his right hand had purchased.

55 He cast out the heathen also before them, and divided <sup>g</sup> them an inheritance by line, and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.

56 Yet they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies:

57 But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside like a deceitful bow.

58 For <sup>h</sup> they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealousy with their graven images.

59 When God heard this, he was wroth, and greatly abhorred Israel:

60 So that he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men;

61 And delivered his strength into captivity, and his glory into the enemy's hand.

62 He <sup>i</sup> gave his people over also unto the sword; and was wroth with his inheritance.

63 The fire consumed their young men; and their maidens were not <sup>j</sup> given to marriage.

64 Their priests fell by the sword; and their widows made no lamentation.

65 Then the Lord awaked <sup>k</sup> as one out of sleep, and like a mighty man <sup>l</sup> that shouteth by reason of wine.

66 And <sup>m</sup> he smote his enemies in the hinder part: he put them to a perpetual reproach.

67 Moreover he refused the tabernacle of

<sup>w</sup> killed.

<sup>x</sup> Ex. 9.23.

<sup>y</sup> or, great hailstones.

<sup>z</sup> shut up.

<sup>a</sup> or, lightnings.

<sup>b</sup> weighed a path.

<sup>c</sup> or, beasts to the murrain.

<sup>d</sup> Ex. 12.29.

<sup>e</sup> Ex. 14, 15.

<sup>f</sup> covered.

<sup>g</sup> Jos. 19.51.

<sup>h</sup> Ju. 2.12, 20.

<sup>i</sup> 1 Sa. 4.10, 11.

<sup>j</sup> praised.

<sup>k</sup> Ps. 7.6.

<sup>l</sup> Is. 42.13.

<sup>m</sup> 1 Sa. 5.6, 12.

<sup>n</sup> Ge. 49.10.

<sup>o</sup> Ps. 87.2.

<sup>p</sup> founded.

<sup>q</sup> 2 Sa. 7.3.

<sup>r</sup> after.

<sup>s</sup> Is. 40.11.

<sup>t</sup> 1 Ki. 9.4.

<sup>u</sup> or, for.

<sup>v</sup> La. 1.10.

<sup>w</sup> Ps. 74.2, 7.

<sup>x</sup> 2 Ki. 25.9, 10.

<sup>y</sup> Mi. 3.12.

<sup>z</sup> Je. 16.4, 34.20.

<sup>a</sup> De. 28.37.

<sup>b</sup> Zep. 1.18.

<sup>c</sup> Je. 10.25.

<sup>d</sup> Re. 16.1.

<sup>e</sup> Ps. 130.3.

<sup>f</sup> Is. 64.9.

<sup>g</sup> or, the iniquities of them that were before us.

<sup>h</sup> De. 28.43.

<sup>i</sup> vengeance.

<sup>j</sup> Ps. 102.20.

<sup>k</sup> thine arm.

<sup>l</sup> or, reserve the children of death.

Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim

68 But chose the tribe of <sup>a</sup> Judah, the mount <sup>b</sup> Zion which he loved.

69 And he built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath <sup>c</sup> established for ever.

70 He chose David <sup>d</sup> also his servant, and took him from the sheepfolds:

71 From <sup>e</sup> following the ewes great with young he brought him to feed <sup>f</sup> Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

72 So he fed them according to the integrity <sup>g</sup> of his heart; and guided them by the skillfulness of his hands.

PSALM LXXIX.

1 The psalmist complaineth of the desolation of Jerusalem. 8 He prayeth for deliverance, 13 and promiseth thankfulness.

A Psalm <sup>a</sup> of Asaph.

O GOD, the heathen <sup>b</sup> are come into thine inheritance; thy <sup>c</sup> holy temple have they defiled; they <sup>d</sup> have laid Jerusalem on heaps.

2 The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the flesh of thy saints unto the beasts of the earth.

3 Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem; and there was none <sup>e</sup> to bury them.

4 We are become a reproach <sup>f</sup> to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

5 How long, Lord, wilt thou be angry for ever? shall thy jealousy <sup>g</sup> burn like fire?

6 Pour <sup>h</sup> out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name.

7 For they have devoured Jacob, and laid waste his dwelling place.

8 O <sup>i</sup> remember not against us <sup>j</sup> former iniquities: let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very <sup>k</sup> low.

9 Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name: and deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake.

10 Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is their God? let him be known among the heathen in our sight <sup>l</sup> by the <sup>m</sup> revenging of the blood of thy servants which is shed.

11 Let <sup>n</sup> the sighing of the prisoner come before thee; according to the greatness of <sup>o</sup> thy power <sup>p</sup> preserve thou those that are appointed to die;

never could have been forgotten, and perhaps literally they never were: but there is a vast difference between that vague recollection which we all preserve of our infantile history, and that gratitude due to a kind parent for his attentions in early life. Few of us can forget that we are creatures; yet who among us remembers his Creator with such lively sentiments of gratitude and praise, as that relation demands from us? But with respect to the passage in the wilderness, this forgetfulness seems more remarkable. "While their meat was yet in their mouths," and while their bread was daily showered down upon them out of heaven, for all this they sinned still, and believed not for his wondrous works." Their infidel philosophers, probably, persuaded them that, from the long continued supplies received, they must originate from some natural cause; and even when they got possession of Canaan, though that too was by miracle, or rather a chain of miracles, they fondly concluded that "their own arm had gotten them the victory." Thus prone are mankind, in every age, and in every country, to attribute to themselves the glory which they should give to God. Most surprising is it, that Christians, under the clear revelation of the gospel, should be guilty of the same sin and folly, and in the language of the Jewish maritime proverb, "sacrifice to their own net, and burn incense to their own drag." (Hab. i. 16.)

"How few with pious care record
The wondrous dealings of the Lord!
But wise observers still shall find
The Lord is holy, just, and kind."—Watts.

PSALM LXXIX. Ver. 1—13. The temple defiled and destroyed by the heathen.—This psalm strongly resembles another psalm of Asaph, namely, the seventy-fourth, both in its style and subject, which was evidently the destruction of the temple

Ver. 47. Sycamore.—[From the value of the sycamore in furnishing wood for various uses, from the grateful shade which its wide spreading branches afforded, and on account of the fruit, which Madlet says the Egyptians hold in the highest estimation, we may conceive somewhat of the loss they sustained when "their vines were destroyed with hail, and their sycamore trees with frost." See note on 1 Ch. xxvii. 28.]—Bagster.—With Frost.—See Ex. ix. 24, 25. So recently as May, 1822, Dr. Nagerath mentions a hail-shower in Boan, which broke all the glass windows, and even perforated the slates, like bullets: "their general size, an inch and a half in diameter."

Ver. 49. Evil angels.—"Angels of evil," Job i. 12, 16, &c. or, "messengers of evil;" namely, Moses and Aaron.

Ver. 50. Gave their life over to the pestilence.—See margin. See Exod. ix. a. Our version connects with the death of the first-born, in the verse following.

Ver. 54. Border of his sanctuary.—"Holiness;" i. e. the holy land.

Ver. 59. Greatly abhorred.—"Loath," "Utterly rejected;" or, "refused with oathing."—Ainsworth.

Ver. 63. The fire consumed them.—That is, the fire of God's wrath. See Num. xvi. 35. 1 Sam. iv. 16, &c.—Their maidens were not given in marriage.—That is, they had no marriage festivities.

Ver. 64. Their priests fell, &c. See 1 Sam. iv. 16—20.

Ver. 65. Like a mighty man.—A warrior, animated with wine.

Ver. 69. Like high palaces.—Like a royal residence, in an elevated situation; and established upon a solid foundation, like a rock.

PSALM LXXIX. Ver. 3. None to bury them.—[Either there was no friend or relation left to bury them, or none was allowed to perform this last sad office. The despotism of eastern princes often proceeds to such a degree of extravagance as to fill the mind with astonishment and horror. In Morocco, no person dares to bury the body of a malefactor without an order from the emperor; and Windus, speaking of a man who was sawed in two, informs us, that "his body must have remained to be eaten by the dogs, if the emperor had not pardoned him."—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Former iniquities.—See margin. That is, the iniquities of former times, or persons.—Ainsworth.

12 And render unto our neighbours seven fold into their bosom their reproach, where-with they have reproached thee, O LORD.

13 So we thy people and sheep of thy pasture will give thee thanks for ever: we will show forth thy praise to all generations.

PSALM LXXX.

<sup>1</sup> The psalmist in his prayer complained of the miseries of the church. <sup>8</sup> God's former favours are turned into judgments. <sup>14</sup> He prayeth for deliverance.

To the chief Musician upon <sup>a</sup> Shoshannim-Eduth, A Psalm <sup>b</sup> of Asaph.

GIVE ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest <sup>c</sup> Joseph like a flock; <sup>d</sup> thou that dwellest between the cherubims, shine <sup>e</sup> forth.

2 Before <sup>f</sup> Ephraim and Benjamin and Manasseh stir up thy strength, and come <sup>g</sup> and save us.

3 Turn <sup>h</sup> us again, O God, and cause thy face <sup>i</sup> to shine; and we shall be saved.

4 O LORD God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy people?

5 Thou feedest them with the <sup>k</sup> bread of tears; and givest them tears to drink in great measure.

6 Thou <sup>l</sup> makest us a strife unto our neighbours: and our enemies laugh among themselves.

7 Turn us again, O God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

8 Thou hast brought a vine <sup>m</sup> out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.

9 Thou preparedst room before it, and didst cause it to take deep root, and it filled the land.

10 The hills were covered with the shadow

p Ps. 74.18
q Is. 43.21.
r generation and generation.
a Ps. 80. title.
b or, for.
c Ps. 23.1. 77.20.
d Ex. 25.20. 2 Sa. 6.2.
e De. 33.2.
f Na. 2.18. 24.
g for salvation to us.
h ver. 7.19. La. 5.21.
i Nu. 6.25.
j smoke. Ps. 74.1.
k Ps. 42.3. Is. 30.20.
l Ps. 79.4.
m Is. 61.7. Je. 2.21.
n cedars of God.
o Na. 2.2.
p Is. 63.15.
q Is. 11.1. &c. Zec. 3.8.
r Ps. 76.7.
s Is. 53.5.
t Ep. 2.1,5.
a Ps. 8. title.
b or, for.

of it, and the boughs thereof were like the goodly cedars.

11 She sent out her boughs unto the sea, and her branches unto the river.

12 Why hast thou then broken down her hedges, so that all they which pass by the way do pluck her?

13 The boar out of the wood doth waste it and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.

14 Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts: look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine;

15 And the vineyard which thy right hand hath planted, and the branch that thou madest strong for thyself.

16 It is burned with fire, it is cut down: they perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.

17 Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, upon the son of man whom thou madest strong for thyself.

18 So will not we go back from thee: quicken us, and we will call upon thy name.

19 Turn us again, O LORD God of hosts, cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

PSALM LXXXI.

<sup>1</sup> An exhortation to a solemn praising of God. <sup>4</sup> God challengeth that duty upon reason of his benefits. <sup>8</sup> God, exhorting to obedience, complaineth of their disobedience, which proveth their own hurt.

To the chief Musician upon <sup>a</sup> Gittith, A Psalm <sup>b</sup> of Asaph.

SING aloud unto God our strength: make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob.

2 Take a psalm, and bring hither the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the psaltery.

3 Blow up the trumpet in the new moon, in and of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar and his army, when the bodies of the murdered inhabitants were left to be food to the eagles and vultures—to wolves and foxes. The cry for vengeance upon the heathen, (ver. 6 and 7,) is literally quoted by Jeremiah, (chap. x. 25.) unless we suppose him to have written first, and then the citation is Asaph's. The cry for vengeance may rather be considered as proceeding from the blood of the murdered innocents than from the revenge of the survivors; but others consider it simply as a prediction of the judgments which God had determined and denounced against his enemies. (Rev. xviii. 6, 20; xix. 2, &c.)

On the following prayer, "O revenge not against us former iniquities!" &c. Bishop Horne remarks: "Affliction hath then wrought its intended effect, when it hath convinced us of sin, and led us to repentance; when, brought back by it to the house and presence of our heavenly Father, we acknowledge our guilt as the cause of our misery, and entreat forgiveness of the one, in order to obtain a release of the other; not pleading our own merits, but the mercies of God our Saviour, and the glory of his name."

PSALM LXXX. Ver. 1—19. God, the shepherd of Israel, planted the vineyard of his church, which was now attacked by the heathen.—There being some doubt as to the person of Asaph, and the period in which he lived, there is, consequently, a doubt as to what period of the Jewish history this refers; but we incline to the opinion of Bishop Patrick, that it was written in the reign of Hezekiah, king of Judah. That it was before the loss of the ark, with the cherubim, may be inferred from the first verse; yet it appears to refer to a period of greater calamity from the heathen, than is to be found in the reign of David. The learned prelate just referred to, therefore considers Senacherib as the wild boar of the wood, (ver. 13.) in reference to whom Hezekiah himself prays in the very language of this psalm. (See 2 Kings xix. 15, 16.)

In the opening of this psalm, JEHOVAH is represented as a shepherd leading his flock, as the eastern custom is; going before them with the ark, followed by the several tribes, of which Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh, appear to have led the van in their processions: but now the heathen had made such ravages among them, that, instead of bread from heaven, and water from the rock, tears and lamentations had become both their meat and drink.

Ver. 8. commences another allegory, in which Israel is described as a vine brought out of Egypt, and planted in Canaan, where it so flourished as to fill the land; and sent out branches as far as the Mediterranean on the west, and to the Euphrates on the east. On the north, also, its shadow covered the hills of Lebanon, and crowned the cedars with its fruit. But now the Almighty had withdrawn his protection, they were like a vineyard without a fence, exposed not only to the attacks of strangers, but to the ravages of wild beasts, to whom their heathen conquerors might be well compared. (See Isa. v. 1—7; Jer. iv. 7.)

The prayer, (ver. 17.) "Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand," &c. is supposed by many to have reference to the king, whether David or Hezekiah; but the most eminent commentators, Jewish as well as Christian, refer it ultimately and chiefly to the Messiah. "Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand;" that is, upon the man whom thou hast placed at thy right hand, "whom thou hast made strong for thyself;" or, as David expresses it, "the rod of thy strength," or mighty sceptre. Upon him, "lay thy hand"—on him, confer all authority, that he may establish thy church, and subdue their enemies. (Compare Psalm cx.)

The last verse forms the chorus of the psalm, which occurs also verses 3 and 7.

PSALM LXXXI. Ver. 1—16. An Ode for the Feast of Trumpets.—"This psalm," says Bishop Lowth, "is an ode composed for the feast of trumpets, in the first new moon of the civil year;" and is "permeated by an exquisite union of sublimity and sweetness. The exordium contains an exhortation to celebrate the praises of the Almighty with music and song,

Ver. 12. Seven-fold.—That is, abundantly.
PSALM LXXX. Title.—This title is nearly the same as that of psalm lx. which see.

Ver. 1. Between the cherubims.—Or, "who inhabiteth the cherubim," which were over the ark, and considered as the throne of Jehovah; or if the celestial cherubim be here referred to, they constituted (as it were) his state carriage. Ps. civ. 3, 4.

Ver. 2. Before Ephraim, &c.—These tribes, in procession, followed immediately the ark.

Ver. 5. In great measure—i. e. in great abundance.

Ver. 10. The boughs thereof.—(Covered) the cedars of God.—Bishop Lowth. The cedars of God were the original tenants of the forest, planted by no human hand, and these are represented in the allegory, as covered with the branches of the vine of Israel; that is, the land of Israel, in its most prosperous days, (the time of Solomon,) extended as far as Lebanon. To justify the allegory, it may be added, that in some eastern countries, the vines are trained up the standard trees, and sometimes spread themselves over the highest branches.

Ver. 13. The boar out of the wood doth waste it.—(The wild boar, chazir, is the parent stock of our domestic hog. He is much smaller, but stronger, and more undaunted; colour, an iron gray, inclining to black; snout, longer than that of the common breed; ears, comparatively short; tusks, very formidable; and habits, fierce and savage. He is particularly destructive to corn fields and vineyards; for which reason he was immolated to Ceres and Bacchus.)—Bishop Horne makes the same complaint, and Ward remarks that the buffaloes and wild hogs make the like ravages in the orchards of the Hindoos; to prevent which, men are placed day and night, in proper situations, to guard against them.

Ver. 15. The vineyard.—Ainsworth, "the stock;" Secker, "the plant."—The branch.—"The sun;" for in that language, branches are considered as offspring of the trees. The LXX. read, "the son of man;" and the Chaldee and some Rabbins apply this to Messiah, as in the seventeenth verse from which they appear to us to have borrowed the expression, and where it properly belongs.

Ver. 16. They perish.—This should either be rendered, as by our translators and Ainsworth, and then the words refer to the Vine of the Jewish church; but if in the future, as by Bishop Horsley, it must refer to their heathen persecutors. Bishop Horne mentions both, and the original will admit of either.

PSALM LXXXI. Title.—Upon Gittith. See note on the title of Psalm viii.

the time appointed, on our solemn feast day.

4 For this <sup>c</sup> was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob.

5 This he ordained in Joseph for a testimony, when he went out <sup>d</sup> through the land of Egypt: where I heard a <sup>e</sup> language that I understood not.

6 I removed his shoulder from the burden: his hands <sup>f</sup> were delivered from the <sup>g</sup> pots.

7 Thou calledst thee in trouble, and I delivered thee; I answered thee in the secret place of thunder: I proved <sup>h</sup> thee at the waters of <sup>i</sup> Meribah. Selah.

8 Hear, O my people, and I will testify unto thee: O Israel, if thou wilt hearken unto me;

9 There shall no strange god be in thee; neither shalt thou worship any strange god.

10 I <sup>j</sup> am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open <sup>k</sup> thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.

11 But <sup>l</sup> my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of me.

12 So <sup>m</sup> I gave them up <sup>n</sup> unto their own hearts' lust: and they walked in their own counsels.

13 Oh <sup>o</sup> that my people had hearkened unto me, and Israel had walked in my ways!

14 I should soon have subdued their enemies, and turned my hand against their adversaries.

15 The haters of the LORD should have <sup>p</sup> submitted themselves unto him: but their time should have endured for ever.

16 He should have fed them also with the <sup>q</sup> finest of the wheat: and with <sup>r</sup> honey out of the rock should I have satisfied thee.

PSALM LXXXII.

1 The psalmist, having exhorted the judges, 5 and reproved their negligence, 8 prayeth God to judge.

A Psalm <sup>a</sup> of Asaph.

GOD standeth in the congregation of the mighty; he <sup>b</sup> judgeth among the gods.

c Le. 23.24, 26.
d or, against.
e Ps. 114.1.
f passed away.
g Ex. 1.14.
h Ex. 17.2.
i or, strife.
j Ex. 20.2.
k Jn. 15.7.
l De. 32.15, 18.
m Ac. 7.42.
n or, to the hardness of their hearts, or, imaginations.
o Is. 43.18. De. 32.29.
p lied, or, yielded obedience. Ps. 66.3.
q fat.
r De. 32.13.
a or, for.
b 2 Ch. 19.6, 7.
c judge.
d Je. 22.3.
e Jn. 12.35.
f Ps. 75.3.
g moved.
h Jn. 10.24, 25.
i Re. 11.45.
a or, for.
b Is. 37.29.
c Ps. 31.20.
d Es. 3.6, 9.
e Ps. 2.2.
f heart.
g 2 Ch. 29.10.
h been on arm to.
i Nu. 31.12.
j Ju. 4.15.
k 24.

2 How long will ye judge unjustly, and accept the persons of the wicked? Selah.

3 <sup>a</sup> Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice <sup>d</sup> to the afflicted and needy.

4 Deliver the poor and needy: rid them out of the hand of the wicked.

5 They know not, neither will they understand; they walk on in <sup>e</sup> darkness: all the <sup>f</sup> foundations of the earth are <sup>g</sup> out of course.

6 I have said, Ye are <sup>h</sup> gods; and all of you are children of the Most High.

7 But ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes.

8 Arise, O God, judge the earth: for thou <sup>i</sup> shalt inherit all nations.

PSALM LXXXIII.

1 A complaint to God of the enemies' conspiracies. 9 A prayer against them that oppress the church.

A Song or Psalm <sup>a</sup> of Asaph.

KEEP not thou silence, O God: hold not thy peace, and be not still, O God.

2 For, lo, thine enemies make a <sup>b</sup> tumult: and they that hate thee have lifted up the head.

3 They have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden <sup>c</sup> ones.

4 They have <sup>d</sup> said, Come, and let us cut them off from <sup>e</sup> being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.

5 For they have consulted <sup>f</sup> together with one <sup>g</sup> consent: they are confederate against thee:

6 The <sup>h</sup> tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites; of Moab, and the Hagarenes;

7 Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek; the Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre;

8 Assur also is joined with them: they have <sup>i</sup> holpen the children of Lot. Selah.

9 Do unto them as unto the <sup>j</sup> Midianites; as to <sup>k</sup> Sisera, as to Jabin, at the brook of Kison:

and is replete with animation and joy, even to exultation. The commemoration of the giving of the law, associated with the sound of the trumpet, (which was the signal of liberty,) introduces in a manner spontaneously, the miseries of the Egyptian bondage, the recovery of their freedom, and the communication with God upon mount Sinai, (the awfulness of which is expressed in a very few words—"the secret place of thunder;") and, finally, the contention with their Creator at the waters of Meribah. . . . The remainder of the ode contains an affectionate expostulation of God with his people, a confirmation of his former promises, and a tender complaint, that his favourable intentions towards them have been so long prevented by their disobedience. Thus the object and end of this poem appears to be an exhortation to obedience, from a consideration of the paternal love, the beneficence, and the promises of the Deity," the God of Israel.

The doctrine of the psalm is, that God delights in the exercise and display of mercy and goodness; and that all our deficiencies in comfort and blessedness, arise solely from our own ingratitude and disobedience.

PSALM LXXXII. Ver. 1-8. The Magistrate's Psalm.—This psalm is addressed to magistrates and judges, and reminds them, that though they were appointed to judge the people, there was one to judge them: "God standeth in the congregation of the mighty: He judgeth among the gods." (See 2 Chron. xix. 6, 7.) In all arbitrary countries, it is well known that justice is bought and sold; and, of course, "the poor and fatherless" seldom can obtain it. Nothing tends so much as this to shake the foundation of a government, or renders it so obnoxious to the Supreme Governor of the world. Magistrates and judges should, therefore, always remember that they are mortal, and that there is a bar before which themselves must

Ver. 5. Heard a language.—[All the versions, except the Chaldee, read in the third person, instead of the first:—"He heard a language which he understood not;" but probably the Psalmist speaks in the name of the nation, who appear to have been ignorant of the language of their haughty oppressors.]—Magister.

Ver. 6. His hands were delivered from the pots.—Ainsworth, "from the baskets;" meaning, "from the vessels in which they carried straw, mortar, bricks," &c.

Ver. 15. Submitted themselves.—See margin.—Their time.—That is, the time of his people.—Bishop Horne.

PSALM LXXXII. [Some refer this psalm to the time of David, and others to that of Hezekiah; but it is more probable that it was composed when Jehoshaphat reformed the courts throughout his kingdom, 2 Chron. xix. 6, 7.]—Earster.

Ver. 1. God standeth, &c.—[Or, "God standeth in the assembly of God, he stand, and be judged according to "the things done in the body, whether they be good or evil." (2 Cor. v. 10.)

This psalm (as several others) concludes with a prayer for the universality of his reign, who alone doth reign in righteousness. (See Psalm ii. 8.)

"Arise, O Lord, and let thy Son Possess his universal throne; And rule the nations with his rod; He is our judge, and he our God."—Watts.

PSALM LXXXIII. Ver. 1-18. A prayer against those enemies who had plotted against the church.—"It is the common opinion, (says Bishop Patrick,) that the combination of powerful enemies, against whom they (the Jews) here implore the divine assistance, was that mentioned in the days of Jehoshaphat. (2 Chron. chap. xx.) The reason of which is, because the children of Lot (the Moabites and Ammonites, ver. 8.) seem to have been the principals in this confederacy, and the others but assistants, as it is plain they were in that invasion." (2 Chron. xx. 2.)

The prayer against these combined powers is founded upon their avowed design of extirpating Israel as a nation; and Bishop Horne compares their confederacy to that of the Jews and Romans against our Saviour. "The punishments inflicted by heaven upon wicked men, are primarily intended to humble and convert them. If they continue incorrigible under every dispensation of merciful severity, they are at last cut off, and finally destroyed, that others, admonished by their example, may repent and return, and give glory to God. Salutory are the afflictions which bring men, and happy the men who are brought by them, to an acknowledgment of 'Jehovah our Righteousness,' our exalted and glorified Redeemer, 'the Most High over all the earth;' whom all must acknowledge, and be-judgeth among the judges." God is among His own people; and presides especially in those courts of justice which Himself has established.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. They walk on in darkness.—That is, in ignorance.—Out of course.

Ver. 7. Like one of the other princes.—No rank or office among mortals can confer immortality. Princes die like other men.

PSALM LXXXIII. Ver. 6. The tabernacles.—[Tents are mentioned, because it was the custom of these people, particularly the Ishmaelites, to live a migratory or wandering life; encamping sometimes in one place, and sometimes tained by their descendants to the present day.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Gebal.—[From being united with Ammon, it is probable that these were not the Gibeites, (1 Kings v. 18.) or inhabitants of Gebal on the Mediterranean, but the inhabitants of the northern part of Seir, or Edom now called Liebal, and mentioned by Burckhardt.]—Bagster.

10 Which perished at En-dor: they became as dung for the earth.

11 Make their nobles like Oreb, <sup>k</sup> and like Zeeb: yea, all their princes as Zebah, <sup>l</sup> and as Zalmunna:

12 Who said, Let us take to ourselves the houses of God in possession.

13 O my God, make them like a wheel; as <sup>m</sup> the stubble before the wind.

14 As the fire burneth the wood, and as the flame setteth the mountains on fire;

15 So persecute them with thy tempest, and make them afraid with thy storm.

16 Fill their faces with shame; that they may seek thy name, O LORD.

17 Let them be confounded and troubled for ever; yea, let them be put to shame, and perish:

18 That men may know that thou, whose name <sup>n</sup> alone is JEHOVAH, art the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM LXXXIV.

The prophet, long<sup>g</sup> for the communion of the sanctuary, 4 sheweth how blessed they are that dwell therein. 8 He prayeth to be restored unto it.

To the chief Musician upon <sup>a</sup> Gittith, A Psalm <sup>b</sup> for the sons of Korah.

HOW amiable <sup>c</sup> are thy tabernacles, O LORD of hosts!

2 My <sup>e</sup> soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

3 Yea, the sparrow hath found a house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars, O LORD of hosts, my King, and my God.

4 Blessed <sup>d</sup> are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee. Selah.

5 Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee; in whose heart are the ways of them.

fore whom all must appear to be judged in the great and terrible day."

"Then shall the nations know,
That glorious dreadful word:
JEHOVAH is thy name alone,
And thou the sovereign Lord."—Watts.

PSALM LXXXIV. Ver. 1—12. The blessings of public worship.—"This psalm, for the subject matter of it, (says Bishop Horne), bears a resemblance to the forty-second. Under the figure of an Israelite deprived of all access to Jerusalem and the sanctuary, (whether it were David when driven away by Absalom, or any person in like circumstances at a different time), we are presented with the earnest longing of a devout soul after the house and presence of God—a beautiful and passionate eulogy on the blessedness of his ministers and servants; a fervent prayer for a participation of that blessedness; and an act of faith in his power and goodness, which render him both able and willing to grant requests of this nature." He seems to wish that he were a bird, that he might be allowed to take up his residence in the sanctuary, to see and hear all that passed in the inner courts, where only the priests were allowed to enter and to worship. After a passionate admiration of God's tabernacle, he exclaims—

"Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee,
In whose heart are (thy) highways.
Passing through the valley of Baca, they make a well;
Yea, the rain overfloweth the pools,
They shall go from strength to strength;
The God of gods shall appear (to them) in Zion."

Then the Psalmist resumes his first idea:

"For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand.
I would choose to keep the threshold of my God,
Rather than to inhabit the tents of wickedness."

"This beautiful, but difficult psalm, describes the character

Ver. 13. Like a wheel.—Bishop Lovth renders it, "As the chaff whirled about," i. e. like chaff in the whirlwind. So Atinsworth. But Bishop Horne renders it, "Like the thistle-down," which is in the form of a wheel.

Ver. 14. As fire burneth the wood.—[In uncultivated countries, it is a usual practice to set the woods on fire, as the first step towards clearing the land; a custom alluded to by Homer.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Let them, &c.—Bishop Horne renders these verbs in the future, as part of them are in the original.

PSALM LXXXIV. [Some suppose this psalm was composed by David, when driven from Jerusalem by Absalom's rebellion: but it is more probable that it was written at the foundation of the second temple.]—Bagster.—Title.—For the sons of Korah. It is admitted, that the Hebrew preposition here used (lamad) may be translated either by, to, or for. When applied to an individual, we consider it as marking the author by whom it was written, or the musician to whose care it was addressed, for adapting it to music. But when addressed to a company of chorists, as the sons of Korah, there seems no doubt but it was intended for them to sing it.

k Ju.7.25

l Ju.8.12.
21.

m Is.17.13,
14.
Mat.12.3.

n Is.42.3.

a Ps.8. title.

b or, of.

c Ps.27.4.

d Ps.65.4.

e or, mulberry trees make him a well.
2 Sa.5.23.

f covereth.

g Job 17.9.
Pr.4.13.

h or, company to company.

i Jn.10.23.

j Ge.15.1.

k I would choose rather to sit at the threshold.

l Is.60.19.

m Ph.4.19.

a or, of.

b or, well pleased with.

c Ps.77.7.

d or, thine anger from voicing hot.

e De.13.17.

6 Who passing through the valley of <sup>a</sup> Baca make it a well; the rain also <sup>f</sup> filleth the pools

7 They <sup>g</sup> go from <sup>b</sup> strength to strength, every one <sup>i</sup> of them in Zion appear<sup>h</sup>eth before God.

8 O LORD God of hosts, hear my prayer: give ear, O God of Jacob. Selah.

9 Behold, O God our <sup>j</sup> shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.

10 For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I <sup>k</sup> had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

11 For the LORD God is <sup>l</sup> a sun and shield: the LORD will give grace and glory: no good <sup>m</sup> thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly.

12 O LORD of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee.

PSALM LXXXV.

1 The psalmist, out of the experience of former mercies, prayeth for the continuance thereof. 8 He promiseth to wait thereon, out of confidence of God's goodness.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm <sup>a</sup> for the sons of Korah.

LORD, thou hast been <sup>b</sup> favourable unto thy land: thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob.

2 Thou hast forgiven <sup>c</sup> the iniquity of thy people, thou hast covered all their sin. Selah.

3 Thou hast taken away all thy wrath: thou hast turned <sup>d</sup> thyself from the fierceness of thine anger.

4 Turn us, O God of our salvation, and cause thine anger toward us to cease.

5 Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations?

6 Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?

7 Show us thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy salvation.

of an Old Testament believer, as one who delighted in the house of God, because there he enjoyed communion with him; as one that preferred sitting on the threshold of the tabernacle to a splendid residence in the tents of sinners. The world, to such, may be as the rugged and thirsty vale of Baca; yet here faith will find resources in the fountain of mercy, and with joy shall they draw water from the wells of salvation. Or, if we prefer the other rendering, 'the vale of tears' becomes a vale of blessings, when the believer, refreshed by the teachings of the Spirit, (which some understand by the rain,) is enabled to go on from strength to strength, from station to station, till, at the completion of his journey, he shall behold the face of God in Zion."

To such the Lord is both a sun and shield—to them he communicates both grace and glory:—grace to strengthen them in the way, and glory to crown them in the end. Well may the Psalmist conclude, "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord."

"They go from strength to strength
Through this dark vale of tears,
Till each arrives at length,
Till each in heaven appears:
O glorious seat, when God our king,
Shall hither bring our willing feet."—Watts.

PSALM LXXXV. Ver. 1—13. A Prayer for deliverance from captivity, as typical of salvation by Christ.—The first three verses of this psalm, Bishop Horne remarks, "speak of the deliverance from captivity, as already brought about, whereas in the subsequent parts of the psalm, it is prayed for and predicted as a thing future. To account for this, some suppose that the psalmist first returns thanks for a temporal redemption, and then prophecies of the spiritual salvation of Messiah. Others are of opinion, that the same eternal redemption is spoken of throughout, but represented in the beginning of

Ver. 3. And the swallow.—[Or, rather, "Even as the sparrow findeth a house, and the swallow, (or the ring-dove according to some, but probably the bird which Forsk. mentions among the migratory birds of Alexandria, by the name of durru.) a nest for herself where she may lay her young, (so I seek) thine altars, O Jehovah, God of Hosts, my King and my God." That is, as nature inclineth birds to seek and prepare their nests, so grace has taught me to desire thy altars, and to worship thee.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. In whose heart are the ways of them.—We have supplied the pronoun thy, as more intelligible and natural: the "high-ways" here intended, are probably the causes (or causeways) leading to the temple.

Ver. 6. Passing through the valley of Baca.—"Baca," according to some means mulberry trees, which some say grow best in the driest situations: or tears, (so LXX.) or a rugged valley.—The rain also filleth the pools.—Bishop Horsley reads, "The pools which the rain hath filled;" which he explains to mean: They quench their thirst with rain water, as well satisfied as with the pure waters of a spring.

Ver. 7. From strength to strength.—Horsley, "From wall to wall!"—Mer-

8 I will hear what God the LORD will speak: for he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints: but <sup>e</sup> let them not turn again to folly.

9 Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him; that glory may dwell in our land.

10 Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness <sup>f</sup> and peace have kissed each other.

11 Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven.

12 Yea, the LORD shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase.

13 Righteousness <sup>h</sup> shall go before him; and <sup>i</sup> shall set us in the way of his steps.

PSALM LXXXVI.

1 David strengtheneth his prayer by the conscience of his religion, 5 by the goodness and power of God. 11 He desireth the continuance of former grace. 14 Complaining of the proud, he craveth some token of God's goodness.

A Prayer <sup>a</sup> of David.

BOW down thine ear, O LORD, hear me: for I am poor and needy.

2 Preserve my soul; for I am <sup>b</sup> holy: O thou my God, save thy servant that trusteth <sup>c</sup> in thee.

3 Be merciful unto me, O LORD: for I cry unto thee <sup>d</sup> daily.

4 Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul.

5 For <sup>e</sup> thou, LORD, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee.

6 Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer; and attend to the voice of my supplications.

7 In the day of my trouble I will <sup>f</sup> call upon thee: for thou wilt answer me.

8 Among the gods there is none <sup>g</sup> like unto

e Ps. 130. 4.
f Is. 32. 17.
g Ps. 34. 11.
h Ps. 59. 14.
i Ps. 119. 35.
a or, being of:
b or, one whom thou favour-est.
c Is. 26. 3.
d or, all the day.
e Joel 2. 13.
f Ps. 50. 15.
g Is. 40. 18, 25.

h De. 3. 24.
i Re. 15. 4.
j De. 32. 39.
1 Co. 8. 4.
k Ps. 119. 33.
l 1 Jn. 17. 20, 21.
m Ps. 145. 1, 2.
n Ps. 103. 11.
o 1 Th. 1. 10. p or, grave.
q terrible.
r Ps. 10. 4.
s Ne. 9. 17.
t Ps. 85. 10.
u Is. 45. 24.
v 2 Co. 5. 5.
a or, of.
b Ps. 48. 1.
c Ps. 73. 67,
68.

thee, O LORD; neither <sup>h</sup> are there any works like unto thy works.

9 All <sup>i</sup> nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O LORD; and shall glorify thy name.

10 For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone.

11 Teach <sup>k</sup> me thy way, O LORD; I will walk in thy truth: unite <sup>l</sup> my heart to fear thy name.

12 I <sup>m</sup> will praise thee, O LORD my God, with all my heart: and I will glorify thy name for evermore.

13 For great <sup>n</sup> is thy mercy toward me: and thou hast delivered <sup>o</sup> my soul from the lowest <sup>p</sup> hell.

14 O God, the proud are risen against me, and the assemblies of <sup>q</sup> violent men have sought after my soul; and have not set thee <sup>r</sup> before them.

15 But <sup>s</sup> thou, O LORD art a God full of compassion, and gracious, long-suffering, and plenteous in mercy <sup>t</sup> and truth.

16 O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me; give thy strength <sup>u</sup> unto thy servant, and save the son of thy handmaid.

17 Show me a token <sup>v</sup> for good; that they which hate me may see it, and be ashamed: because thou, LORD, hast holpen me, and comforted me.

PSALM LXXXVII.

1 The nature and glory of the church, 4 The increase, honour, and comfort of the members thereof.

A Psalm or Song <sup>a</sup> for the sons of Korah.

HIS foundation is in the holy <sup>b</sup> mountains.

2 The <sup>c</sup> LORD loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.

the psalm as already accomplished in the divine decree, though the eventual completion was yet to come. The difficulty, perhaps, may be removed, by rendering these first three verses in the present time; 'Lord, thou art favourable to thy land, thou bringest back the captivity of thy people,' &c. that is, thou art the God whose property it is to do this, and to show such mercy to thy people, who therefore call upon thee for the same. But, indeed, to us Christians, who now use the psalm, the difference is not material, since a part of our redemption is past, and a part of it is yet to come, for the hastening of which latter we daily pray."

Speaking of the concluding verses of this psalm, Bishop Lovett observes, "How admirable is that celebrated personification of the divine attributes by the psalmist! How just, elegant, and splendid does it appear, if applied only according to the literal sense, to the restoration of the Jewish nation from the Babylonish captivity! but if interpreted as relating to that sublimer, more sacred, and mystical sense, which is not obscurely shadowed under the ostensible image, it is certainly uncommonly noble and elevated, mysterious and sublime.

"Mercy and truth are met together: Righteousness and peace have kissed each other."

"These four divine attributes," says Bishop Horne, (above referred to,) "parted at the fall of Adam, and met again at the (cross) of Christ. Mercy was ever inclined to save man, and Peace could not be his enemy; but Truth exacted the performance of God's threat, 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die;' and Righteousness could not but give to every man his due. Jehovah must be true in all his ways, and righteous in all his works. Now, there is no religion upon earth, except the Christian, which can satisfy the demands of all these claimants, and restore a union between them; which can show how God's word can be true, and his work just, and the sinner, notwithstanding, find mercy and obtain peace.

"When Christ appeared in our nature, the promise was fulfilled, and 'Truth' sprang out of the 'earth.' And now Righteousness, 'looking down from heaven,' beheld in him every thing that she required—an undefiled birth, a holy life, an innocent death; a spirit and a mouth without guile, a soul and a body without sin. She saw, and was satisfied, and returned to earth. Thus all the four parties met again in perfect harmony. Truth ran to Mercy, and embraced her; Righteousness to Peace, and kissed her. . . . Those that are thus joined rick, "From station to station;" others, "From virtue to virtue," in the military sense. All come to the same effect: they persevere through all difficulty or opposition, having their hearts set on reaching Zion's hill.

PSALM LXXXV. Ver. 2. Thou hast covered.—To cover sin is to pardon it through an atonement. See Ps. xxxii. 1.

Ver. 4. Turn us, &c.—[The Israelites were not restored from their captivity all at once: a few returned with Zerubbabel, some more with Ezra and Nehemiah; but a great number still remained in Babylonia, Media, Assyria, &c.; and therefore the Psalmist prays for a complete restoration.]—Bagster.

PSALM LXXXVI. [This psalm is supposed to have been composed by David, either when persecuted by Saul, or driven from Jerusalem by Absalom. Ps. cii.—cxlii. titles.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. I am holy.—See margin. A subject of thy grace.

Ver. 13. From the lowest hell.—"Grave;" but Peter remarks, that if Sheol here meant only a deliverance from death and the grave, the expression inner or lowest, would be quite unnecessary.

PSALM LXXXVII. Ver. 1. His foundation.—[Or, "Its (that is, the city's, or Zion's) foundation is on holy mountains." Jerusalem was built on several hills, called holy, because the whole city was in an especial manner consecrated to God.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. His foundation.—[Or, "Its (that is, the city's, or Zion's) foundation is on holy mountains." Jerusalem was built on several hills, called holy, because the whole city was in an especial manner consecrated to God.]—Bagster.

"Great is thy mercy, and my tongue Shall those sweet wonders tell;
How, by thy grace, my sinking soul
Ross from the depths of hell."—Watts.

PSALM LXXXVII. Ver. 1—7. The praise of Zion.—Some commentators consider this psalm as having been composed on occasion of laying the foundation of Solomon's temple, and it was probably written on that, or some similar, occasion. Bishop Horne remarks,

"The psalmist, after having meditated on the strength, the beauty, and the glory of Jerusalem, being smitten with the love of the holy city, and imagining the thoughts of his hearers, or readers, to have been employed on the same subject, breaks forth at once in this abrupt manner: 'It is his foundation on the holy mountains.' By 'the holy mountains,' are meant those hills of Judea which Jehovah had chosen, and separated

vid, either when persecuted by Saul, or driven from Jerusalem by Absalom. Ps. cii.—cxlii. titles.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. I am holy.—See margin. A subject of thy grace.

Ver. 13. From the lowest hell.—"Grave;" but Peter remarks, that if Sheol here meant only a deliverance from death and the grave, the expression inner or lowest, would be quite unnecessary.

PSALM LXXXVII. Ver. 1. His foundation.—[Or, "Its (that is, the city's, or Zion's) foundation is on holy mountains." Jerusalem was built on several hills, called holy, because the whole city was in an especial manner consecrated to God.]—Bagster.

David's complaint in affliction. PSALMS.—LXXXVIII., LXXXIX.

He prayeth for compassion.

3 Glorious things <sup>d</sup> are spoken of thee, O city of God. Selah.

4 I will make mention of Rahab <sup>e</sup> and Babylon to them that know me: behold <sup>f</sup> Philistia, and Tyre, with <sup>g</sup> Ethiopia; this man was born there.

5 And of Zion it shall be said, <sup>h</sup> This and that man was born in her: and the highest himself shall establish her.

6 The LORD shall count, when he writeth <sup>i</sup> up the people, that this man was born there. Selah.

7 As well the singers as the players on instruments <sup>j</sup> shall be there: all my springs <sup>k</sup> are in thee.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

A prayer containing a grievous complaint.

A Song or Psalm <sup>a</sup> for the sons of Korah, to the chief Musician upon Mahalath Leannoth, <sup>b</sup> Maschil of <sup>c</sup> Heman the Ezrahite.

O LORD God of my salvation, I <sup>d</sup> have cried day and night before thee:

2 Let my prayer come before thee: incline mine ear unto my cry;

3 For my soul is full of troubles: and my life draweth nigh unto the grave.

4 I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am as a man that hath no strength:

5 Free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou rememberest no more: and they are cut off <sup>e</sup> from thy hand.

6 Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit, in darkness, in the depths.

7 Thy wrath <sup>f</sup> lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves. Selah.

d Is. 54, 2, &c.
e Is. 51, 9.
f Is. 19, 23, 25.
g Ps. 68, 31.
h Is. 60, 1, 9.
i Ez. 13, 9.
j 1 Ch. 23, 5.
k Job 1, 17.
a or, of.
b or, A Psalm of Heman the Ezrahite, giving instruction.
c 1 Ki. 4, 31.
d Lu. 18, 7.
e or, by.
f 1 Pe. 2, 24.
g Job 19, 13, &c.
h Job 12, 14.
i Is. 38, 18.
j Job 6, 4.
k Re. 6, 17.
l or, all the day.
a or, A Psalm for Ethan the Ezrahite to give instruction.
b 1 Ch. 2, 6.
c generation and generation. So, ver. 4. Ps. 119, 90.

8 Thou <sup>g</sup> hast put away mine acquaintance far from me; thou hast made me an abomination unto them: I am <sup>h</sup> shut up, and I cannot come forth.

9 Mine eye mourneth by reason of affliction: LORD, I have called daily upon thee, I have stretched out my hands unto thee.

10 Wilt <sup>i</sup> thou show wonders to the dead? shall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah.

11 Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction?

12 Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?

13 But unto thee have I cried, O LORD; and in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee.

14 LORD, why castest thou off my soul? why hidest thou thy face from me?

15 I am afflicted and ready to die from my youth up: while <sup>j</sup> I suffer thy terrors I am distracted.

16 Thy fierce wrath <sup>k</sup> goeth over me; thy terrors have cut me off.

17 They came round about me <sup>l</sup> daily like water; they compassed me about together.

18 Lover and friend hast thou put far from me, and mine acquaintance into darkness.

PSALM LXXXIX.

<sup>1</sup> The psalmist praiseth God for his covenant, 5 for his wonderful power, 15 for the care of his church, 19 for his favour to the kingdom of David. 38 Then complaining of contrary events, 46 he expostulateth, prayeth, and blesteth God.

<sup>a</sup> Maschil of <sup>b</sup> Ethan the Ezrahite.

I WILL sing of the mercies of the LORD forever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to <sup>c</sup> all generations.

2 For I have said, Mercy shall be built up to himself from all others, whereon to construct the highly-favoured city and temple. As the dwellings of Jacob in the promised land were beloved by him more than the dwellings of other nations, so he loved the gates of Sion more than all the dwellings of Jacob. Jerusalem was exalted and fortified by its situation, but much more so by the protection of the Almighty. What Jerusalem was, the Christian church is; 'built by God' 'on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone: in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord.' (Eph. ii. 20.) It is 'his foundation in the holy mountains'; she is beloved of God above the kingdoms and empires of the earth, which rise and fall only to fulfil the divine counsels concerning her. When those counsels shall be fulfilled, in the salvation of all believers, the world which subsists only for their sake, will be at an end."

The substance of what is said, as to the cities here named, seems to amount to this: that whereas they have all, in their turns, been famous for producing great and eminent men, Zion shall, in this respect, excel them all; and especially when He comes, whose "name is above every name," and whose glory shall give to Zion a pre-eminence, before which all other glories shall sink into insignificance, like the stars before the rising sun.

The concluding sentiment, (which some suppose to be the chorus to the ode,) "All my springs are in thee," may probably mean, in the English idiom, "all my hopes are there," or, as David expresses it in another case, "Herein is all my salvation, and all my desire!" (2 Sam. xxiii. 5.)

"Come then, O come from every land,
And worship at his shrine;
And walking in the light of God,
With holy beauty shine."—Logan.

PSALM LXXXVIII. Ver. 1—18. The lamentation of Heman the Ezrahite.—The author of this psalm is so distinguish-

Ver. 4. Rahab.—That is, Egypt. So Psalm lxxxix. 11. Isa. li. 9.—Philistia.—The country of the Philistines.—Ethiopia.—The land of Cush, which was in Arabia. [The sentiment in these verses seems to be similar to that of a Persian poet cited by Dr. Clarke: "What celebrity can Egypt or Syria, or any thing on earth, or the dance, pretend to? When compared to Sheeraz, those are but villages, but this alone is a city."—Bagster.]

Ver. 5. This and that man.—"A man and a man;" or, one and another. Dr. Durell renders it, "The man, even the man;" i.e. "the man" so long pursued and foretold; the Messiah.

Ver. 7. As well the singers as players.—Or dancers, shall be there; i.e. the whole chorus of joy and praise. Dr. Chandler renders it, "They shall sing like those that lead the dance;" i.e. with joy and exultation.

PSALM LXXXVIII. Title.—Mahalath-Leannoth. We have noticed the division of the Hebrew musical instruments into Neginoth, or stringed, and Nehiloth, or wind instruments: of these latter, some appear to have been called Mahaloth, which, if we may judge from the odes to which they were appropriated, (this psalm and the fifty-third,) was particularly adapted to plaintive and mournful subjects. The term leannoth evidently refers to an alternate performance, either in turn with other instruments, or with female mourners. For Maschil, see title of Ps. xxxii.

ed, says Scott, "according to the general opinion of learned men, as a descendant of Zerach, the son of Judah," and therefore "a different person from Heman, the chief singer in the reign of David, who was a Levite. It is not certain either at what time, or on what occasion, the psalm was composed;" but it was undoubtedly in a time of much calamity and distress, both in the church, and in the writer's own experience. This ode, therefore, resembles Ezekiel's roll, which was "written within and without—lamentations, and mourning, and wo." (Ezek. ii. 9, 10.)

The psalm was evidently composed either in deep captivity, or in a state of personal affliction, which the writer compares thereto; and in which the author considers himself as a dead man, with respect to all the hopes and comforts of the present life; and without that consolation, in reference to the future, which other good men have in like circumstances enjoyed. In this view the psalm has been, and we think justly, applied to him, who was eminently distinguished as a "man of sorrows," and "acquainted with" all the "griefs" to which man is subject; while at the same time, for our sakes, he submitted himself to that "fierce wrath" which allowed no intermixture of comfort, such as we are permitted to enjoy.

"Deep in our hearts let us record
The dying sorrows of our Lord,
When he complained in tears and blood,
As one forsaken of his God."—Watts.

PSALM LXXXIX. Ver. 1—32. God's covenant with David and his seed.—"Many learned men," says Scott, "are of opinion that this psalm was written during the Babylonish captivity, when the family of David being entirely dethroned, the promises of God seemed to be made void: but if it were composed at so late a period, no account can possibly be given why it was ascribed to Ethan the Ezrahite." (See 1 Kings iv. 31; 1 Chron. ii. 6.) "Indeed, it seems," adds that judicious commentator, "to contain internal evidence that it belongs to earlier

Ver. 4. As a man.—"A strong man without strength."

Ver. 5. Free among the dead.—Liberated from the cares and labours of this life. Job iii. 18, 19. Compare Isa. liii. 8. "Cut off from all intercourse with the living." Bishop Loxth. See 2 Kings xv. 5. "Cast out among the dead," (as mortally wounded).—Bishop Horsley.

Ver. 6. In the lowest pit.—Alluding to the dungeons of the captives. Ver. 8. Shut up.—Or rather, perhaps, shut down; namely, in the pit. Compare Ps. lix. 14, 15.

Ver. 10. Will thou show, &c.—[The interrogations in these verses imply the strongest negations.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. The beatings had some notion of this state; and feigned a river, in the invisible world, called Lethé, or Oblivion, and that those who drank of it remembered no more any thing relative to their former state. See Virgil.] Bagster.

Ver. 13. Prevent thee.—Come before the usual hour or morning prayer. See Mark i. 35.

Ver. 15. Ready to die.—Amsnooth, "Breathing out the ghost." See Matt. xxvii. 50.—I am distracted.—Amscooth, "Doubtfully troubled;" i.e. harassed with the most distressing feelings.

for ever: thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens.

3 I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn <sup>d</sup> unto David my servant, 4 Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.

5 And the heavens <sup>e</sup> shall praise thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints.

6 For who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD?

7 God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.

8 O LORD God of hosts, who <sup>f</sup> is a strong LORD like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee?

9 Thou <sup>g</sup> rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.

10 Thou hast broken <sup>h</sup> Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain; thou hast scattered thine enemies with <sup>i</sup> thy strong arm.

11 The heavens <sup>are</sup> thine, the earth also <sup>is</sup> thine: as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them.

12 The north and the south, thou hast created them: <sup>j</sup> Tabor and <sup>k</sup> Hermon shall rejoice in thy name.

13 Thou hast <sup>l</sup> a mighty arm: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

14 Justice <sup>m</sup> and judgment <sup>are</sup> the <sup>n</sup> habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face.

15 Blessed <sup>is</sup> the people that know the joyful <sup>o</sup> sound: they shall walk, O LORD, in the light <sup>p</sup> of thy countenance.

16 In thy name shall they rejoice all the day:

d 2 Sa. 7. 11, &c.

e Ps. 19. 1.

f 1 Sa. 2. 2.

g Job 38. 11.

h Ma. 4. 39, &c.

i or, Egypt.

j the arm of strength.

k Ju. 4. 6, 12.

l Jos. 12. 1.

m an arm of might.

n or, establishment.

o Is. 16. 5.

p 1e. 25. 9.

Ps. 93. 6.

Ro. 10. 18.

q Nu. 6. 26.

r 1 Co. 1. 30.

s or, our shield is of the LORD, and our king is of the holy one of Israel.

t Ps. 47. 9.

u Is. 33. 22.

v Is. 9. 6.

w 1 Sa. 16. 1.

x 2 Sa. 7. 8.

y Ps. 72. 8.

z Col. 1. 15, 16.

aa Re. 19. 16.

ab Is. 55. 3.

ac 2 Sa. 23. 5.

ad Je. 9. 13.

ae profane.

af 1a. 3. 31, 32.

ag I will not make void from.

and in thy righteousness <sup>a</sup> shall they be exalted.

17 For thou <sup>art</sup> the glory of thy strength: and in thy favour our horn shall be exalted.

18 For <sup>the</sup> LORD <sup>is</sup> our defence; and the Holy One of Israel <sup>is</sup> our <sup>k</sup> king.

19 Then thou spakest in vision to thy holy one, and saidst, I have laid help upon <sup>one</sup> that <sup>is</sup> <sup>v</sup> mighty; I have exalted <sup>one</sup> chosen out of the people.

20 I <sup>have</sup> found David my servant; with my holy oil have I anointed him:

21 With <sup>whom</sup> my hand shall be established: mine arm also shall strengthen him.

22 The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him.

23 And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him.

24 But my faithfulness and my mercy <sup>shall</sup> be with him: and in my name shall his horn be exalted.

25 I will set his hand also in the <sup>w</sup> sea, and his right hand in the rivers.

26 He shall cry unto me, Thou <sup>art</sup> my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation.

27 Also I will make him <sup>my</sup> <sup>x</sup> first-born, higher <sup>y</sup> than the kings of the earth.

28 My mercy <sup>z</sup> will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant <sup>a</sup> shall stand fast with him.

29 His seed also will I make <sup>to</sup> endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven.

30 If <sup>b</sup> his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments;

31 If they <sup>c</sup> break my statutes, and keep not my commandments;

32 Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes.

33 Nevertheless <sup>d</sup> my loving-kindness <sup>e</sup> will times; for none of the deliverances vouchsafed to Judah, after the days of David, are mentioned in it: and the psalmist, in complaining of the degraded and deplorable condition of David's family, is silent as to any desolations of Jerusalem and the temple, and the captivity and dispersion of the people; which the psalms evidently relating to Nebuchadnezzar's devastations, particularly insist upon." Scott refers the psalm, therefore, to the reign of Rehoboam. "Ten of the tribes, (he remarks), had revolted from him; Jeroboam, the king placed over them, was his powerful adversary; and Shishak, king of Egypt, so entirely reduced and impoverished him, that he seems only to have retained the kingdom by the clemency, and perhaps contempt, of his haughty conqueror." Supposing Ethan to have lived to this period, which is very possible, and to have witnessed the declension of Solomon and the degradation of Rehoboam, it may seem to account sufficiently for all the circumstances here referred to.

The first two verses professing strong confidence in God, with a determination to record his faithfulness to future generations, the verses following, Bishop Horne remarks—"assign the ground of such faith; namely, the covenant which God is here introduced as declaring that he had made with David, and which he did make with him by the prophet Nathan; (2 Sam. vii. 12, &c.) The covenant relates to David's 'seed,' and to the 'establishment of his throne' in that seed: literally, in Solomon for a time—spiritually, in Christ for ever: 'When thy days shall be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels; and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son.' These last words are cited by the apostle, (Heb. i. 5.) as spoken of Christ, to evince his superiority over the angels. Yet that the whole passage does, in the letter, relate to Solomon, can admit of no doubt, he being the 'seed' and immediate successor of David, and the person appointed to 'build a house for God's name.' Here, then, we have an incontestable proof that the covenant with David had Messiah for its object; that Solomon was a figure of him, and that the scripture hath sometimes a double sense. It is, moreover, to be observed, that the covenants made with Abraham, David, &c., all had their original in the covenant made with the Messiah, who was the true Father of the Faithful, the Beloved and Chosen of God, the great Prophet, Priest, and King; the only person qualified to be a sponsor, (or surety), and to engage in a covenant with the Father for mankind. His sufferings were the price of our redemption; and because he suffered in the flesh as 'the Son of David,' therefore is he established for ever, and 'his throne built up to all generations.' Remarkable are the words of the angel to Mary: 'The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever: and of his kingdom there shall be no end.' (Luke i. 32.)

Most beautiful is the allusion to the divine attributes, (verses 13 to 15.) His arm is arrayed in strength and raised on high, to cut down his enemies. Justice and judgment are in waiting to support the establishment of his throne; Mercy and Truth are the heralds, which go before to proclaim his goodness with the trumpets of the jubilee; and 'blessed are the people who know the joyful sound' of his salvation!

Ver. 33—52. God's faithfulness justified.—As it respects the covenant of peculiarity above referred to, Bishop Horne remarks—"The posterity of David were to enjoy God's favour, or be deprived of it, as they proved obedient or disobedient to his 'law'; as they executed or perverted its 'civil judgments'; as they observed or neglected its ceremonial 'statutes,' or religious institutions; as they kept or broke its commandments or moral precepts. When they became rebellious, idolatrous, and profligate, the rod was lifted up, and due chastisement inflicted; sometimes by the immediate hand of heaven, sometimes by the instrumentality of their heathen adversaries. Famine and pestilence, war and captivity, were at different times employed to reclaim backsliding Israel. But still the 'covenant' of God in Christ stood sure; the Jewish PSALM LXXXIX. Ver. 2. In the very heavens.—Ainsworth renders this both more literally and more elegantly; "The heavens, thou wilt establish thy faithfulness in them," i. e. it shall be there recorded, so long as the heavens themselves endure. See ver. 5.

Ver. 6. Sons of the mighty.—Or of the gods, (elims) meaning the gods of the heathen.

Ver. 7. Greatly to be feared.—"Daunting terrible," says Ainsworth; meaning, an object of awe and reverence, as in the following line.

Ver. 10. Rahab.—[Lower Egypt, which is enclosed by the eastern and western branches of the Nile, divided below Memphis, or Old Cairo, was called by the Greeks the Delta, from its representing the shape of the Greek letter so called. For the same reason, the learned Bochart, and others, think it was called Rahab, from the Egyptian Rib, Ribi, or Riph, a pear; by which name the Delta is called to the present day.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Tabor and Hermon.—Well known hills in the east and west of Canaan.

Ver. 19. Thy holy one.—The prophet Samuel, or Nathan. See exposition.

Ver. 22. Shall not exact upon him.—Bishop Horne, "Deceive him."—"Nor the son of wickedness afflict."—Horne, "Subdue him." The allusion appears to us to be made to a cruel and unjust creditor, who exacts not only his just debt, but some exaggerated demand, with usurious interest, which was not permitted.

Ver. 25. His hand in the sea, &c.—Meaning, that he should reign from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates. So the Scythian ambassadors said to Alex-

David's complaint and prayer.

PSALMS.—XC.

The frailty of human life.

I nor utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness <sup>f</sup> to fail.

34 My covenant will I not <sup>e</sup> break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

35 Once have I sworn by my holiness <sup>h</sup> that I will not lie unto David.

36 His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me.

37 It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah.

38 But <sup>i</sup> thou hast cast off and abhorred, thou hast been wroth with thine anointed.

39 Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant : thou hast profaned his crown by casting <sup>j</sup> it to the ground.

40 Thou hast broken down <sup>k</sup> all his hedges ; thou hast brought his strong holds to ruin.

41 All that pass by the way spoil him : he is a reproach to his neighbours.

42 Thou hast set up the right hand of his adversaries ; thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.

43 Thou hast also turned the edge of his sword, and hast not made him to stand in the battle.

44 Thou hast made his <sup>k</sup> glory to cease, and cast his throne down to the ground.

45 The days of his youth hast thou shortened : thou hast covered him with shame. Selah.

46 How long, Lord, wilt thou <sup>i</sup> hide thyself ? for ever ? shall thy wrath burn like fire ?

47 Remember how short my time is : wherefore hast thou made all men in vain ?

48 What <sup>m</sup> man is he that liveth, and shall not see death ? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave ? Selah.

49 Lord, where are thy former loving-kind-

<sup>f</sup> lie.

<sup>g</sup> Je.33.20.

<sup>h</sup> if <sup>i</sup> lie.

<sup>i</sup> 1 Ch.28.9.
Ps.60.1,10
Ho.9.17.

<sup>j</sup> Is.5.5,6.

<sup>k</sup> brightness

<sup>l</sup> Ps.85.5.

<sup>m</sup> He.9.27.

<sup>n</sup> ver.35.

<sup>o</sup> Hab.3.17
..19.

<sup>p</sup> or, being a Paulist of.

<sup>q</sup> De.33.1.

<sup>r</sup> Ps.71.3.
Eze.11.16.

<sup>d</sup> generation and generation.

<sup>e</sup> Pr.8.25,26

<sup>f</sup> Ge.3.19.

<sup>g</sup> or, he hath passed them.

<sup>h</sup> Is.40.6.

<sup>i</sup> or, is changed.

<sup>j</sup> Job 14.2.

<sup>k</sup> Je.2.22.

<sup>l</sup> turned.

<sup>m</sup> or, meditation.

nesses, which thou swarest <sup>a</sup> unto David in thy truth ?

50 Remember, Lord, the reproach of thy servants ; how I do bear in my bosom the reproach of all the mighty people ;

51 Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O Lord ; wherewith they have reproached the footsteps of thine anointed.

52 Blessed <sup>b</sup> be the Lord for evermore. Amen and Amen.

PSALM XC.

1 Moses, setting forth God's providence, 3 complaineth of human fragility, 7 divine chastisements, 10 and brevity of life. 12 He prayeth for the knowledge and sensible experience of God's good providence.

A Prayer <sup>a</sup> of Moses the man <sup>b</sup> of God.
L<sup>c</sup>ord, thou hast been our dwelling place in <sup>d</sup> all generations.

2 Before <sup>e</sup> the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God.

3 Thou turnest man to destruction ; and say-est, <sup>f</sup> Return, ye children of men.

4 For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when <sup>g</sup> it is past, and as a watch in the night.

5 Thou carriest them away as with a flood ;
they are as a sleep : in the morning they are like grass <sup>h</sup> which <sup>i</sup> groweth up.

6 In <sup>j</sup> the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up ; in the evening it is cut down, and wither-eth.

7 For we are consumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath are we troubled.

8 Thou <sup>k</sup> hast set our iniquities before thee our secret sins in the light of thy countenance.

9 For all our days are <sup>l</sup> passed away in thy wrath : we spend our years as a <sup>m</sup> tale that is told.

nation was preserved through all changes and revolutions, 'until the seed came to whom the promise was made ;' nor was Jerusalem destroyed before the new and spiritual kingdom of Messiah was set up in the earth. Christian communities and the individuals that compose them, are in like manner, corrected and punished for their offences. 'Nevertheless, God's loving-kindness will he not utterly take from us, nor suffer his faithfulness to fail. His covenant will he not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of his lips.' So—'I am with you always, (says the Redeemer,) even to the end of the world : and the gates of hell shall not prevail against my church.' (Matt. xviii. 20 ; xvi. 18.)

When we charge God foolishly with the want of fidelity to his word, it is either, 1. Because we misconstrue its meaning ; or, 2. From want of considering that we can have no claim upon God for the fulfilment of his promises, while we neglect his precepts.

In the conclusion of this psalm, we find what was the "reproach of Christ" which Moses suffered. (Heb. xi. 26.) The promise of a Messiah was given to Adam immediately after the fall, and renewed to all the succeeding patriarchs. Moses repeated it to the Israelites, to encourage their hope of deliverance ; but they retorted upon him the language of infidels of later times—"Where is the promise of his coming?" (2 Peter iii. 3, 4.) Thus slow were the footsteps of his anointed, that is, of Messiah, and this was "the reproach of his footsteps," in which Moses gloried. But "He that shall come, will come ;" and when the appointed time arrives, he "will not tarry." "Even so, Come, Lord Jesus."

"That glorious hour, that dreadful day,
Wipes the reproach of saints away,
And clears the honour of thy word ;
Awake, our souls, and bless the Lord."—Watts.

ander, "If the gods had given thee a body as great as thy mind, thou wouldest reach with one hand to the east, and with the other to the west."

Ver. 35. Will not lie.—The most solemn form of negative in that language.
Ver. 37. Established for ever.—That is, as long as the sun and moon shall endure, as long as time shall last, his kingdom shall continue among men. The moon is probably termed a faithful witness, because by her, particularly, time is measured. Her decrease and increase are especially observed by every nation ; and by these, time is generally estimated, especially among eastern nations :—So many moons is a man old—so many moons since such an event happened ; and even their years are reckoned by lunations. Or, the rainbow may be intended ; that faithful sign which God has established in the clouds, that the earth shall no more be destroyed by water.—Bagster.

Ver. 43. Turned the edge, &c.—Thou hast placed him in as perilous and hopeless a state as the soldier, whose sword, while defending his life against his mortal foe, breaks, or turns its edge ; or, in modern warfare, whose gun misses fire. The Gauls, when invaded by the Romans, had no method of hardening iron ; at every blow their swords bent, so that they were obliged, before they could strike again to put them under foot, or on their knee to PSALM XC. Ver. 1—17. A contemplation on the transitory nature of human life.—This psalm is entitled, "A Prayer of Moses, the man of God ;" and was probably written by him, about the time that God shortened the days of Israel in the wilderness. (See Num. xii.) It is, however, a psalm of no private interpretation ; but of general use to all who are involved in the like sentence.

It opens with an address to the eternal Being, who has been, in all ages, the refuge of all that trust in him : whose being is not regulated by any of the motions of the heavenly bodies ; to whom "a thousand years are but as one day, and one day as a thousand years ;" (2 Pet. iii. 8.) and that day not as rolling slowly over us : but as "a day when it is past," its business and its cares forgotten ; or, "as a watch in the night" passed, of which we know nothing, but that it is gone.

The writer has elsewhere thus remarked on the beauty of the sentiments expressed in the succeeding verses, (7 to 9), "Observe, that God not only seeth those actions which are also exposed to the world, but our most secret iniquities ; the word that yet is upon our tongue ; yea, the thought that is within our heart ; he not only seeth these, but placeth them in the most conspicuous view before him—"in the light of his countenance ;" he beams his glory directly upon them : sets them in contrast to his own purity. Thus seeth he the whole of our most secret impurities, and seeth them all in their deformity. But the fulness of the text is not yet exhausted. When our secret sins are placed in the light of God's countenance, then we behold them too, and in a very different manner from what we were used to do. "In his light we see light." Motives are visible in the sun-beams : so those sins which appear trivial to us, or, rather, which do not appear at other times, now strike us as enormities. His glory discovers our vileness, his holiness displays our impurity. Job long justified himself, and skillfully straightened them : and, in most cases, before this could be done, their better armed foe had taken away their life.—Bagster.

Ver. 46. Remember how short my time is.—Ainsworth, "How transitory I am."—All men in pain.—Ainsworth, "Unto what vanity thou hast made all the sons of Adam."

Ver. 51. Of thine anointed.—Heb. "Messiah."
Ver. 52. Blessed, &c.—[This verse ends the third book of the Psalter ; as is thought to have been added by a later hand, as it is wanting in two MSS in another written without points, and in three others written separately from the text ; though it is found in all the versions.]—Bagster.

PSALM XC. Ver. 3. And sayest return.—[Rather, "Return, ye children of Adam ;" i. e. that dust out of which ye were originally formed.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. They are as a sleep : in the morning.—Mr. Durrell, "They are like sleep in the morning ;" changing the punctuation.
Ver. 9. Our days are passed.—[The Vulgate has, "Our years pass away like those of the spider." Our plans and operations are like the spider's web. Life is as frail, and the thread of it as brittle, as one of those which constitute the well-wrought, and curious, but fragile, habitation of that insect. All the 10 <sup>a</sup> The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for <sup>o</sup> it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

11 Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath.

12 So teach us to number our days, that we may <sup>p</sup> apply our hearts unto <sup>a</sup> wisdom.

13 Return, O LORD, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants.

14 O satisfy us early with thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days.

15 Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the years wherein we have seen evil.

16 Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children.

17 And let the beauty <sup>r</sup> of the LORD our God be upon us: and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish <sup>s</sup> thou it.

PSALM XCI.

1 The state of the godly. 3 Their safety. 9 Their habitation. 11 Their servants. 14 Their friend; with the effects of them all.

HE that dwelleth <sup>a</sup> in the secret place of the Most High shall <sup>b</sup> abide under the shadow <sup>c</sup> of the Almighty.

2 I will say of the LORD, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

3 Surely <sup>d</sup> he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence.

n As for the days of our years in them are 70 years.

o Ja. 4. 14.

p cause to come.

q Pr. 4. 7.

r Ps. 110. 3.

s Job 22. 28. Pr. 16. 3.

a Ps. 27. 5.

b lodge.

c Ps. 57. 1.

d Ps. 124. 7.

e Ps. 121. 5, 6.

f Pr. 3. 25, 26.

g Pr. 12. 21.

h Mat. 4. 6.

i Job 5. 23.

j or, asp.

k Is. 65. 24.

l Is. 43. 2.

m length of days.

n Pr. 3. 2. 22. 4.

4 He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

5 Thou <sup>e</sup> shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day;

6 Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon-day.

7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee.

8 Only <sup>f</sup> with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked.

9 Because thou hast made the LORD which is my refuge, even the Most High, thy habitation;

10 There <sup>g</sup> shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.

11 For <sup>h</sup> he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.

12 They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

13 Thou <sup>i</sup> shalt tread upon the lion and <sup>j</sup> adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet.

14 Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: I will set him on high, because he hath known my name.

15 He <sup>k</sup> shall call upon me, and I will answer him: I <sup>l</sup> will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him.

16 With <sup>m</sup> long life <sup>n</sup> will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation.

parried the charges of his friends; 'this was false, and that was aggravated,' but when he saw the divine glory beaming around him, then he cried in a mixture of astonishment and confusion, 'Behold, I am vile! I abhor myself in dust and ashes.'" (Job xl. 4—xlii. 6.)

"According to thy fear, so is thy wrath;" that is, thy wrath is to be dreaded in proportion to thine awful majesty. And most excellent and important is the moral instruction to be derived from these premises, which is here summed up into a prayer; "So teach us to number"—estimate and calculate—"our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Moral truth is never properly applied till it is wrought into humble and earnest prayer.

"O satisfy us early with thy goodness!" On these words Bp. Horne remarks—

"The church prayeth for the dawning of that glorious morning, when every cloud shall vanish at the rising of the Sun of righteousness, and night and darkness shall be no more. Then only shall we be satisfied (or saturated) with the mercy of Jehovah: then only shall we rejoice and be glad all our days.' The time of our pilgrimage upon earth is a time of sorrow; we grieve for our departed friends; and our surviving friends must soon grieve for us: these are 'the days wherein God afflicteth us; these the years wherein we see evil: but he will hereafter make us glad according to them; in proportion to our sufferings (if rightly we bear those sufferings) will be our reward: nay, 'these light afflictions which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.' Then shall our joy be increased, and receive an additional relish from the remembrance of our former sorrow: then shall we bless the days and the years which exercised our faith, and perfected our patience; and then shall we bless God, who chastised us for a season, that he might save us for ever."

This psalm concludes with another petition, no less excellent and important: "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us," &c. When God impresses any part of his own beauty or glory upon his creatures, it is by impressing upon them a portion of his own image; just as the sun communicates its splendour to terrestrial objects by shining on them.

"What image does my spirit bear?"

Is Jesus formed, and living there?

Say, do his lineaments divine

In thought, and word, and action shine?"—Davies.

PSALM XCI. Ver. 1—16. The happiness of living under the divine protection.—No name is prefixed to this psalm: but we think, from its style and character, there is great probability in the suggestion of the learned Peters, that this psalm was composed by Moses as well as the preceding, and perhaps on the same occasion. Others, however, as Dr Boothroyd, on the authority of some of the ancient versions, ascribe it to versions have the word spider, but it is not found in any Hebrew MSS. or edition yet collated. The Hebrew might be rendered, "We consume our lives like a groan."—Berger.

PSALM XCI. Ver. 9. Thy habitation.—See exposition, and compare Ps. lxi. 2. Ver. 13. Adder.—(Shachal, rendered "the lion," is supposed by the most ancient interpreters to be a kind of serpent, and Bochart thinks it to be the the patriarch David; and some have thought it addressed by him to Solomon. But these questions are of small importance; the style is eminently sublime and beautiful; and the doctrine highly instructive and consolatory.

The Hebrews frequently compared Jehovah to a rock; and to abide in the cleft of such a rock, with them conveyed the ideas both of security and shade. In the third verse, the imagery is changed, and the believing Israelite is compared to the young eagle, under the wings of the royal parent bird, whose nest no fowler dare approach. (Compare Obad. i. 3, 4.)

"In these verses, as they now stand, (says Bp. Horne), there is much obscurity and confusion. Bp. Louth (in his xxvth Lecture) seemeth to have given their true construction: "He who dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High; who abideth under the shadow of the Almighty; who saith of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress, my God, in whom I will trust;" leaving the sentence thus imperfect, the psalmist makes a beautiful apostrophe to that person whom he has been describing. "Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence." The description is eminently applicable to the man Christ Jesus, but it is also applicable to all who place their trust in God, through him.

Supposing this psalm, as well as the preceding, to have reference to the affairs of Israel in the wilderness, (as Peters thinks,) the promises here added, of protection from the evils brought on that murmuring generation for their unbelief, may refer to exemption from the plagues and judgments, the serpents and wild beasts, the pestilence and tempest, by which those were not annoyed who put there trust in God, and relied on his protection.

It is remarkable, that one of these promises is quoted by the tempter, to induce our Lord to run into circumstances of danger, to which he had no call in providence; namely, "He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways;" (ver. 11.) And the manner in which that temptation was repelled, shows that we should be very cautious in applying promises, in any way contrary to their original design, which is, to lead us to confide in God, only while we remain within the path of duty. (See Matt. iv. 5.)

If the promise of long life, in the close of this psalm, be applied to our Saviour, it must be in reference to the future state, as in Ps. xxi. 4. "He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever." Jesus, indeed, speaking of him as a man, was cut off in the midst of his days; for he scarcely attained half the usual limit of human life. But the reign of death was short; and on the very commencement of the third day, he arose from the grave, and asked in triumph, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" (1 Cor. xv. 55.)

black serpent, or hemorrhous; and kephir, rendered "young lion," has been supposed to be the conchris, which Nicander calls a spotted lion, because he is speckled, and like the lion, raises his tail when about to fight, and bites and glutts himself with blood."—Bugster.

Ver. 14. Because, &c.—Here is a change of person; but David, or Messiah, is still meant

PSALM XCII.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God, 4 for his great works, 6 for his judgments on the wicked, 10 and for his goodness to the godly.

A Psalm or Song for the sabbath day.

IT <sup>a</sup> is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O Most High:

2 To show forth thy loving-kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness <sup>c</sup> every night,

3 Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery; <sup>d</sup> upon the harp with <sup>e</sup> a solemn sound.

4 For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hands.

5 O LORD, how great are thy works! and thy thoughts <sup>f</sup> are very deep.

6 A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand this.

7 When <sup>g</sup> the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; <sup>h</sup> it is that they shall be destroyed for ever:

8 But thou, LORD, art most high for evermore.

9 For, lo, thine enemies, O LORD, for, lo, thine enemies shall perish; all <sup>i</sup> the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

10 But my horn shalt thou exalt like the horn of a unicorn: I shall be anointed <sup>j</sup> with fresh oil.

11 Mine eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies, and mine ears shall hear my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.

12 The righteous <sup>k</sup> shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

13 Those that be planted in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God.

14 They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and <sup>l</sup> flourishing;

15 To show that the LORD is upright: he is my

a Ps. 147.1.

b La. 3.23.

c in the d or, upon

e Haggai.

f Ps. 9.16.

g Is. 55.9.

h Ro. 11.33.

i Ps. 73.18.

j Mal. 4.1.

k Mat. 7.23.

l 2 Co. 1.21.

m 1 Jn. 2.20.

n Ps. 52.8.

o Ho. 14.5,6.

p green.

q De. 32.4.

r Zep. 3.5.

s Is. 52.7.

t Re. 19.6.

u Ps. 45.6.

v from w them.

x Ps. 89.9.

y Is. 12.14.

z Re. 21.27.

aa to length ab of days.

ac Ps. 23.6.

ad a God of ae vengeance.

af De. 32.33.

ag Na. 1.1.

ah shine

ai forth.

aj Ps. 50.1.

ak Job 20.5.

al Je. 12.12.

am Jude 15.

an Ps. 73.9.

ao &amp;c.

ap Ps. 92.6.

aq Ro. 3.11.

rock, and there is no unrighteousness <sup>m</sup> in him.

PSALM XCIII.

The majesty, power, and holiness of Christ's kingdom.

THE <sup>a</sup> LORD reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the LORD is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is established, that it cannot be moved.

2 Thy throne <sup>b</sup> is established <sup>c</sup> of old: thou art from everlasting.

3 The floods have lifted up, O LORD, the floods have lifted up their voice; the floods lift up their waves.

4 The <sup>d</sup> LORD on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea.

5 Thy testimonies are very sure: holiness <sup>e</sup> becometh thy house, O LORD, <sup>f</sup> for ever.

PSALM XCIV.

1 The prophet, calling for justice, complaineth of tyranny and impiety. 8 He teacheth God's providence. 12 He sheweth the blessedness of affliction. 16 God is the defender of the afflicted.

O LORD <sup>a</sup> God, to whom <sup>b</sup> vengeance belongeth; O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, <sup>c</sup> show thyself.

2 Lift up thyself, thou judge of the earth render a reward to the proud.

3 LORD, how long <sup>d</sup> shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?

4 How long shall they utter and speak hard <sup>e</sup> things? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?

5 They break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thy heritage.

6 They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless.

7 Yet they say, The LORD shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it.

8 <sup>f</sup> Understand, ye brutish among the people: and ye fools, when will ye be wise?

PSALM XCII. Ver. 1—15. A Psalm or Song for the Sabbath day.—The Jews have a silly tradition preserved in the Chaldee paraphrase, that Adam composed this psalm for the Sabbath day—perhaps on its institution; forgetting that "Jubal was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ." (Gen. iv. 21.) Calmet and others suppose this psalm to have been composed by some of the Levites during or near the close of the Babylonian captivity, acknowledging the mercy of God, and foreseeing the destruction of their enemies, and their own return to Jerusalem and the temple service. It contemplates praise as the delight and enjoyment of a good man, as well as his duty; and considers those as silly and brutish who are insensible of this truth.

The latter verses (particularly 12 and 13) have been supposed to allude to planting trees in the courts of the tabernacle; but this we apprehend was not allowed, and was practised only by idolaters. We understand it of those worshippers who were constant in their attendance, as if they had been trees there planted: these the psalmist considers as flourishing in faith and hope, and bringing forth the fruits of righteousness to old age, like the olive.

"When age advances, may we grow
In faith, and hope, and love;
And walk in holiness below—
In holiness above!"—Montgomery.

PSALM XCIII. Ver. 1—5. The universal sovereign king of Israel.—This short psalm presents to us Jehovah clothed with majesty and power, and seated upon his eternal throne. The floods lift up their waves and roar: the psalmist perceives a political commotion all around him; but he encourages himself with the consideration that his God is "mightier than the noise of many waters," and able to protect him both from seas and storms. The imagery is similar to that in the second psalm. "Why do the heathen rage," &c.; and the Jews acknowledge, (according to Bishop Horne,) that this and the seven following psalms have all a reference to the kingdom of Messiah.

The concluding verse, "Holiness becometh thy house, O LORD, for ever," affords not only an admonition to trifling worshippers, but a sharp reproof to hypocrites, who, like the Jews in our Lord's time, changed the house of prayer not only into "a house of merchandise," but also into "a den of thieves." (Matt. xxi. 12, 13.)

PSALM XCIV. Ver. 1—23. An appeal to the Almighty on behalf of the poor and the afflicted.—JEHOVAH is here appealed to as the God of vengeance; from which we may learn, that neither public vengeance, nor private revenge, is within our department. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord, and I will repay it." (Rom. xii. 19.) He alone is capable of executing just judgment, for he alone can read the hearts of men: he alone has the right, for "God is judge himself," (Psalm i. 6.) and will allow no creature to interfere, either in the government of the world, or in its final judgment. "He sitteth upon the throne judging righteously." (Psalm ix. 4.)

Infinitely important and consoling is the truth, that this God is the friend of "the widow and the stranger, the fatherless and the oppressed." That on such, though he may lay his chastising hand, it is in the way only of parental correction, that he may "teach him out of his law;" but he "will not cast off his people, neither will he forsake his inheritance." In the midst, therefore, of all his troubles, in the multitude of his same occasion as the preceding, as a part of which it is written in twelve MSS.—Bagster.

Ver. 1. It cannot be moved.—That is, out of the sphere in which God himself hath placed it. It cannot be moved by man.

Ver. 4. The Lord, &c.—Bishop Loxth reads this more poetically, thus:

"The glorious waves of the sea!

Jehovah on high is more glorious."

PSALM XCIV. (Dr. Delaney supposes that this psalm was written by David on occasion of his war with the Ammonites, in consequence of the indignities shown to his messengers; but it is more probable, that it was written to bewail the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple.)—Bagster.

Ver. 1. To whom vengeance belongeth.—"Show thyself."

"Shine forth;" alluding, undoubtedly, to the Shechinah, which, on some occasions, showed a burning glory. Exod. xxiv. 17.

Ver. 2. Lift up thyself.—Boothroyd, "Ascend on high;" i. e. to the judgment seat. See Ps. vii. 7, 8.

PSALM XCI. Ver. 3. With a solemn sound.—Perhaps "with deep meditation." The LXX. here render it "a song;" meaning, perhaps, an extemporaneous effusion, accompanied with the soft warblings of the harp, which the moderns call Arpeggiato.

Ver. 10. A unicorn.—See note on Num. xxiii. 22.—Anointed with fresh oil.—"Green oil;" i. e. made from green or unripe olives, which is preferred.

Ver. 11. "My desire," which twice occurs, is not in the original; and Bishop Horne better supplies the ellipsis, thus: "Mine eye shall see (the fall of) mine enemies; and mine ear shall hear (the destruction) of the wicked."

Ver. 12. Palm tree.—(The noble and ancient palm tree affords an agreeable shade: its fruit makes a great part of the diet of the East, the stones of which are ground for the camels; the leaves are made into couches, baskets, &c.; its boughs, into fences; the fibres of the boughs, into ropes, and the rigging of small vessels; its sap, into arrack; and its wood serves for lighter buildings and fire wood. Dr. Clarke's Travels.)—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Old age.—"Hoary (or gray) age."—Fat and flourishing.—Alluding to the olive tree, which probably bore to a considerable age as we know that vines do.

9 He <sup>e</sup> that planted the ear, shall he not hear ?
he that formed the eye, shall he not see ?

10 He that chastiseth the <sup>h</sup> heathen, shall not he correct ? he <sup>i</sup> that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know ?

11 The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity.

12 Blessed <sup>k</sup> is the man whom thou chastenest,
O LORD, and teachest him out of thy law ;

13 That thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity, until the pit be digged for the wicked.

14 For <sup>l</sup> the LORD will not cast off his people, neither will he forsake his inheritance.

15 But judgment shall return unto righteousness: and all the upright in heart <sup>m</sup> shall follow it.

16 Who will rise up for me against the evil-doers ? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity ?

17 Unless <sup>n</sup> the LORD had been my help, my soul had <sup>o</sup> almost dwelt in silence.

18 When I said, My foot <sup>p</sup> slippeth ; thy mercy,
O LORD, held me up.

19 In the multitude of my thoughts within me thy comforts <sup>q</sup> delight my soul.

20 Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which <sup>r</sup> frameth mischief by a law ?

21 They <sup>s</sup> gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood.

22 But the LORD is my defence ; and my God is the rock of my refuge.

23 And he shall bring upon them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness ; yea, the LORD our God shall cut them off.

PSALM XCV.

1 An exhortation to praise God, 3 for his greatness, 6 and for his goodness, 8 and not to tempt him.

COME, let us sing unto the LORD : let <sup>a</sup> us make a joyful noise to the rock <sup>b</sup> of our salvation.

2 Let us <sup>c</sup> come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

3 For <sup>d</sup> the LORD is a great God, and a great King <sup>e</sup> above all gods.

4 In <sup>f</sup> his hand are the deep places of the earth : the <sup>g</sup> strength of the hills is his also.

conflicting thoughts, "Thy comforts (says he, addressing himself to God), delight my soul."

"While multitudes of mournful thoughts,
Within my bosom roll,
Thy boundless love forgives my faults,
Thy comforts cheer my soul."—Watts.

PSALM XCV. Ver. 1—11. A general exhortation to worship and to praise God.—All Christian worship is founded on the salvation of Christ. It is not merely the submission of creatures to their Creator, or of subjects to the universal Sovereign. It is, indeed, all this, but more. We are "the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand ;" his chosen, his purchased flock ; for whom the Good Shepherd laid down his life. (John x. 11, &c.) We come to his temple not only to bow down before him, but to hear what God the Lord will say unto us. And what does he say ? "To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts ;" that is, as Israel did of old, who refused to hear or to obey. On this passage, the apostle to the He-

Ver. 9. Planted the ear.—[The mechanism of the ear, like a root planted in the earth, is sunk deep into the head, and concealed from view ; whereas the ball of the eye is prominent on the face, and presented to general observation, though its structure is no less wonderful. This is allowed to be an unanswerable argument. Whatever is found of excellence in the creature, must be derived from the Creator, and exist in him in the plenitude of infinite excellence. But, to prevent the error of humanizing God, the psalmist does not attribute ears and eyes to Him, but simply hearing and seeing.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Chastiseth the heathen.—That is, he takes care of his people, till their enemies are put out of the way. So Jesus, when a child, was preserved in Egypt till the death of Herod. Matt. ii. 13, &c.

Ver. 17. Had almost.—In a short time.—Dwelt in silence.—That is, in the silent grave.

Ver. 21. They gather themselves together.—Ainsworth, "They run by troops against the soul of the just." How exactly does this mark the rage of the Jews against our Saviour ! See Matt. xxvi. 59, &c.

g Ex. 4.11.

h Ex. 39.21.

i Pr. 2.6.

j 1 Co. 3.19.

k Job 5.17.

l Ps. 63.5, 6.

m 1 Sa. 12.22.

n Ro. 11.1, 2.

o or, quickly.

p Ps. 38.16.

q Ps. 63.5, 6.

r 2 Co. 1.3, 4.

s Is. 10.1.

t Pr. 1.11, 16.

u Mat. 27.1.

v Ps. 100.1.

w Mat. 25.31, 32.

x or, present his face.

y Ps. 97.9.

z Mal. 1.14.

a or, heights of the hills are his.

b whose the sea is.

c Ge. 1.9, 10.

d Ac. 21.5.

e Ph. 2.10.

f He. 3.7, 15.

g or, heights of the hills are his.

h whose the sea is.

i Ge. 1.9, 10.

j Ac. 21.5.

k Ph. 2.10.

l He. 3.7, 15.

m Ex. 17.2, 7.

n Na. 14.2, &amp;c.

o De. 6.16.

p 1 Co. 10.9.

q Or. 4.3, 5.

r If they enter.

s 1 Ch. 16.23.

t Ps. 13.3.

u Je. 10.11, 12.

v Is. 42.5.

w Ps. 63.2.

x Jude 25.

y or, glorious sanctuary.

z He. 13.15.

a Ps. 46.6, 10.

b Re. 19.6.

c Ps. 69.34.

5 <sup>b</sup> The sea is his, and he made <sup>c</sup> it : and his hands formed the dry land.

6 O come, let us worship and bow down : let us kneel <sup>d</sup> before the LORD our maker.

7 For he is our God ; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand.

<sup>k</sup> To-day if ye will hear his voice,

8 Harden not your heart, as in the <sup>l</sup> m provocation, and as in the day of temptation in the wilderness :

9 When your fathers tempted <sup>n</sup> me, proved me, and saw my work.

10 Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and said, It is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my ways :

11 Unto whom I swear <sup>o</sup> in my wrath, <sup>p</sup> that they should not enter into my rest.

PSALM XCVI.

1 An exhortation to praise God, 4 for his greatness, 8 for his kingdom, 13 for his general judgment.

SING <sup>a</sup> unto the LORD a new song : sing unto the LORD, all the earth.

2 Sing unto the LORD, bless his name ; show forth his salvation from day to day.

3 Declare his glory among the heathen, his wonders among all people.

4 For the LORD is great, and <sup>b</sup> greatly to be praised : he is to be feared above all gods.

5 For <sup>c</sup> all the gods of the nations are idols :
but <sup>d</sup> the LORD made the heavens.

6 Honour and majesty are before him.
strength <sup>e</sup> and beauty are in his sanctuary.

7 Give <sup>f</sup> unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and strength.

8 Give unto the LORD the glory <sup>g</sup> due unto his name : bring an <sup>h</sup> offering, and come into his courts.

9 O worship the LORD <sup>i</sup> in the beauty of holiness : fear before him, all the earth.

10 Say among the <sup>j</sup> heathen that the LORD <sup>k</sup> reigneth : the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved : he shall judge the people righteously.

11 Let <sup>l</sup> the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad ; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof
of.

12 Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein : then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice.

brews gives us an inspired comment, which supersedes the necessity of any other. Read Heb. iii. 12—19 ; iv. 1—11.

We may here add, that though this psalm bears no name, it is quoted as David's in the chapter last referred to, which leads us to suppose, (as both Jews and Christians generally do,) that most of these short psalms without a name were his also.

PSALM XCVI. Ver. 1—13. Praise to God the Creator and the Judge.—This psalm, and part of several others, we have already met with in the book of Chronicles, as given by David into the hands of Asaph and his brethren to praise the LORD, when they brought up the ark to Mount Zion from the house of Obed-Edom ; there is, therefore, no doubt as to either the author or the occasion of its composition. The general subject is the praise of JEHOVAH, in comparison with whom all the gods of the nations are as nothing, and merit no regard.

After describing the majesty and glory of God in terms similar to those already used, the psalmist announces his coming to the final judgment of the world. This is introduced here

PSALM XCV. [This Psalm is attributed to David by the LXX., Vulgate Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic, and St. Paul, (He. iv. 3—7.) but it is uncertain upon what occasion it was composed.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Gods.—Even the angels, (who in respect of men are thought as gods,) are nothing in his sight ; much less the idols which man's brain inventeth.—T. Scott.

Ver. 6. Let us worship.—The former verses were intended to animate the people in joyful praise and thanksgiving ; but this seems a call to humble prayer and supplication.—"Since God made our bodies, as well as our souls, it is meet and right that they should bear their part in his service, and that istrinal worship should be accompanied and signified by that which is external." Bishop Horne.—Three words are used : "We will prostrate ourselves, we will bow our heads, we will kneel," &c.—T. Scott.

PSALM XCVI. Ver. 5. Idols.—Ethim, nothings ; no gods. 2 Chron. xiii. 9. LXX. read "Demons." Compare 1 Cor. x. 19, 20.

Ver. 9. In the beauty of holiness.—See margin. This glory refers chiefly to the divine presence in the Shechinah. See 1 Kings viii. 11.

13 Before the LORD: for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with <sup>a</sup> righteousness, and the people with his truth.

PSALM XCVII.

1 The majesty of God's kingdom. 7 The church rejoices at God's judgments upon idolaters. 10 An exhortation to godliness and gladness.

THE LORD reigneth; let the earth <sup>b</sup> rejoice; let the multitude of <sup>d</sup> isles be glad thereof.

2 Clouds <sup>e</sup> and darkness are round about him: righteousness <sup>f</sup> and judgment are the <sup>g</sup> habitation of his throne.

3 A fire <sup>h</sup> goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about.

4 His lightnings enlightened the world: the earth saw, and trembled.

5 The hills melted <sup>i</sup> like wax at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the LORD of the whole earth.

6 The heavens declare his righteousness, and all the people see <sup>j</sup> his glory.

7 Confounded be all they that serve graven images, that boast themselves of idols: worship <sup>k</sup> him, all ye gods.

8 Zion heard, and was glad; and the daughters of Judah rejoiced because of thy judgments, O LORD.

9 For thou, LORD, art high above all the earth: thou art exalted far above all gods.

10 Ye that love the LORD, hate <sup>l</sup> evil: he preserveth the souls of his saints; he delivereth <sup>m</sup> them out of the hand of the wicked.

11 Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart.

12 Rejoice <sup>n</sup> in the LORD, ye righteous; and give thanks <sup>o</sup> at the remembrance of his holiness.

m Re. 19. 11.
20. 13.
a Ps. 99. 1.
b Ps. 2. 11.
c many, or, great.
d Is. 60. 9.
e 1 Ki. 8. 12.
f Ps. 89. 14.
g or, establishment.
h Da. 7. 10.
He. 12. 29.
i Ju. 5. 5.
Mi. 1. 4.
j Na. 14. 21.
k He. 1. 6.
l Pr. 2. 7.
Ro. 12. 9.
m Da. 3. 28.
n Ph. 4. 4.
o or, to the memorial.

a Ex. 15. 6.
Is. 59. 16.
b Is. 52. 10.
c or, revealed.
d Lu. 1. 54.
72.
e Ro. 10. 12.
18.
f Re. 1. 7.
a Ps. 93. 1.
b Je. 5. 22.
c stagger.
d De. 28. 53.

PSALM XCVIII.

1 The psalmist exhorteth the Jews, 4 the Gentiles, 7 and all the creatures to praise God.

A Psalm.

OSING unto the LORD a new song; for he hath done marvellous things: his right <sup>a</sup> hand, and his holy arm, hath gotten him the victory.

2 The <sup>b</sup> LORD hath made known his salvation: his righteousness hath he <sup>c</sup> openly showed in the sight of the heathen.

3 He <sup>d</sup> hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel: all the <sup>e</sup> ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

4 Make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all the earth: make a loud noise, and rejoice, and sing praise.

5 Sing unto the LORD with the harp; with the harp, and the voice of a psalm.

6 With trumpets and sound of cornet make a joyful noise before the LORD, the King.

7 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.

8 Let the floods clap <sup>f</sup> their hands: let the hills be joyful together

9 Before the LORD; for <sup>g</sup> he cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity.

PSALM XCIX.

1 The prophet, setting forth the kingdom of God in Zion, 5 exhorteth all, by the example of forefathers, to worship God at his holy hill.

THE LORD reigneth; let <sup>b</sup> the people tremble: he sitteth <sup>c</sup> between the cherubims; let the earth <sup>d</sup> be moved.

2 The LORD is great in Zion; and he is high above all the people.

3 Let them praise thy great <sup>e</sup> and terrible name; for it is holy.

4 The king's strength also loveth judgment; spread until "all the earth shall rejoice in this salvation, and the multitude of isles be glad thereof."

"He reigns! the Lord the Saviour reigns;
Praise him in ev'ngelic strains:
Let the whole earth in songs rejoice,
And distant islands join their voice."—Watts.

PSALM XCIX. Ver. 1—9. A Psalm of praise for Jews and Gentiles.—The deliverances which God wrought for the salvation of his people were of that public nature, that they were evidently known to the surrounding nations, as we find in the history of Rahab the harlot, (Josh. ii. 10, 11.) and in other instances: so that all the ends (or extremities) of the earth, so far as the earth was then known, had either seen or heard "the salvation" of their God. But these were the shadows only of better things, and the type of that salvation, in which the heathen nations themselves were to be embraced. The whole world is therefore now called upon to rejoice in the God of Israel, who is here foreseen as coming to execute those judgments that should overthrow the reign of idolatry, throw down the barriers of the Jewish system of peculiarity, and publish salvation alike to the whole world. And blessed are our eyes that see, and our ears which hear the rapid fulfilment of this promise.

"Bless, bless his name; from day to day,
Let his salvation prompt the lay,
Till realms remote his acts have known,
And man's whole race his wonders own."—Merrick.

PSALM XCIX. Ver. 1—9. Another Psalm celebrating the kingdom of God.—In the ninety-sixth Psalm the world is called upon to rejoice—in this to tremble: for the same events which are matters of joy to those who fear God, afford awful presages to those who fear him not. The opening of this psalm may remind us of the vision which Isaiah saw before the death of king Uzziah. (Isa. vi. 1—4.) The cherubim and seraphim were probably the same. Here they form the chariot PSALM XCIX. This is called A Psalm; the Septuagint add, "of David."—It very much resembles the ninety-sixth. It especially celebrates, prophetically, the salvation of the Redeemer, by his almighty power accomplishing his holy decrees, notwithstanding the opposition of earth and hell.—T. Scott.

Ver. 2. Openly showed.—The salvation and righteousness of God are often united in Scripture, as showing the way of a sinner's acceptance, "by the righteousness of our God and Saviour, Jesus Christ;" and these were made known to the heathen in the most public manner, by the preaching of the apostles. But to the heathen in the most public manner, by the preaching of the apostles. But perhaps the awful, yet righteous vengeance, executed on the Jewish nation for rejecting the gospel, while salvation was thus sent to the Gentiles and welcomed by them, was intended. "Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but towards thee, goodness!"—T. Scott.

Ver. 9. Before the Lord, &c.—See Ps. xcvi. 13.
PSALM XCIX. Ver. 1. Let the people tremble.—Ainsworth, "The people are stirred;" i. e. alarmed. See Rev. xi. 17, 18.

thou dost establish equity, thou execute judgment and righteousness in Jacob.

5 Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worship at his footstool; for he is holy.

6 Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel among them that call upon his name; they called upon the LORD, and he answered them.

7 He spake unto them in the cloudy pillar: they kept his testimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them.

8 Thou answeredst them, O LORD our God: thou wast a God that forgavest them, though thou tookest vengeance of their inventions.

9 Exalt the LORD our God, and worship at his holy hill; for the LORD our God is holy.

PSALM C.

1 An exhortation to praise God cheerfully, 3 for his greatness, 4 and for his power.

A Psalm of praise.

MAKE a joyful noise unto the LORD, all ye lands.

2 Serve the LORD with gladness: come before his presence with singing.

3 Know ye that the LORD he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; he are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

4 Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name.

5 For the LORD is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations.

PSALM CI.

David maketh a vow and profession of godliness.

A Psalm of David.

I WILL sing of mercy and judgment: unto thee, O LORD, will I sing.

2 I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart.

3 I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes: I hate the work of them that turn aside; it shall not cleave to me.

of Jehovah's throne; there they are fluttering around it, as they were in a chorus to proclaim his glory. In both cases, the attribute announced is perfect, spotless holiness, (ver. 3-5;) Is both, the whole earth is filled with his glory. The scene in innaah is laid in the temple, the pillars of which are shaken with the voices of the celestial hierarchy: here, not only the people tremble, but the earth itself is moved, and staggers like a drunken man, as the original seems to intimate. (See note on ver. 1.)

By "the king's strength," (ver. 4.) may be intended the establishment of David's kingdom, by whom probably the psalm was written, though it doubtless has a higher and ulterior reference to the reign of the king Messiah. The psalmist concludes with exhorting all to come and "worship at his footstool," or before his cherubic throne in Zion.

PSALM C. Ver. 1-5. A Psalm of general thanksgiving.—No psalm has been more admired, or more devotionally employed, by either Jews or Christians, than the one now before us. JEHOVAH here, (as in the eightieth Psalm,) is represented as the great Shepherd of Israel, and of mankind, the various tribes of which are but as different flocks, though Israel is his chosen. All are invited to come into his presence with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise. They are reminded that he is their Creator as well as pastor—"For we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture." Gentiles as well as Jews are therefore welcome to "enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise;" the ground of

Ver. 6. Moses and Aaron among his priests.—They were brothers, of the same tribe and family; but the word Cohen, though usually rendered priest, is used also for any great office of state.—Atinworth. See 2 Samuel xviii. 18.

Ver. 8. Inventions.—That is, idolatries, as of the golden calf, &c. PSALM C. [The Chaldee has shabbecha al kirban todeha. "Praise at the offering of thanksgiving;" for which occasion it is supposed to have been composed by Solomon.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. All ye lands.—The Jews have a tradition that this psalm was sung during the offering of the sacrifices of thanksgiving. Lev. vii. 12, 13.

Ver. 3. And not we ourselves.—Instead of voela anachnoo, "and not we," the Keri, twenty-six MSS., the Chaldee, and Jerome, have voelo anachnoo, "and his we;" which is doubtless the genuine reading, as no man was ever so foolish as to suppose he made himself.]—Bagster.

PSALM CI. Ver. 3. I hate them, &c.—Bishop Louth, "Him that dealeth unfaithfully, I hate."

Ver. 5. Not know.—i. e. not countenance, or encourage.

e Job 36. 5

f 1Ch. 28. 2

g or, it.

h Ex. 15. 25.

i Sa. 7. 9.

j Ex. 33. 9.

k Pa. 89. 33.

l Je. 33. 25.

m Ps. 2. 6.

n or, thanksgiving.

o Pa. 145. title.

p the earth.

q Pa. 149. 2.

r or, his we are.

s Ex. 63. 19.

t Eze. 34. 11, &c.

u Ps. 2. 25.

v Pa. 65. 1.

w Ps. 35. 10.

x generation and generation.

y Pa. 89. 1.

z 1Sa. 18. 14.

a 1 Ki. 9. 4.

b Is. 33. 15.

c thing of Bethel.

d Pa. 125. 5.

e

f 1Co. 15. 33.

g or, perfect in charity.

h Pa. 119. 1.

i Re. 21. 27.

j he established.

k Je. 21. 12.

l or, for.

m Pa. 61. 2.

n Pa. 62. 3.

o Pa. 145. 19.

p Is. 45. 2.

q 1Co. 10. 13.

r or, as some read into.

s or, flesh.

t Ac. 23. 12.

u Pa. 30. 7.

4 A froward heart shall depart from me: I will not know a wicked person.

5 Whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I cut off: him that hath a high look and a proud heart will not I suffer.

6 Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me: he that walketh in a perfect way, he shall serve me.

7 He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house: he that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight.

8 I will early destroy all the wicked of the land; that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of the LORD.

PSALM CII.

1 The prophet in his prayer maketh a grievous complaint. 12 He taketh comfort in the eternity and mercy of God. 18 The mercies of God are to be recorded. 23 He sustains his weakness by the unchangeableness of God.

A Prayer of the afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD.

HEAR my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee.

2 Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble; incline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call answer me speedily.

3 For my days are consumed like smoke, and my bones are burned as a hearth.

4 My heart is smitten, and withered like grass; so that I forget to eat my bread.

5 By reason of the voice of my groaning my bones cleave to my skin.

6 I am like a pelican of the wilderness: I am like an owl of the desert.

7 I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the house-top.

8 Mine enemies reproach me all the day; and they that are mad against me are sworn against me.

9 For I have eaten ashes like bread, and mingled my drink with weeping,

10 Because of thine indignation and thy wrath: for thou hast lifted me up, and cast me down.

which is here stated to be goodness and mercy, truth and faithfulness, for ever.

"Before Jehovah's awful throne,
Ye nations bow with sacred joy:
Know that the Lord is God alone;
He can create and he destroy."

PSALM CI. Ver. 1-8. David's pious resolutions.—This psalm is ascribed to David in the Hebrew title. It was probably written in the commencement of his reign, and Bishop Patrick supposes while yet at Hebron, though expecting to be called to the throne at Jerusalem. (2 Sam. ii. 1-4; v. 3-5.) It contains his resolution to walk circumspectly before God, and to banish from his presence as well evil counsellors as wicked men, whom he determines not to know; that is, not to countenance or encourage in his court or palace.

In singing both of mercy and of judgment, he sets us an example, in whose lot, as well as in his, mercy and judgment are commonly interwoven. It is probable, however, that he uses the words in a judicial sense, as meaning that justice and mercy should be mingled in all his legal decisions. His punishments should be tempered with mercy, and his mercy corrected by discretion.

PSALM CII. Ver. 1-28. A Prayer for the afflicted when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the Lord.—"It seems," says Bishop Horne, "to have been written during the captivity by one of the prophets." Dr. Pyc Smith thinks it was written "by some pious and inspired Israelite,

Ver. 5. A high look, &c.—"Lofty in eyes, and swollen in heart."

Ver. 8. Early.—"In the morning," meaning, probably, in the commencement of his reign; but Dr. Chandler thinks, David meant to devote his mornings to the administration of justice, as is common in eastern countries.

PSALM CII. Ver. 6. Pelican.—[The pelican is a remarkable aquatic bird, of the order anseres, of a size larger than a swan; colour, a grayish white, except that the neck is a little yellowish, and the feathers on the middle of the back rather black; anterior part of the head, towards the throat, naked; beak, very long, crooked, unguiculated at the extremity, and sides not denticulated; under which is a lax membrane, extending to the throat, forming a large bag or pouch, into which it receives its food, and by pressing it with its bill, throats it up for the nourishment of its young; whence its name kaath, or the vomiter.]—Bagster.—[Like an owl of the desert.—Rather, "A bitter, in waste or ruinous places."—Bishop Horne.]

Ver. 9. For.—Bishop Horne. "Therefore." Eating ashes and drinking tears, must be explained figuratively, as "the ashes of humiliation," and "the water of affliction."—Horne

11 My days are like a shadow ; that declineth ; and I am withered like <sup>k</sup> grass.

12 But <sup>l</sup> thou, O LORD, shalt endure for ever ; and thy remembrance unto all generations.

13 Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion : for the time <sup>m</sup> to favour her, yea, the set <sup>n</sup> time, is come.

14 For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof.

15 So the heathen shall fear the name of the LORD, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.

16 When the LORD shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory.

17 He <sup>o</sup> will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer.

18 This <sup>p</sup> shall be written for the generation to come : and the people which shall be created shall praise the LORD,

19 For he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary ; from heaven did the LORD behold the earth ;

20 To <sup>q</sup> hear the groaning of the prisoner ; to loose <sup>r</sup> those that are appointed to death ;

21 To <sup>s</sup> declare the name of the LORD in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem ;

22 When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms, to serve the LORD.

23 He <sup>t</sup> weakened my strength in the way ; he shortened my days.

24 I <sup>u</sup> said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days : thy years are throughout all generations.

25 Of <sup>v</sup> old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth : and the heavens are the work of thy hands.

26 They shall perish, but thou shalt <sup>w</sup> endure : yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment ; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed :

27 But <sup>x</sup> thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end.

28 The children of thy servant shall continue, and their seed shall be established before thee.

PSALM CIII.

1 An exhortation to bless God for his mercy, 15 and for the constancy thereof.

A Psalm of David.

BLESS the LORD, O my soul : and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

2 Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits :

J Ec. 6. 12.

k Ja. 1. 10.

Ls. 5. 19.

m Is. 60. 1,

Zec. 1. 12,

13.

n Is. 40. 2.

o Ne. 1. 6, 11,

2. 1. 8.

p Ro. 15. 4,

1 Co. 10. 11

q Ps. 146. 7.

r the children of death.

s 1 Pe. 2. 9.

t afflicted.

u Ps. 39. 13,

Is. 38. 10.

v He. 1. 10,

12.

w stand.

x Mal. 3. 6,

He. 13. 8.

a Mat. 9. 2.,

6.

Ep. 1. 7.

b Ex. 15. 26.

c Is. 40. 31.

d great of.

e Is. 57. 16,

Mi. 7. 15,

15.

f according to the height of heaven.

g Je. 50. 20.

h Ge. 3. 19.

i Is. 40. 6, 8,

Ja. 1. 10, 11

j not.

k Job 30. 9.

l Ex. 20. 6,

De. 7. 9.

m Ps. 11. 4.

n Da. 4. 34,

35.

o mighty in p Joel 2. 11.

q He. 1. 14.

r Ps. 145. 10.

s Re. 1. 13,

&amp;c.

3 Who forgiveth <sup>a</sup> all thine iniquities ; who healeth <sup>b</sup> all thy diseases ;

4 Who redeemeth thy life from destruction ; who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies ;

5 Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things ; so that thy youth is <sup>c</sup> renewed like the eagle's.

6 The LORD executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.

7 He made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of Israel.

8 The LORD is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and <sup>d</sup> plenteous in mercy.

9 He <sup>e</sup> will not always chide : neither will he keep his anger for ever.

10 He hath not dealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities

11 For <sup>f</sup> as the heaven is high above the earth so great is his mercy toward them that fear him

12 As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed <sup>g</sup> our transgressions from us.

13 Like as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

14 For he knoweth our frame ; he remembereth that we are <sup>h</sup> dust.

15 As for man, his days are as grass : as <sup>i</sup> a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

16 For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone ; and the place <sup>k</sup> thereof shall know it no more.

17 But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children ;

18 To <sup>l</sup> such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.

19 The LORD hath prepared his <sup>m</sup> throne in the heavens ; and his kingdom <sup>n</sup> ruleth over all.

20 Bless the LORD, ye his angels, <sup>o</sup> that excel in <sup>p</sup> strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.

21 Bless ye the LORD, all ye his hosts ; ye <sup>q</sup> ministers of his, that do his pleasure.

22 Bless the LORD, all <sup>r</sup> his works in all places of his dominion : bless the LORD, O <sup>s</sup> my soul.

PSALM CIV.

1 A meditation upon the mighty power, 7 and wonderful providence of God. 31 God's glory is eternal. 33 The prophet voweth perpetually to praise God.

BLESS the LORD, O my soul. O LORD my God, thou art very great ; <sup>a</sup> thou art clothed with honour and majesty.

probably during the captivity, or under the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. The outline of it is a plaintive description of the depressed and languishing condition of the church of God ; and an encouraging contemplation of its revival and extension among the Gentiles : then the writer is suddenly checked by the reflection of his own mortality, and the thought that he could not hope to see the happy state of things, which the spirit of prophecy enabled him to behold afar off : but, to relieve his mind from this distressing feeling, he takes refuge in the unchangeableness of the great Preserver and Deliverer of the church, and the certainty that he would fulfil the promises of his grace to the latest posterity of his faithful people. Is it incredible or improbable, that, under these descriptions, the mourning but despairing psalmist looked forward to the promised Saviour, the hope of Israel ? His knowledge was, of course, obscure ; but his faith was not the less certain. Who was destined to restore the desolate church, and to extend its blessings among all nations, but Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever ?

PSALM CIII. Ver. 1—22. Praise to God for his recovering mercy.—This sweet and pathetic psalm is ascribed to David, and supposed by Bishop Patrick and other to have been written by him on his recovery from some dangerous sickness. At the head of every list of our mercies should always stand that

Ver. 14. Take pleasure, &c.—Like antiquarians, they found a pensive pleasure in the very contemplation of her ruins.

PSALM CIII. Ver. 3. Diseases.—Or, "Infirmities."—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 5. Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.—That is, by moulting, or shedding their feathers ; this is common to all birds, and eagles and vultures are said to do so nearly to one hundred years of age.—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 11. As the heaven is high, &c.—See Margin. Compare Isa. lv. 9. Loath. "So high is his goodness over," &c.

Ver. 15. As grass.—[Grass, the well known vegetable which decks our fields of pardon and salvation through Christ. What avaleth recovery from sickness, or any temporal blessing, while we still lie under the curse of God for sin ? But pardon granted renders every temporal mercy doubly sweet and valuable. A variety of beautiful images are here employed to exhibit the riches of divine mercy ; but none more tender or affecting than that borrowed from the paternal relation among men. "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." But how is this ? "The father (says Henry) pities his children that are weak in knowledge, and instructs them ; pities them when they are froward, and bears with them ; pities them when they are sick, and comforts them ; pities them when they have fallen, and raises them. When they have offended, upon their submission he forgives them ; and when they are wronged, his power rights them. Thus the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

"The pity of the Lord
To those that fear his name,
Is such as tender parents feel
He knows our feeble frame."—Watts.

PSALM CIV. Ver. 1—35. Meditation on the creation and providence of God.—This psalm is eminently sublime and beautiful. The Most High is here represented as clothed with glory and majesty : light ineffable his garment ; and the visible and refreshes our sight with its grateful verdure, in its feeble frame and transitory duration is beautifully emblematic of the frail condition and fleeting existence of man ; and in the order of its growth, from seeds dead and buried it gives a natural testimony to the doctrine of a resurrection : the prophet Isaiah, (chap. xxvi. 19.) and the apostle Peter, (1 Peter i. 24, 25,) both speak of bodies rising from the dead as of so many seeds springing from the ground to renovated existence and beauty."—Bagster.

PSALM CIV. [This sublime poem on the works of God in Creation and Providence, is ascribed to David in the LXX., Vulgate, Ethiopic, Syriac, and Ara

2 Who coverest thyself with light <sup>b</sup> as with a garment: who <sup>c</sup> stretchest out the heavens like a curtain:

3 Who <sup>d</sup> layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters: who maketh the clouds <sup>e</sup> his chariot: who <sup>f</sup> walketh upon the wings of the wind:

4 Who <sup>g</sup> maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming <sup>h</sup> fire:

5 <sup>i</sup> Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever.

6 Thou <sup>j</sup> coveredst it with the deep as with a garment: the waters stood above the mountains.

7 At <sup>k</sup> thy rebuke they fled; at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.

8 They go up by the mountains; they go down by the valleys unto the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 Thou <sup>m</sup> hast set a bound that they may not pass over; that they turn not again to cover the earth.

10 <sup>n</sup> He sendeth the springs into the valleys, which <sup>o</sup> run among the hills.

11 They give drink to every beast of the field: the wild asses <sup>p</sup> quench their thirst.

12 By them shall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation, which <sup>q</sup> sing among the branches.

13 He watereth the hills from his chambers: the earth is satisfied with the fruit of thy works.

14 He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth;

15 And wine <sup>r</sup> that maketh glad the heart of man, and <sup>s</sup> oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart.

16 The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted;

17 Where the birds make their nests: as for the stork, the fir trees are her house.

18 The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats; and the rocks for the conies.

19 He appointed the moon for seasons: the sun knoweth his going down.

b Da. 7.9.
l Ti. 6.16.
c Is. 40.22.
d Am. 9.6.
e Is. 19.1.
f Ps. 18.10.
g He. 1.7.
h 2 Ki. 2.11.
i Job. 38.13.
j Ge. 7.19.
k Ge. 8.1.5.
l or, the mountains ascend, the valleys descend.
m Job 38.10.11.
n who.
o walk.
p break.
q give a voice.
r Pr. 31.6,7.
s to make his face shine with oil, or, more than oil.
t Ps. 92.12.

u thereof do trample on the forest.
v Job 38.39.
w Ge. 3.19.
x Pr. 3.19.
y Ps. 95.5.
z Job 41.1, &c.
a formed.
b Ps. 145.16.
c Is. 32.14, 15.
d Ec. 37.9.
e Ge. 1.31.
f Is. 62.5.
g Hab. 3.10.
h Ex. 19.18.
i Ps. 63.5,6.
j Ps. 32.11.
k Hab. 3.17, 18.
l J. Pr. 2.22.
m Ps. 1.4.
n 1 Ch. 16.8.
o 22.
p Is. 12.4.

1 An exhortation to praise God, and to seek out his works. 2 The story of God's providence over Abraham, 16 over Joseph, 23 over Jacob in Egypt, 26 over Moses delivering the Israelites, 37 over the Israelites brought out of Egypt, fed in the wilderness, and planted in Canaan.

20 Thou makest darkness, and it is night: wherein all the beasts <sup>a</sup> of the forest do creep forth.

21 The young lions <sup>b</sup> roar after their prey, and seek their meat from God.

22 The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens.

23 Man <sup>c</sup> goeth forth unto his work and to his labour until the evening.

24 O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom <sup>d</sup> hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches.

25 So is this great and wide <sup>e</sup> sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts.

26 There go the ships: there is that <sup>f</sup> leviathan, whom thou hast <sup>g</sup> made to play therein.

27 These wait all upon thee; that thou mayest give them their meat in due season.

28 That thou givest them they gather: thou <sup>h</sup> openest thy hand, they are filled with good.

29 Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled: thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust.

30 Thou <sup>i</sup> sendest forth thy spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth.

31 The glory of the Lord shall <sup>j</sup> endure for ever: the Lord shall rejoice <sup>k</sup> in his works.

32 He looketh on the earth, and it <sup>l</sup> trembleth: he toucheth the hills, and they <sup>m</sup> smoke.

33 I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live: I will sing praise to my God while I have my being.

34 My <sup>n</sup> meditation of him shall be sweet: I will be glad <sup>o</sup> in the Lord.

35 Let <sup>p</sup> the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked <sup>q</sup> be no more. Bless thou the Lord, O my soul. Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM CV.

1 An exhortation to praise God, and to seek out his works. 2 The story of God's providence over Abraham, 16 over Joseph, 23 over Jacob in Egypt, 26 over Moses delivering the Israelites, 37 over the Israelites brought out of Egypt, fed in the wilderness, and planted in Canaan.

O <sup>a</sup> GIVE thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name: make <sup>b</sup> known his deeds among the people.

heavens a curtain of sapphire, which shades from our mortal eyes a splendour that they could not support. "Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters?" may not this refer to those pillars of cloud, commonly called water-spouts, and which are common in the Mediterranean? These form a communication between the sea and skies—his towering chambers in the clouds on which he rides. The next image is still more sublime, (as was long ago remarked by Addison,) and has perhaps no parallel, even in the inspired writings. "He walketh," with a dignified deliberation, "upon the wings of those winds" that are known to advance, at times, not less than 100 miles within the hour.

The following verse has an ambiguity and obscurity which is often attendant on the sublime, and may be rendered either—"He maketh his angels winds, and his ministers flaming fire;" that is, they move with the force and rapidity of the tempest and the lightning; or the words may be rendered inversely—"He maketh the winds his messengers, and the flame (i. e. the lightnings) his ministers;" meaning, that all the agents in nature are employed to perform his will. The rest of the imagery, if not equally grand, is no less beautiful and appropriate. The hills, the valleys, the skies, the seas, are all explored for images to display the glory of Deity; and all this celestial artillery is planted against the impenitent and incorrigible sinner; and yet, amidst all this majesty and terror, the psalmist sits down, as it were beneath the curtains of the tabernacle, and says, "My meditation of him shall be sweet: I will be glad in the Lord." And thus also sings the Christian poet—

"This awful God is ours,
Our Father, and our love;
He shall send down his heavenly pow'rs
To carry us above."—Watts.

PSALM CV. Ver. 1—45. A review of God's mercies to Israel. —This is another of those psalms usually called historical, or narrative. The first of them, (Psalm lxxviii.) has been already considered, and is attributed to Asaph. This we know (at least the first fifteen verses) was composed by David, on occasion of placing the ark of God in Zion. (1 Chron. xvi.) Much of the matter of this psalm is similar to that of the seventy-eighth, above alluded to, with which it may be compared, as also with the scriptures referred to in our notes. The nature of our plan prevents us from going repeatedly over the same ground. Suffer somewhat compressed; the upper and under chaps both of a length, with a furrow from the nostrils: it feeds on serpents, frogs, and insects, on which account it might be deemed unclean; lays four eggs, and sits thirty days; migrates about August, and returns in spring; and is remarkable for its love to its parents, whom it never forsakes, but feeds and cherishes when old; whence it had the name chaseadai, which denotes kindness or piety, and stork, from the Greek storge, natural affection.)—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Wild goats.—[The yaal, is the ibex, or rock-goat, so called from alah, to ascend, because it is famous for mounting to the tops of the highest rocks. Its general appearance is that of the tame goat, of a dusky brown colour; but the male is larger, with long horns, bending backwards.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Great beasts.—Meaning the monsters of the deep.

PSALM CV. [It appears from 1 Chron. xvi. where the former part of this psalm, as far as the sixteenth verse, is found with little variation, that David composed it at the removal of the ark to Mount Zion, and he himself probably enlarged it afterwards with the glorious detail of God's merciful dealings with Abraham and his posterity till their settlement in the land of Promise. The Hallelujah, which terminates the preceding psalm, is made the title of this by the Septuagint, Vulgate, Arabic, and Ethiopic; and the Syriac considers it a paraphrase on the words, "Fear not, Jacob, to go down into Egypt;" and teaches us spiritually not to fear when we are obliged to contend with devils, for God is our shield, and will fight for us."—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Stork.—[The stork is a species of the ardea or heron genus, about the size of a goose in its body, but when erect, about three or four feet high; its general colour is white; extremity of the wings, and small part of the head, black; legs, very long, red, and naked, a great way up; the toes four, long and connected, with flat nails like those of a man; beak long, jagged, red, and 2 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

4 Seek <sup>e</sup> the LORD, and his strength seek <sup>a</sup> his face evermore.

5 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done; his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth;

6 O ye seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Jacob his chosen.

7 He is the LORD our God: his <sup>e</sup> judgments are in all the earth.

8 He <sup>f</sup> hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations.

9 Which covenant he made with <sup>e</sup> Abraham, and his oath unto <sup>b</sup> Isaac;

10 And confirmed the same unto Jacob <sup>i</sup> for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant:

11 Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the <sup>i</sup> lot of your inheritance:

12 When there were but a few <sup>k</sup> men in number; yea, very few, and strangers in it.

13 When they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people;

14 He suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he reprov'd kings for their sakes;

15 Saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.

16 Moreover he called for a famine upon the land: he brake the whole staff <sup>m</sup> of bread.

17 He <sup>n</sup> sent a man before them, even Joseph, who was sold <sup>o</sup> for a servant:

18 Whose feet they hurt with fetters: he <sup>p</sup> was laid in iron:

19 Until the time that his word came: the word of the LORD tried him.

20 The king <sup>q</sup> sent and loosed him; even the ruler of the people, and let him go free.

21 He made him lord of his house, and ruler of all his <sup>r</sup> substance:

22 To bind his princes at his pleasure; and teach his senators wisdom.

23 Israel <sup>s</sup> also came into Egypt; and Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham.

24 And <sup>t</sup> he increased his people greatly; and made them stronger than their enemies.

25 He turned their heart to hate <sup>u</sup> his people, to deal subtly with his servants.

26 He sent Moses his servant; and Aaron whom he had chosen.

c Am. 5.4, 5.

d Ps. 27.3.

e Is. 26.9.

f Lu. 1.73.

g Ge. 17.2.

h Ge. 26.3.

i Ge. 28.13.

j cord.

k De. 7.7.

l Ge. 41.54.

m Is. 3.1.

n Ge. 45.5.

o Ge. 39.1.

p his soul came into q Ge. 41.14.

r possess Ge. 46.6, 7.

t Ex. 1.7, &c.

u Ex. 4.12, &c.

v words of his signs.

w Ex. 7.12.

x Ex. 10.21.

y Ex. 7.20.

z Ex. 8.5, 6.

a Ex. 8.17.

b their rain had.

c Ex. 9.23.

d Ex. 10.12.

e Ex. 12.29.

f Ge. 49.3.

g Ex. 12.35.

h Ex. 12.33.

i Ex. 13.21.

j Ps. 78.13.

k Ex. 18.13.

l Ex. 17.6.

m Co. 10.4.

n singing.

o Jos. 21.43.

p De. 4.1, 40.

q Hallelu-

jah.

r Ich. 16.34.

s Ps. 40.5.

t Ps. 15.2.

u Ga. 6.9.

f Ps. 119.132.

27 They showed <sup>v</sup> his signs <sup>w</sup> among them and wonders in the land of Ham.

28 He sent <sup>x</sup> darkness, and made it dark, and they rebelled not against his word.

29 He turned their waters <sup>y</sup> into blood, and slew their fish.

30 Their land brought forth frogs <sup>z</sup> in abundance, in the chambers of their kings.

31 He <sup>a</sup> spake, and there came divers sorts of flies, and lice in all their coasts.

32 He <sup>b</sup> gave them hail <sup>c</sup> for rain, and flaming fire in their land.

33 He smote their vines also and their fig trees; and brake the trees of their coasts.

34 He spake, and the locusts <sup>d</sup> came, and caterpillars, and that without number.

35 And did eat up all the herbs in their land, and devoured the fruit of their ground.

36 He smote also all the first-born <sup>e</sup> in their land, the chief <sup>f</sup> of all their strength.

37 He <sup>g</sup> brought them forth also with silver and gold: and there was not one feeble person among their tribes.

38 Egypt <sup>h</sup> was glad when they departed, for the fear of them fell upon them.

39 He <sup>i</sup> spread a cloud for a covering; and fire to give light in the night.

40 The people <sup>j</sup> asked, and he brought <sup>k</sup> quails, and satisfied them with the bread of heaven.

41 He <sup>l</sup> opened the rock, and the waters gushed out; they ran in the dry places like a river.

42 For he remembered his holy <sup>m</sup> promise and Abraham his servant.

43 And he brought forth his people with joy and his chosen with <sup>n</sup> gladness:

44 And <sup>o</sup> gave them the lands of the heathen, and they inherited the labour of the people;

45 That <sup>p</sup> they might observe his statutes, and keep his laws. <sup>q</sup> Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CVI.

1 The psalmist exhorteth to praise God. 4 He prayeth for pardon of sin, as God did with his fathers. 7 The story of the people's rebellion, and God's mercy. 47 He concludeth with prayer and praise.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup> ye the LORD. O <sup>b</sup> give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Who <sup>c</sup> can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can show forth all his praise?

3 Blessed <sup>d</sup> are they that keep judgment, and he that doeth righteousness at all <sup>e</sup> times.

4 Remember <sup>f</sup> me, O LORD, with the favour that thou bearest unto thy people: O visit me with thy salvation;

rice it to remark here, that after a general exhortation to praise God, we have a general view of his mercies towards Israel, from the covenant made with Abraham till their taking possession of the land of Canaan; and the great end of all his dispensations towards them, in the close of the chapter, is stated to be, that "they might observe his statutes and keep his laws." So, under the New Testament dispensation, the great object of Christ's redemption is stated to be, that "he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." (Titus ii. 14.)

"Give thanks to God, invoke his name,
And tell the world his grace;
Sound through the earth his deeds of fame,
That all may seek his face!"—Watts.

PSALM CVI. Ver. 1—48. A Psalm of praise, confession,

Ver. 8. He hath remembered.—[In the other copy in Chronicles, the Psalmist exhorts the people to be mindful of the covenant which Jehovah had made with their fathers; but here he teaches them to praise God for having always remembered it.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Divers sorts of flies.—[Aron, was probably the dog-fly, as the LXX. render; and it is supposed to be the same as is called in Abyssinia the zénib; which word, says Bruce, is Arabic, and signifies the fly in general. The Chaldee paraphrase is content with calling it simply zebub, which has the same general signification. The Ethiopic version calls it tsaltsalya, which is the true name of this particular fly in Geez. It is in size very little longer than a bee, of a thicker proportion, and its wings, which are broader, are placed separate like those of a fly. Its head is large; the upper jaw or lip is sharp, and has at the end of it a strong pointed hair, of about a quarter of an inch in length; the lower jaw has two of these hairs; and this pencil of hairs, joined together, makes a resistance to the finger, nearly equal to a strong bristle of a hog. Its legs are serrated on the inside, and the whole covered with brown and prayer.—This is another of the historical psalms, and recapitulates the same wonderful deliverances on the part of God, and the like perverse rebellion on the part of Israel. The points particularly reprov'd in the conduct of the latter are—their murmuring in the wilderness for want of food and water, which were miraculously supplied;—the rebellion of Korah and his confederates;—the worshipping of a calf in Horeb;—and the idolatry of Baal-peor. These circumstances mark the Jewish character with a degree of perverseness, ingratitude, and folly, credible only to those who have a deep acquaintance with the depravity of human nature. But to this we may add also, the farther degradation of their character during their state of slavery in Egypt, when they seemed to have been reduced to a state of extreme ignorance, superstition, and even barbarism; so that they worshipped animals, like their Egyptian masters, hair or down. It has no sting, though it appears to be of the bee kind. As soon as this winged assassin appears, and its buzzing is heard, the cattle forsake their food, and run wildly about the plain, till they die, worn out with affliction, fatigue, and pain.]—Bagster.

Ver. 37. Not one feeble person.—[Considering the immense number of men, women, children, and cattle, it must certainly have appeared extraordinary, that there was none among them weak or feeble, none unable to perform the journey. The order was, that "not a hoof should be left behind;" and He who commanded gave strength to obey.]—Bagster.

Ver. 44. Labour.—[That is, "the produce of their labour;" the cities and houses they had built, the vineyards they had planted, &c.]—Bagster.

PSALM CVI. (As part of the preceding psalm is found in 1 Ch. xvi., so the first and two last verses of this are found in the same place; and it is highly probable this was composed upon the same occasion as the former, to which it seems to be a continuation; for as that celebrates the mercies of God to Israel, so this confesses and deprecates the rebellions of Israel against Jehovah.)—B.

5 That I may see the good of thy <sup>g</sup> chosen, that I may rejoice in the <sup>h</sup> gladness of thy nation, that I may glory with thine <sup>i</sup> inheritance.

6 We <sup>j</sup> have sinned with our fathers, we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly.

7 Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt; they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies; but <sup>k</sup> provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea.

8 Nevertheless he saved them for <sup>l</sup> his name's sake, that <sup>m</sup> he might make his mighty power to be known.

9 He <sup>n</sup> rebuked the Red sea also, and it was dried up: so he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness.

10 And he saved them from the hand of him that hated them, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

11 And <sup>o</sup> the waters covered their enemies: there was not one of them left.

12 Then believed they his words; they sang <sup>p</sup> his praise.

13 They <sup>q</sup> soon forgot <sup>r</sup> his works; they waited not for his counsel:

14 But <sup>s</sup> lusted <sup>t</sup> exceedingly in the wilderness, and tempted God in the desert.

15 And he gave them their request; but sent eanness <sup>u</sup> into their soul.

16 They <sup>v</sup> envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron the saint of the Lord.

17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram.

18 And a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burned up the wicked.

19 They made a calf <sup>w</sup> in Horeb, and worshipped the molten image.

20 Thus <sup>x</sup> they changed their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

21 They forgot God their saviour, which had done great things in Egypt;

22 Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red sea.

23 Therefore <sup>y</sup> he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 Yea, they despised <sup>z</sup> the pleasant <sup>a</sup> land, they believed not his word:

25 But murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord.

26 Therefore he lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 To <sup>b</sup> overthrow their seed also among the nations, and to scatter them in the lands.

28 They <sup>c</sup> joined themselves also unto Baal-peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.

29 Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the plague brake in upon them.

30 Then stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment: and so the plague was stayed.

31 And that was counted unto him for righteousness unto all generations for evermore.

32 They <sup>d</sup> angered him also at the waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

33 Because they provoked his spirit, so that he spake unadvisedly with his lips.

34 They <sup>e</sup> did not destroy the nations, concerning whom the Lord commanded them:

35 But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.

36 And <sup>f</sup> they served their idols: which were a snare unto them.

37 Yea, they sacrificed <sup>g</sup> their sons and their daughters unto devils,

38 And shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and the land <sup>h</sup> was polluted with blood.

39 Thus were they defiled <sup>i</sup> with their own works, and went a whoring <sup>j</sup> with their own inventions.

40 Therefore <sup>k</sup> was the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people, insomuch that he abhorred <sup>l</sup> his own inheritance.

41 And he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and they that hated them ruled over them.

42 Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand.

43 Many times did he deliver them; but they provoked him with their counsel, and were <sup>m</sup> brought low for their iniquity.

44 <sup>n</sup> Nevertheless he regarded their affliction, when he heard their cry:

45 And he remembered for them his covenant, and repented according to the multitude of his mercies.

46 He made them also to be pitied <sup>o</sup> of all those that carried them captives.

47 Save <sup>p</sup> us, O Lord our God, and gather us from among the heathen, to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praise.

48 Blessed <sup>q</sup> be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say, Amen. <sup>r</sup> Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM CVII.

1 The psalmist exhorteth the redeemed, in praising God, to observe his manifold providence, 4 over travellers, 10 over captives, 17 over sick men, 23 over seamen, 33 and in divers varieties of life.

GIVE thanks unto the Lord, for he is <sup>a</sup> good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom and were lost to every sentiment of national independence, freedom, or ambition; insomuch that they were hardly prevailed upon to accept the liberty that was offered them; and murmured at the divine interference, as if the object had been to lead them into slavery, instead of advancing them to privileges and to honour, above all the nations that were around them. Their repeated crimes, however, were followed by repeated pardons, and reiterated deliverances. "Many times did he deliver them, but they provoked him; . . . and were brought low for their iniquities. Nevertheless, he regarded their affliction when he heard their cry."

PSALM CVII. Ver. 1—43. A Psalm of general thanksgiving for the mercies of Divine Providence.—This psalm, according to Bishop Louth, "may be enumerated among the most elegant monuments of antiquity; and it is chiefly indebted for its elegance to the general plan and conduct of the poem. It cele-

Ver. 7. Provoked him.—"Thee," as harmonizing better with the former member of the verse.

Ver. 9. Rebuked.—[In the descriptions of the Psalmist, every thing has life. The sea is an animated being, behaves itself proudly, is rebuked, and retires in confusion.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Leanness.—"They despised the manna, calling it light or innutritive food. God gave them flesh as they desired, but gave no blessing with it; and, in consequence, they did not fatten, but grew lean upon it; and many, surfeited by excess, died of disease. Instead of reason, "leanness," however, Bishop Louth supposes we should read zeal, "nausea or loathing," which appears to be supported by several ancient versions, and by Numb. xi. 20. where this portion of the history of the Israelites is recorded, and where the word zara is used, and rendered, "it be loathsome."—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Their glory.—[That is, their God, who ought to have been the peculiar object of their glory.]—Bagster.

Ver. 22. Wondrous works . . . land of Ham.—[The plagues He inflicted on the Egyptians. Egypt is called the land of Ham, or rather, Cham, because it was peopled by Mizraim the son of Ham, and grandson of Noah. Plutarch informs us, that the Egyptians called their country Chemia: and the Copts give it the name of Chem, to the present day.]—Bagster.

Ver. 28. Of the dead.—[The word matthim, signifies dead men; for the idols of the heathen were generally men,—warriors, kings, or lawgivers,—who had been deified after their death; though many of them had been execrated during their life.]—Bagster.

Ver. 37. Unto devils.—[However unnatural and horrid human sacrifices may appear, it is certain, that they did not only exist, but almost universally prevailed in the heathen world, especially among the Canaanites and Phœnicians.]—Bagster.

PSALM CVII. [The author of this Psalm is unknown; but it was evidently written to commemorate the return of the Jews from the Babylonian captivity; and it may easily be perceived that it must have been sung in alternate parts, having a double burden, or two intercalary verses often recurring. Bishop Louth considers it as written "after the method of the ancient pastoralists, where, he is the subject of their verse what it will, each swain endeavour ne hath redeemed <sup>b</sup> from the hand of the enemy;

3 And gathered <sup>c</sup> them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the <sup>d</sup> south.

4 They wandered in the wilderness <sup>e</sup> in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in.

5 Hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.

6 Then <sup>f</sup> they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses.

7 And he led them forth by the right <sup>g</sup> way, that they might go to a city of habitation.

8 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

9 For <sup>h</sup> he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.

10 Such as sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, being bound <sup>i</sup> in affliction and iron;

11 Because <sup>j</sup> they rebelled against the words of God, and contemned the counsel <sup>k</sup> of the Most High:

12 Therefore he brought down their heart with labour; they fell down, and there was none <sup>l</sup> to help.

13 Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses.

14 He <sup>m</sup> brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death, and brake their bands in sunder.

15 O that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

16 For <sup>n</sup> he hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the gates of iron in sunder.

17 Fools <sup>o</sup> because of their transgression, and because of their iniquities, are afflicted.

18 Their soul abhorreth all manner of meat; and they draw near unto the gates of death.

19 Then <sup>p</sup> they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.

20 He <sup>q</sup> sent his word, <sup>r</sup> and healed them, <sup>s</sup> and delivered them from their destructions.

brates the goodness and mercy of God towards mankind, as demonstrated in the immediate assistance and comfort which he affords, in the greatest calamities, to those who devoutly implore his aid: in the first place, to those who wander in the desert, and who encounter the horrors of famine; next, to those who are in bondage—to those who are afflicted with disease; and, finally, to those who are tossed about upon the ocean. The prolixity of the argument is occasionally relieved by narration; and examples are superadded of the divine severity in punishing the wicked, as well as of his benignity to the devout and virtuous; and both the narrative and preceptive parts are recommended to the earnest contemplation of considerate minds. Thus, the whole poem actually divides into five parts, nearly equal: the four first of which conclude with an intercalary verse expressive of the subject or design of the hymn; and which is thus rendered by our translators: "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness; and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" This distich, as the same eminent critic calls it, is occasionally diversified, and forms a chorus to the ode. It might more literally be rendered, "Let them confess to Jehovah his mercy; and his wonderful works to the children of Adam."

to excel the other; and one may perceive their thoughts and expressions gradually to arise upon each other." "No doubt," he adds, "the composition of this psalm is admirable throughout; and the descriptive part of it adds at least its share of beauty to the whole; but what is most to be admired is its conciseness, and withal the expressiveness of the diction, which strikes the imagination with inimitable elegance. The weary and bewildered traveller—the miserable captive in the dungeon—the sick and dying man—the seaman foundering in a storm—are described in so affecting a manner, that they far exceed any thing of the kind, though never so much laboured!"—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Found no city.—This is the first similitude; in which the Israelites in captivity are compared to travellers in a dreary, uninhabited, and barren desert, spent with hunger and thirst, as well as by the fatigues of the journey.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Sit in darkness.—[Here begins the SECOND comparison; in which the state of the captives in Babylon is illustrated by that of prisoners in a dreary dungeon.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Fools, &c..—[This is the THIRD comparison; the captives being compared to persons in a dangerous malady, as the consequence of their own sins.]—Bagster.

b Ps. 106. 10.
c Is. 43. 5, 6.
Eze. 39. 25, &c.
d sea.
e De. 32. 10.
f v. 13. 19. 28.
Ps. 50. 15.
Ho. 5. 15.
g Eze. 8. 21.
Is. 30. 21.
h Lu. 1. 53, 73.
i Job 36. 8, 9.
j Lu. 3. 42.
5. 16, 17.
k Lu. 7. 30.
l Job 9. 13.
m Ps. 146. 7.
n Is. 45. 2.
o Ps. 38. 3, 5.
p Job 33. 19, &c.
q 2 Ki. 20. 4, 5.
Mat. 8. 8.
r Ps. 30. 2, 3.
s Ps. 66. 5.
t Lu. 7. 12.
He. 13. 15.
u singing.
v Jo. 1. 4, &c.
w maketh to stand.
x Na. 2. 10.
y all their wisdom is swallowed up.
z Ps. 59. 9.
Mat. 3. 26.
66. 16.
111. 1.
b 1 Ki. 17. 1, 7.
c Ge. 13. 10.
19. 35.
d sadness.
e Ps. 114. 4.
Is. 41. 18.
f 2 Ki. 10. 32.

21 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works <sup>a</sup> to the children of men!

22 And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of <sup>b</sup> thanksgiving, and declare his works with <sup>c</sup> rejoicing.

23 They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters;

24 These see the works of the LORD, and his wonders in the deep.

25 For <sup>d</sup> he commandeth, and <sup>e</sup> raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof.

26 They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths: their soul is melted <sup>f</sup> because of trouble.

27 They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and <sup>g</sup> are at their wit's end.

28 Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses.

29 He <sup>h</sup> maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.

30 Then are they glad because they be quiet, so he bringeth them unto their desired haven.

31 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

32 Let them exalt him also in <sup>i</sup> the congregation of the people, and praise him in the assembly of the elders.

33 He <sup>j</sup> turneth rivers into a wilderness, and the water-springs into dry ground;

34 A <sup>k</sup> fruitful land into <sup>l</sup> barrenness, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.

35 He <sup>m</sup> turneth the wilderness into a standing water, and dry ground into water-springs.

36 And there he maketh the hungry to dwell that they may prepare a city for habitation;

37 And sow the fields, and plant vineyards, which may yield fruits of increase.

38 He blesseth them also, so that they are multiplied greatly; and suffereth not their cattle to decrease.

39 Again, they are <sup>n</sup> diminished and brought

Bishop Horne applies this psalm particularly to the Christian church, on the suggestion of our Lord to the Jews, that many of his redeemed ones should "come from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south," and "should sit down in the kingdom of God," whilst themselves, for their unbelief, should be "thrust out," and scattered through the wilderness of this world, as has indeed been most remarkably the case for many centuries; for there is scarcely any considerable country in which the children of Abraham are not found. It is not, however, to these unhappy apostates that the psalmist primarily refers; but rather to their forefathers in the time of Moses, and to Abraham's spiritual seed, who are all pilgrims and strangers in the earth, who have here "no continuing city," but seek one that is above. (Heb. xi. 14—16.)

The same persons are then represented as captives, and that on account of their rebellion against the Most High; yet when their hearts were suitably humbled, they were saved out of their distresses. Cases of personal affliction and disease are next introduced, with this emphatic remark, that "fools, because of their transgressions, are afflicted;" in which sin is pointed out as the source of all affliction, and sinners are branded universally as fools; and, indeed, what folly is so great as sin; whether

Ver. 23. Go down to the sea.—[This is the FOURTH comparison; their captivity was as dreary and alarming as a dreadful tempest at sea; with a most natural and striking description of which we are here presented.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Raiseth.—The rising tempest is here compared to a giant, raising himself upright.

Ver. 26. Soul is melted.—[This is not less expressive than descriptive. When the sea runs high; and when the vessel is raised to the clouds on the ridge of a stupendous wave, and then precipitated into the yawning gulf below; the very soul seems to dissolve, and the whole mind to melt away, so that neither feeling nor reflection remains, but the mere apprehension of inevitable destruction.]—Bagster.

Ver. 39. Again, they are diminished.—[The incidents detailed in these verses, which frequently occur, and mark the superintendence of a benign Providence, and the hand of a just God, appear to be brought forward to illustrate the redemption of the Israelites from captivity, and the punishment of their oppressors, the Babylonians. Wherefore, at last, as in a common chorus, they conclude with exhorting each other to a serious consideration of these things, and to make a proper return to the Almighty.]—Bagster.

now through oppression, affliction, and sorrow.
40 He poureth contempt upon princes, and causeth them to wander in the wilderness, where there is no way.

41 Yet setteth he the poor on high from affliction, and maketh him families like a flock.

42 The righteous shall see it, and rejoice; and all iniquity shall stop her mouth.

43 Whoso is wise, and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord.

PSALM CVIII.

1 David encourageth himself to praise God. 5 He prayeth for God's assistance according to his promise. 11 His confidence in God's help.

A Song or Psalm of David.

O GOD, my heart is fixed; I will sing and give praise, even with my glory.

2 Awake, psaltery and harp: I myself will awake early.

3 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people: and I will sing praises unto thee among the nations.

4 For thy mercy is great above the heavens: and thy truth reacheth unto the clouds.

5 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: and thy glory above all the earth;

6 That thy beloved may be delivered: save with thy right hand, and answer me.

7 God hath spoken in his holiness; I will rejoice, I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth.

8 Gilead is mine; Manasseh is mine; Ephraim also is the strength of my head; Judah is my lawgiver;

9 Moab is my wash-pot; over Edom will I cast out my shoe; over Philistia will I triumph.

10 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

11 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hosts?

we consider the act itself, or the consequences to which it leads? Yet the same Lord, who is "rich in mercy to all who call upon him," sends his word and heals the penitent backslider. The concluding class of persons is that of mariners, than whom none see more of the power or goodness of divine providence. And when a storm overtakes them, then even sailors pray: "They cry unto the Lord, and he delivereth them out of their distresses." Few of us, perhaps, may be exposed to this terrible situation; "But then, (as Bishop Horne remarks,) we cannot help reflecting, that there is a ship in which we are all embarked; there is a troubled sea on which we all sail; there are storms by which we are all frequently overtaken; and there is a haven which we all desire to behold and to enter. For the church is a ship; the world is a sea; temptations, persecutions, and afflictions are the waves of it; the prince of the power of the air is the stormy wind which raises them, and heaven is the only port of rest and security. Often during the voyage, for our punishment or our trial, God permitteth us to be thus assaulted." But, as he adds, in all such cases, prayer is the only resource; and if we cry to Him who governs and directs the storm, as his disciples on earth did, "Lord save, or we perish!" he will make the storm subside into a calm, and bring us to our desired haven."

In the conclusion, the psalmist farther illustrates the conduct of Divine Providence, in changing the face of nature to punish the rebellious, or to save and bless the penitent or obedient of his people. The concluding verse is particularly interesting, as containing this important fact, that those who study this subject, will constantly find in it the most pleasing exhibition of "the loving-kindness of the Lord."

PSALM CVIII. Ver. 1—13. Prayer for help.—This psalm consists of the latter part of the fifty-seventh Psalm, and the latter part of the sixtieth, with no material alteration. The fifty-seventh was composed when David fled from Saul in the cave; and begins with grievous complaints, which are here omitted. The sixtieth was written after David had for some time reigned over all Israel, and when he was engaged in war

Ver. 42. All iniquity.—That is, all cavillers at divine providence. See Job v. 16.

This Psalm begins the 5th book of the Psalter, according to the Rabbin.

PSALM CVIII. Title.—A Song or Psalm of David.—Some have supposed, the term psalm implies the accompaniment of instruments, and song does not; may be equivalent to "with or without instruments." But this is by no means certain.

Ver. 1. O God, my heart is fixed, &c.—The first five verses of this psalm are the last five of Psalm lvi., and the remaining eight are taken from Psalm lx.

g Job 12.21, 24.
h or, void places.
i 1Sa.2.5.8. Ps.112.7.9.

j after
k Job 5.15, 16, 22.19.

l Je.9.12. Ho.14.9.

a Ps.57.7. 11.

b or, skies.
c Ps.60.5. &c.

d Ge.49.10.

e Job 16.2. Is.2.22.

f 2Ch.20.12. Is.45.21.

g Ro.16.20. 2 Co.5.14.

a Ps.83.1.

b Je.17.14.

c deceit.

d have opened themselves.

e Mat.26.60. Ac.6.13.

f Ja.15.25.

g Lu.6.11, 12.

h Ps.35.7,12.

i or, an adversary. Zec.3.1.

j go out guiltily, or, wicked.

k Pr.28.9.

l Ac.1.20.

m or, charge.

n Ex.22.24.

o Job 18.9, 19.

p Ps.37.28. Is.14.20.

q Pr.10.7.

r Ex.30.5.

12 Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man.

13 Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.

PSALM CIX.

1 David, complaining of his slanderous enemies, under the person of Judas devoteth them. 16 He sheweth their sin. 21 Complaining of his own misery, he prayeth for help. 30 He promiseth thankfulness.

To the chief Musician, a Psalm of David.

HOLD not thy peace, O God of my praise;

2 For the mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful are opened against me: they have spoken against me with a lying tongue.

3 They compassed me about also with words of hatred; and fought against me without a cause.

4 For my love they are my adversaries: but I give myself unto prayer.

5 And they have rewarded me evil for good, and hatred for my love.

6 Set thou a wicked man over him: and let Satan stand at his right hand.

7 When he shall be judged, let him be condemned: and let his prayer become sin.

8 Let his days be few; and let another take his office.

9 Let his children be fatherless, and his wife a widow.

10 Let his children be continually vagabonds, and beg: let them seek their bread also out of their desolate places.

11 Let the extortioner catch all that he hath; and let the strangers spoil his labour.

12 Let there be none to extend mercy unto him: neither let there be any to favour his fatherless children.

13 Let his posterity be cut off; and in the generation following let their name be blotted out.

14 Let the iniquity of his fathers be remembered with the Syrians and others. It also begins with complaints of the calamities to which Israel had been exposed; and these likewise are left out. So that this, as a psalm, is more in the strain of confidence, gratitude, and joyful hope, than either of those from which it is taken; and thus more suited to a season of thanksgiving for past mercies, and prayer for farther deliverance; and it is probable, it was compiled for that purpose.—T. Scott.

PSALM CIX. Ver. 1—31. It is generally supposed that this psalm was composed by David, when persecuted by Saul, who was rendered more implacable by the base and malicious calumnies of Doeg and others; though some are of opinion, that it was written when David fled from Absalom, and that Ahithophel, rather than Doeg, is the typical person against whom it is principally directed.

Bishop Patrick, and other commentators, following Aben Ezra and D. Kimchi, apply the psalm in the first place to David, under the persecution of Saul and his party, particularly Doeg, the Edomite. But we incline rather to refer the psalm to a subsequent period; namely, that of Absalom's rebellion, and to attribute the curses here recited to Shimei, "whose mouth was full of cursing and bitterness," while David, like his great antitype, "blessed and cursed not." (See 2 Sam. xvi. 5—13.)

Such was the conjecture of Drs. Sykes and Kennicott, Professor Michaelis, and others, who attribute all the curses from verse 6 to 19 inclusive, to David's enemies. Dr. Boothroyd, however, remarks, that David, adopting these imprecations as his own in the 20th verse, "Let this be the reward of mine enemies," &c., reinstates all the difficulty arising from a supposition of the preceding language being his.

Bishop Horne and others, therefore, adopt a different mode of explanation. "As most of the following verbs are in the future tense, and the rest have evidently a predictive and future import, the same liberty is here taken (by him) as in Psalm lix. of rendering them throughout uniformly in that tense; by which means, the curses pronounced in this psalm will at once

5—12. They were probably united for some occasion at present unknown, and which it is useless to conjecture.

PSALM CIX. Ver. 1. God of my praise.—That is, worthy to be praised. Ps. cxlii. 3.

Ver. 6. Set thou a wicked man.—Bishop Horne, "Thou wilt set the wicked one over him." See Acts i. 16, &c.

Ver. 7. Be condemned.—i. e. to prison, or execution.—Let his prayer become sin.—Bishop Horsley remarks, that "the Jewish worship is now become sin, as it contains a standing denial of our Lord."

bered with the LORD; and let not the sin of his mother be blotted <sup>a</sup> out.

15 Let them be before the LORD continually, that he may cut off the memory of them from the earth.

16 Because that he remembered not to show mercy, but persecuted the poor and needy man, that he might even slay the broken in heart.

17 As <sup>a</sup> he loved cursing, so let it come unto him: as he delighted not in blessing, so let it be far from him.

18 As he clothed himself with cursing like as with his garment, so let it come <sup>a</sup> into his bowels like <sup>a</sup> water, and like oil into his bones.

19 Let it be unto him as the garment which covereth him, and for a girdle wherewith he is girded continually.

20 Let this be the reward of mine adversaries from the LORD, and of them that speak evil against my soul.

21 But do thou for me, O God the Lord, for thy name's <sup>a</sup> sake: because thy mercy is good, deliver thou me.

22 For I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me.

23 I am gone like the shadow <sup>a</sup> when it declineth: I am tossed up and down as the locust.

24 My knees <sup>a</sup> are weak through fasting; and my flesh faileth of fatness.

25 I became also a reproach <sup>a</sup> unto them: when they looked upon me <sup>a</sup> they shook their heads.

26 Help me, O LORD my God: O save me according to thy mercy:

<sup>a</sup> Is. 43.25.

<sup>t</sup> Eccl. 35.6.

<sup>u</sup> within him.

<sup>v</sup> Nu. 5.22.

<sup>w</sup> Ps. 25.11.

<sup>x</sup> Ps. 102.11.

<sup>y</sup> He. 12.12.

<sup>z</sup> Ps. 22.6,7.

<sup>a</sup> Mat. 27.39.

<sup>b</sup> Ps. 17.19.

<sup>c</sup> 2Sa. 16.11.

<sup>d</sup> Is. 65.14.

<sup>e</sup> Ps. 35.26.

<sup>f</sup> Ps. 111.1.

<sup>g</sup> Ps. 73.23.

<sup>h</sup> the judges of.

<sup>a</sup> Mat. 22.44.

<sup>b</sup> Ps. 45.5.

<sup>c</sup> Ju. 5.2.

<sup>d</sup> Ps. 96.9.

<sup>e</sup> more than

<sup>f</sup> shall have

<sup>g</sup> He. 5.6.

<sup>h</sup> Ro. 2.5.

<sup>i</sup> He. 3.13.

<sup>j</sup> or, great.

27 That they may know that this is thy <sup>b</sup> hand; that thou, LORD, hast done it.

28 Let <sup>c</sup> them curse, but bless thou: when they arise, let them be ashamed; but let thy servant <sup>d</sup> rejoice.

29 Let <sup>e</sup> mine adversaries be clothed with shame, and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle.

30 I will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth; yea, I <sup>f</sup> will praise him among the multitude.

31 For he shall stand at the <sup>g</sup> right hand of the poor, to save him from <sup>h</sup> those that condemn his soul.

PSALM CX.

1 The kingdom, 4 the priesthood, 5 the conquest, 7 and the passion of Christ.

A Psalm of David.

THE <sup>a</sup> LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool.

2 The LORD shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule <sup>b</sup> thou in the midst of thine enemies.

3 Thy people shall be willing <sup>c</sup> in the day of thy power, in the beauties <sup>d</sup> of holiness <sup>e</sup> from the womb of the morning: thou hast <sup>f</sup> the dew of thy youth.

4 The LORD hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou <sup>g</sup> art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek.

5 The LORD at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day <sup>h</sup> of his wrath.

6 He shall judge among the heathen, he shall fill the places with the dead bodies; he <sup>i</sup> shall wound the heads over <sup>j</sup> many countries.

appear to be of the same import with those in the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy," which see.

But as St. Peter quotes this psalm in the imperative, in Acts i. 16, 20, 25, and applies some of the imprecations to the traitor Judas, it seems doubtful whether we have sufficient authority to interpret them all in the simple future. Two things are, however, certain; 1. That such expressions can only be justified when uttered under the influence of immediate inspiration; and, 2. We ought in no case to use such Scriptures in expression of private malevolence. The church is in many places (see Rev. xix. 2, 3, &c.) represented as confirming or applauding the divine judgments on the wicked, in the same manner as the spectators of a public trial may commend the conduct of a judge, in pronouncing sentence on a criminal clearly convicted, without the least personal enmity to the culprit.

PSALM CX. Ver. 1-7. The kingdom, priesthood, and final triumphs of the Messiah.—This very much resembles the second psalm, by the same author, (David;) and refers to the same events, namely, the conversion of the heathen, and the universal prevalence of Messiah's kingdom. "It begins, like the former, with narrating a divine decree. 'The LORD said unto my Lord;' and promises him 'the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession.' He is also ordained a priest, as well as king, and that of an order peculiar to himself, an 'everlasting priesthood,' see Heb. v. 6; vi. vii.) which admits of no succession and no change.

Quoting this psalm in evidence of the divinity of Christ, Dr. J. Pye Smith judiciously remarks:—"The Messiah is here represented as a person distinct from Jehovah, and as receiving from him a dominion the most extensive—a dominion, the exercise of which is described in characters which we cannot, without difficulty, conceive as inherent in a merely created and dependant being. He is represented as a sovereign, no less than a priest; as receiving the homage of his devoted subjects; and as employing irresistible powers in discomfiting and punishing his persisting opposers. Jesus certainly proposed this passage, as involving his enemies in an unanswerable difficulty. 'How, then, doth David, by the Spirit, call him Lord, saying, Jehovah said to my Lord,' &c. 'If David, then, called him (Messiah) Lord, how is he his son?' (Matt. xxii. 43-46.) To this it is evident the Jews could give no satisfactory answer, being ignorant (perhaps wilfully ignorant) of the true character of the Messiah; and such appears to be the case with many others."

In viewing this psalm with relation to the progress of Christ's kingdom, we may remark, that all his army consists of volunteers; yet have they so little idea of merit in themselves, that they give him the glory, by offering to him the fruit of all their spiritual conflicts. They are like "the Governors of the people (namely, of Israel) that offered themselves willingly" to the war; (Judges v. 9.) and when they gained a victory, brought with cheerfulness their offerings to the Lord, saying with Solomon, "All things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee." (1 Chron. xxix. 14. 2 Chron. xv. 11, 12.)

The last verse is attended with considerable difficulty. Many commentators explain drinking of the brook, in reference to our Redeemer's sufferings, and it is certain that these

Ver. 18. Oil into his bones.—[There is nothing more pernicious to a naked nose than oil, or any other moisture: it is said to cause exquisite pain, and to render it carious.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Let this be, &c.—[Some, considering this verse a key to the preceding, render, 'This is the work of my adversaries before the Lord;' but malaiti, not only signifies work, but the reward or recompense for work: (Le. xix. 13. Prov. x. 16. Je. xxii. 13.) and malaiti, does not mean before, but from, from within.

Ver. 23. Like the shadow.—[Like the shadows of terrestrial objects near sun-set; lengthening every moment, growing fainter as they lengthen, and, in the instant that they shoot to immeasurable length, disappearing.]—Bagster. Tossed up and down as the locust.—Dr. Shaw, when at Algiers, says, "when the wind blew briskly, so that these swarms (of locusts) were crowded by others, we had a lively idea of being tossed up and down as the locust."

PSALM CX. [This Psalm was probably composed by David after Nathan's prophetic address; and, from the grandeur of the subject, and the sublimity of the expressions, it is evident that it can only refer, as the ancient Jews fully acknowledged, to the royal dignity, priesthood, victories, and triumphs of the Messiah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord.—"Jehovah assuredly said unto my Adon," which last word is used for Lord, in every variety of rank, from the master of a family to the sovereign of an empire. In its origin, this title seems similar to the Italian cardinal, which means primarily a binge, as Adon does a seckel; being figuratively applied to executive magistrates, on whom the government rests, and public affairs turn.—Sit thou at my right hand.—This was the place of honour, Ps. xlv. 9. So the Greeks placed Minerva on the right hand of Jove; and Niebuhr relates, that when he had an audience of the Imam of Sana, (in Arabia,) the Imam placed his sons on his right hand, and his brothers on his left.

Ver. 3. Thy people shall be willing.—Ainsworth, "Voluntaries," or volunteers; meaning, as he explains it, such as shall freely and liberally present both themselves and their oblations.—In the beauties of holiness.—In the beautiful sanctuary," says Dr. Durell: meaning, perhaps, that Messiah's volunteers were there to assemble. Others, "In the beautiful vestments," alluding to the splendid dresses of the priests, typifying (as Ainsworth suggests) the graces and virtues of the Holy Spirit. See Rev. xix. 14.—From the womb of the morning.—Marg. "More than the womb of the morning thou shalt have," &c. This passage is confessedly very difficult. Bishop Lowth renders it, "Beyond, (or more abundant than,) the womb of the morning, is the dew of thy youth;" taking this word in the sense of progeny, or offspring, as Dr. Watts had before explained it;

"Thy converts shall surpass

The numerous drops of morning dew."

N. B. In pointing this verse, the colon should be placed, not at morning, but at holiness, thus: "Thy people shall be willing (or volunteers) in the beauty of holiness: more than the womb of the morning thou hast the dew of thy youth."

Ver. 6. The Lord at thy right hand.—This is evidently addressed to Jehovah, and refers to Messiah. Compare verse 1.

Ver. 8. He shall fill the places.—That is, the field of battle shall be covered with the slain.—He shall wound the heads over many countries.—"The head over a great country." So Horsey; but Kennicott renders it, "The head over many a country."

7 He shall drink of the brook <sup>k</sup> in the way : therefore shall he lift up the head.

PSALM CXI.

1 The psalmist by his example inciteth others to praise God for his glorious, 5 and gracious works. 10 The fear of God breedeth true wisdom.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup>ye the LORD. I will praise the LORD with my whole heart, in the assembly <sup>b</sup> of the upright, and in the congregation.

2 The works <sup>c</sup> of the LORD are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.

3 His work <sup>d</sup> is honourable and glorious : and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered : the LORD <sup>e</sup> is gracious and full of compassion.

5 He <sup>f</sup> hath given <sup>e</sup> meat unto them that fear him : he will ever be mindful of his covenant.

6 He hath showed his people the power of his works, that he may give them the heritage of the heathen.

7 The works of his hands <sup>g</sup> are verity and judgment ; all <sup>h</sup> his commandments <sup>i</sup> are sure.

8 They <sup>j</sup> stand fast for ever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightness.

9 He sent redemption unto his people : he hath commanded his covenant for ever : holy <sup>k</sup> and reverend <sup>l</sup> is his name.

10 The <sup>m</sup> fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom : <sup>n</sup> a good understanding have all they that do <sup>o</sup> his commandments : his praise endureth for ever.

PSALM CXII.

1 Godliness hath the promises of this life, 4 and of the life to come. 19 The prosperity of the godly shall be an eye-sore to the wicked.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup>ye the LORD. Blessed is the man that feareth the LORD, that delighteth <sup>b</sup> greatly in his commandments.

2 His seed shall be mighty upon earth : the generation of the upright shall be blessed.

3 Wealth and riches <sup>c</sup> shall be in his house : and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 Unto the upright there ariseth <sup>d</sup> light in the k Ju.7.5,6.

a Hallelu-jah.

b Ps.109.30.

c Job.38.41.

d Ps.92.5.

e Re.15.3.

f Mat.6.26,

33.

g prey.

h Ps.19.7.

i are established.

j De.23.58.

k Job.28.28.

l Pr.1.7.

m 9.10.

n Ec.12.13.

o or, good success.

Pr.3.4.

k them.

a Hallelu-jah.

b Ps.1.1.3.

c Ps.11.1.

d Ps.57.11.

e Ps.58.10.

f Lu.6.35.

g judgment.

h Ep.5.15.

i Ps.15.5.

j Pr.3.25,26.

k De.24.13.

l Re.22.11.

m Lu.13.28.

n Pr.11.7.

a Hallelu-jah.

b Is.59.19.

c Mal.1.11.

d exalteth himself to dwelt.

e Is.57.15.

f Sa.2.3.

g Ps.45.16.

h dwell in an.

darkness : he is gracious, and full of compassion, and righteous.

5 A good man sheweth favour, and <sup>a</sup> lendeth : he will guide his affairs with <sup>e</sup> discretion.

6 Surely he <sup>b</sup> shall not be moved for ever : the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

7 He <sup>c</sup> shall not be afraid of evil tidings : his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD.

8 His heart <sup>d</sup> is established, he shall not be afraid, until he see <sup>e</sup> his desire upon his enemies.

9 He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor ; his <sup>f</sup> righteousness endureth for ever ; his horn shall be exalted with honour.

10 The wicked shall see <sup>g</sup> it, and be grieved ; he shall gnash <sup>k</sup> with his teeth, and melt away : the <sup>h</sup> desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM CXIII.

1 An exhortation to praise God for his excellency, 6 for his mercy.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup>ye the LORD. Praise, O ye servants of the LORD, praise the name of the LORD.

2 Blessed be the name of the LORD from this time forth and for evermore.

3 From <sup>b</sup> the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same the LORD's name <sup>c</sup> is to be praised.

4 The LORD <sup>d</sup> is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens.

5 Who <sup>e</sup> is like unto the LORD our God, who <sup>f</sup> dwelleth on high,

6 Who <sup>g</sup> humbleth <sup>h</sup> himself to behold <sup>i</sup> the things that are in heaven, and in the earth !

7 He <sup>j</sup> raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth the needy out of the dunghill ;

8 That he may set <sup>k</sup> him with princes, even with the princes <sup>l</sup> of his people.

9 He maketh the barren woman to <sup>m</sup> keep house, and to be a joyful mother of children. Praise ye the LORD.

not only preceded, but were the cause of his subsequent exaltation. (Phil. ii. 9.) It is true also, that suffering is often expressed by drinking; but it is usually from a cup, and the liquor is mingled with some deleterious ingredients; or if it be water, it is dirty, or mixed with gall; but never the clear stream. The imagery here is therefore borrowed from the case of a conqueror, who, faint or thirsty in the battle, refreshes himself at the stream he passes, and pursues the enemy with renewed vigour. That the Saviour, for our sakes, endured many bitter conflicts, is indisputable; and as we know that he was encouraged and supported by communications from above; such may reasonably be supposed here referred to. (See Matt. iv. 11. John xii. 28.)

That this psalm refers solely and exclusively to our Redeemer is certain, from its application, in the New Testament; and, indeed, this was freely admitted by the more ancient Jews, as may be seen in Pool's Synopsis, and other commentaries; though now they find it necessary in many cases to pervert the Old Testament, to excuse their rejection of the New.

PSALM CXI. Ver. 1—10. A Psalm of general thanksgiving.—It commences with an admiration of the works of nature and providence, which "are sought out of all them that have pleasure therein." "Nothing (says Bishop Horne) cometh from the hands of the divine artist, but what is excellent and perfect in its kind. . . . Happy are they who, with humility and diligence, with faith and devotion, give themselves to the contemplation of these works, and take pleasure and delight therein. To them shall the gate of true science open; they shall understand (to a certain extent) the mysteries of creation, providence, and redemption; and they who thus seek shall find the treasures of eternal wisdom;" for "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," and should be laid as the foundation of all our studies and inquiries.

PSALM CXI. Ver. 1. Praise the Lord.—Hallelujah.—That this should be considered as the title, and no part of the psalm itself, is evident from the alphabetical construction of the poem, which is acrostic, and begins with Aleph; whereas Hallelujah begins with the fifth letter of the alphabet, answering to our H.

Ver. 4. His wonderful works to be remembered.—Louth, "A memorial of his wonders."

Ver. 5. Given meat—i. e. food. Some think this refers to the manna rained upon Israel in the wilderness; we should rather think, to the quails. See Ps. cv. 40.

PSALM CXII. Ver. 1. Praise, &c.—This psalm is also alphabetical. See on ver. 1. of the preceding.

Ver. 4. Light ariseth—"Springeth up," as the sun riseth. See Mal. iv. 2.

"They that would grow divinely wise,
Must with his fear begin;
Our fairest proof of knowledge lies In hating every sin."—Watts.

The great naturalist, Linnaeus, affords here a bright example. It is said, that "wherever he found an opportunity of expatiating on the greatness, the providence, and omnipotence of God, which frequently happened in his lectures and botanical excursions, his heart glowed with a celestial fire, and his mouth poured forth torrents of admirable eloquence."

PSALM CXII. Ver. 1—10. The happiness of them that fear God.—Bishop Patrick considers this psalm as a short commentary on the final verse of the preceding. It founds all the happiness of man on delight in God, and on benevolence to our fellow-creatures: the greatest luxury that a good man can enjoy. "Love and liberality (says Bishop Horne) do good to themselves, by doing it to others, and enjoy all the happiness which they cause." On the other hand, the wicked are envious at the prosperity of the righteous; they are grieved, enraged, and finally melt (or faint) with envy, to see their enjoyments, even in this life, while their own desires perish.

But to the upright, "there ariseth light in darkness." A gleam of light from heaven will penetrate the most gloomy situation—the most distressful scene.

"There is a light that gilds the darkest hour.
When dangers thicken, and when tempests lower;
That calm to faith and hope and love is given—
That peace remains when all besides is riven—
That light shines down on earth direct from heaven."

Edmeston.

PSALM CXIII. Ver. 1—9. An invitation to praise God continually.—This psalm, and the five following, constitute what the Jews call the great Hallel, or Hymn of Praise, which was recited at most of their festivals, and particularly at the Pass-

Ver. 5. With discretion.—According to Bishop Horne, this verse might be rendered, "It is well with the man who is gracious and communicative: He will support (or maintain) his words (or transactions) in judgment."

Ver. 9. He hath dispersed.—See 2 Cor. ix. 9.

Ver. 10. Melt.—Either from fear, Josh. ii. 11, or grief, Ps. xxii. 15.

PSALM CXIII. Ver. 6. In heaven.—Bishop Louth observes, that the two members of this line are to be referred severally to the two preceding lines; as if it were, "Who is exalted to dwell in the heavens; and who humbleth himself to inspect the things in the earth."—Bagster.

Ver. 9. To keep house.—Dr. Boothroyd renders the verse thus: "She who resideth barren at home, he maketh a joyful mother of children."—Praise ye the Lord.—Dr. Boothroyd considers this as the title of the following psalm which we think very probable.

PSALM CXIV.

An exhortation, by the example of the dumb creatures, to fear God in his church.

WHEN <sup>a</sup> Israel went out of Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of strange <sup>b</sup> language;

2 Judah <sup>c</sup> was his sanctuary, and <sup>d</sup> Israel his dominion.

3 The sea <sup>e</sup> saw it, and fled: <sup>f</sup> Jordan was driven back.

4 The mountains <sup>g</sup> skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs.

5 What <sup>h</sup> ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills, like lambs?

7 <sup>i</sup> Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the God of Jacob;

8 <sup>j</sup> Which turned the rock into a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

PSALM CXV.

1 Because God is truly glorious, 4 and idols are vanity, 9 he exhorteth to confidence in God. 12 God is to be blessed for his blessings.

NOT <sup>a</sup> unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake.

2 Wherefore <sup>b</sup> should the heathen say, Where is now their God?

3 But <sup>c</sup> our God is in the heavens: he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased.

4 Their idols <sup>d</sup> are silver and gold, the work of men's hands.

5 They have mouths, but they speak not: eyes have they, but they see not:

over, and was probably the hymn which our Lord sang (or chanted) with his disciples on that occasion. The psalm before us, which formed the first part of the great Hallel, represents Jehovah as "dwelling on high;" so that he looks down upon the most elevated of his creatures, and yet stooping to the concerns and circumstances of the lowest. (Compare 1 Sam. ii. 8.)—Barrenness was considered as one of the greatest misfortunes to which females are subject, and therefore did the Lord, in several instances, interfere by miracle to remove it; but this idea is, in the New Testament, applied to the Gentile church, which, after long ages of barrenness, became prolific, and the mother of us all. (Compare Isaiah liv. 1. with Gal. iv. 27.)

PSALM CXIV. Ver. 1—8. Praise for deliverance from Egypt.—This is a very animated composition, in which the sea is represented as beholding the symbol of the divine presence, and fleeing from before it, as did the Jordan forty years afterwards, to admit Israel into Canaan. The earth also is described as trembling before Jehovah, and the hills as fleeing like affrighted sheep: an emblem of that more awful convulsion, which shall take place when the same Almighty being shall come, arrayed in superior splendour to the final judgment; and not the earth only, but these lower heavens also shall flee before him. (Isaiah xxxiv. 4. Rev. vi. 13, 14, &c.)

PSALM CXV. Ver. 1—18. A contrast between the God of Israel and the idols of the heathen.—The former, as the God of truth and mercy; the latter, as insensible images of wood and stone; and neither their makers nor their worshippers, are much more intelligent. There is indeed a degree of stupidity among idolaters hardly credible, if it were not notorious. The following anecdotes will illustrate this subject.

"When W. T. Money, Esq. resided some years since, in the Mahratta country, as his daughter, not then three years old,

PSALM CXIV. Ver. 1. A people of strange language.—Kennicott, "A strange," i. e. a foreign "people."

Ver. 2. Judah was his sanctuary.—Some learned men, with more critical acumen than poetic taste, have supposed the divine name here omitted by an accident of the transcribers; but Dr. Watts justly remarks, that this would destroy the beauty of the poem; for had the name of Jehovah been here introduced, "there could be no (cause to) wonder why the mountains should 'leap,' and the sea retire."—Dominions.—"Sacred heritage." Bp. Lowth.

Ver. 4. Like lambs.—"Like the sons of the flock." Bp. Lowth. So in ver. 6.

Ver. 5. Thou Jordan.—Loath. "O Jordan, that thou turnedst back."

Ver. 7. At the presence of the Lord.—Notwithstanding many of our English Bibles read LORD, in capitals, for Jehovah, our printed Hebrew Bibles read Adonai, and even Dr. Boothroyd. See note on Ps. cx. 1. [Addison properly observes, that the author of this Psalm designedly works for effect, in pointing out these miraculous effects, without mentioning an agent; till, at last, when the sea is seen rapidly retiring from the shore, Jordan retreating to its source, and the mountains and hills running away like a flock of affrighted sheep, that the passage of the Israelites might be every way unimpeded, and then the Cause of all is suddenly introduced, and the presence of God in his deities solves every difficulty.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. A standing water.—Loath. "A lake of waters; the flint into a water-spring."

PSALM CXV. [This seems to be a triumphal song, in which the victory is wholly ascribed to JEHOVAH; and to none can it be referred with more propriety than to that of Jehoshaphat over the confederated forces of his enemies, 2 Ch. xx.]—Bagster.

a Ex. 12. 41.

b Ps. 81. 5.

c De. 27. 9, 12.

d Ex. 25. 8.

e Ex. 14. 21.

f Job. 3. 13, 16.

g Hab. 3. 6, 9.

h Mi. 6. 1, 2.

i Ex. 17. 6.

j Nu. 30. 11.

a Is. 48. 11.

b Eze. 36. 32.

c Joel 2. 17.

d Da. 4. 35.

e Ps. 135. 15.

f Is. 18.

g Is. 40. 19.

h Je. 10. 3, 7.

e Ps. 33. 20.

f Is. 84. 11.

g Pr. 30. 5.

h Is. 44. 21.

i Ps. 29. 11.

j Ps. 3. 8.

k Ep. 1. 3, 4.

l Ps. 88. 10.

m Is. 38. 18.

n Is. 19.

o Da. 2. 30.

p Ps. 18. 1, 6.

6 They have ears, but they hear not: noses have they, but they smell not:

7 They have hands, but they handle not: feet have they, but they walk not: neither speak they through their throat.

8 They that make them are like unto them; so is every one that trusteth in them.

9 O Israel, trust thou in the LORD: he is <sup>e</sup> their help and their <sup>f</sup> shield.

10 O house of Aaron, trust in the LORD: he is their help and their shield.

11 Ye that fear the LORD, trust in the LORD: he is their help and their <sup>f</sup> shield.

12 The LORD hath been mindful <sup>g</sup> of us: he will bless <sup>us</sup>; he will bless the house of Israel; he will bless the house of Aaron.

13 He <sup>h</sup> will bless them that fear the LORD, both small <sup>i</sup> and great.

14 The LORD shall increase you more, and more, you and your children.

15 Ye <sup>j</sup> are blessed of the LORD which made heaven and earth.

16 The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men.

17 The dead <sup>k</sup> praise not the LORD, neither any that go down into silence.

18 But we <sup>l</sup> will bless the LORD from this time forth and for evermore. Praise the LORD.

PSALM CXVI.

1 The psalmist professeth his love and duty to God for his deliverance. 12 He studieth to be thankful.

I LOVE <sup>a</sup> the LORD, because he hath heard my voice and my supplications.

was walking out with a native servant, they came near an old Hindoo temple, when the man stepped aside and 'made his salaam,' as they call it, to a stone idol at the door. The child, in her simple language, said, 'Saamy, (that was his name,) what for you do that?' 'Oh missey! (said he,) that my god.'—'Your god, Saamy! why your god no see, no hear, no walk,—your god stone! My God see every thing, my God make you, make me, make every thing.'—At Buhapuram, in the northern Circars, a child about eight years old, who had been educated in Christianity, was ridiculed on that account by some heathen older than himself. In reply, he repeated what he had been taught respecting God. 'Show us your God!' said the heathens. 'I cannot do that,' answered the child; 'but I can soon show yours to you.' Taking up a stone, and daubing it with some resemblance of a human face, he placed it very gravely on the ground, and pushed it towards them with his foot: 'There,' said he, 'is such a god as you worship!' (Burder's Mission. Anec.)

"You teach," said the Emperor Trajan to Rabbi Joshua, "that your God is every where, and boast that he resides amongst your nations. I should like to see him." "God's presence is indeed every where," replied Joshua, "but he cannot be seen; no mortal can behold his glory." The Emperor insisted. "Well," said Joshua, "suppose we try to look first at one of his ambassadors?" The Emperor consented. The rabbi took him into the open air at noon-day, and bid him look at the sun in its meridian splendour. "I cannot," said Trajan; "the light dazzles me." "Thou art unable," said Joshua, "to endure the light of one of his creatures, and canst thou expect to behold the resplendent glory of the Creator? Would not such a sight annihilate thee?"

PSALM CXVI. Ver. 1—19. The Psalmist encouraged to trust in God from a recollection of former mercies.—In those psalms

Ver. 4. Their idols.—[They are metal, stone, and wood; and, though generally made in the form of man, they can neither see, hear, smell, feel, walk, nor speak.] Even the wisest heathen made them the objects of their jests. Jewels.—"Dost thou hear, Jupiter, these things? no more thy lips when thou shouldst speak out, whether thou art of marble or of bronze?" Or why do we put the sacred incense on thy altar from the opened paper, and the extracted liver of a calf, and the white caul of a hog? As far as I can discern, there is no difference between thy statue and that of Bathylus!—a fiddler and player, whose image, by the order of Polycrates, was erected in the temple of Juno at Samos.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9, 10. O Israel.—Or, "House of Israel," as many MSS. and versions read. "The church is here divided into three parts; 1. The members of the commonwealth. 2. The ministers. 3. The fearers of Jehovah, of all nations." Ainsworth. See Acts ii. 5; x. 35.

Ver. 13. Will bless.—[We are here presented with a beautiful contrast between the God of Israel and heathen idols. He made every thing; they are themselves made by men: He is in heaven; they are upon the earth! He doeth whatsoever he pleaseth; they can do nothing: He seeth the distresses, heareth and answereth the prayers, accepteth the offerings, cometh to the assistance, effecteth the salvation, and blesseth his servants; they are blind, deaf, and dumb, senseless, motionless, and impotent.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. The heavens, &c.—Bishop Horsley renders this literally; "The heaven of heavens are for Jehovah."

PSALM CXVI. Ver. 1. I love the Lord.—"I love," (Old Version, "Am we pleased," so Horsley pleases.) "that (or because) the Lord," &c.—"My voice and &c.—LXX." The voice of my supplications." So Bishop Horsley.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him <sup>b</sup> as long as I live.

3 The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell <sup>d</sup> gat hold upon me: I found trouble and sorrow.

4 Then <sup>e</sup> called I upon the name of the LORD; O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.

5 Gracious <sup>f</sup> is the LORD, and <sup>g</sup> righteous; yea, our God <sup>h</sup> is merciful.

6 The LORD preserveth the simple: I was brought low, and he helped me.

7 Return unto thy <sup>i</sup> rest, O my soul; for the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee.

8 For thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from <sup>j</sup> falling.

9 I will walk before the LORD in the land of the living.

10 I <sup>k</sup> believed, therefore have I spoken: I was greatly afflicted:

11 I said in my haste, All men <sup>l</sup> are liars.

12 What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me?

13 I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the LORD.

14 I <sup>m</sup> will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people.

15 Precious <sup>n</sup> in the sight of the LORD is the death of his saints.

16 O LORD, truly I <sup>o</sup> am thy servant; I <sup>p</sup> am thy servant, and the son of thy handmaid: thou hast loosed my bonds.

17 I will offer to thee the sacrifice <sup>q</sup> of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD.

18 I <sup>r</sup> will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people, 19 In the courts <sup>s</sup> of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem. Praise ye the LORD.

b in my days.
c Jo.2.2,&c. d found me
e Ps.34.6.
f Ps.103.8.
g Est.9.15.
Ne.9.8.
Da.9.7.
h Je.6.16.
Mat.11.29.
He.4.3.
i Jude.24.
j 2Co.4.13.
k Jo.2.9.
l Ps.72.14.
m Le.7.12.
n Ec.5.5.
o Ps.96.8.
100.4.

a Ro.15.11.
b Is.25.1.
Ju.14.6.
1 Jo.5.6.
c 1Ch.16.8.
34.
d Ps.103.17.
e Ps.115.9.
&c.
f Ps.120.1.
g out of distress.
h Ps.97.1.
He.13.6.
i for me.
j Je.17.5,7.
k Ps.146.3.
l cut them off.
m De.1.44.
n 2Sa.23.6.
Na.1.10.
o cut down
p Mi.7.8.

PSALM CXVII.

An exhortation to praise God for his mercy and truth.

O <sup>a</sup> PRAISE the LORD, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people.

2 For his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth <sup>b</sup> of the LORD endureth for ever. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXVIII.

1 An exhortation to praise God for his mercy. 5 The psalmist by his experience sheweth how good it is to trust in God. 19 Under the type of the psalmist the coming of Christ in his kingdom is expressed.

O <sup>a</sup> GIVE thanks unto the LORD; for <sup>b</sup> he is good: because his mercy <sup>c</sup> endureth for ever.

2 Let <sup>d</sup> Israel now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Let them now that fear the LORD say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 I <sup>e</sup> called upon the LORD <sup>f</sup> in distress: the LORD answered me, and set me in a large place.

6 The <sup>g</sup> LORD is <sup>h</sup> on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

7 The LORD taketh my part with them that help me: therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

8 It <sup>i</sup> is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

9 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in <sup>j</sup> princes.

10 All nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I <sup>k</sup> destroy them.

11 They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

12 They compassed me about like <sup>l</sup> bees; they are quenched as the fire of <sup>m</sup> thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will <sup>n</sup> destroy them.

13 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall: but <sup>o</sup> the LORD helped me.

which have no title, as is the case with this, we can only guess at the author, and seldom with any confidence. Bishop Patrik attributes this psalm to David, when he was obliged to leave Jerusalem, in consequence of Absalom's unnatural rebellion: (2 Sam. xv. 14, &c. :) and it is certain that many of the expressions are found in David's acknowledged psalms. Others, however, from some forms of expression in the original, assign to it a later date, and attribute it to Hezekiah on his recovery from his illness; to which occasion, it must be acknowledged, it is not ill adapted. (2 Kings, chap. xx.) This was the opinion of Bishop Horsley: but we confess ourselves inclined to the former. The psalm is evidently the language of a true penitent, devoting himself to God, in gratitude for mercies received, and determined, in future, to live solely to his praise.

"Here in thy courts I leave my vow,
And thy rich grace record:
Witness, ye saints, who hear me now,
Hill forsake the Lord."—Watts.

PSALM CXVII. Ver. 1, 2. All nations exhorted to praise the true God.—Ths s, like the hundredth psalm, seems to predict the conversion of the Gentiles, since it calls upon men of all tribes and countries to praise the Lord for his mercy and his truth, and is so applied by St. Paul himself. (Rom. xv.

Ver. 11. I said in my haste.—That is, through fear or unbelief.—All men are liars.—Even the prophets themselves, in whom the author, whether David or Hezekiah, had placed confidence. So Ainsworth and Bishop Horne. Compare Ps. xxxi. 22.

Ver. 13. The cup of salvation.—Or, "of blessing," (as St. Paul calls it, 1 Cor. x. 16.) [The cup used in offering eucharistical sacrifices, was called the cup of salvation, i. e. commemorating salvation. (Nu. xxvii. 7.) similar to which is the cup of blessing among the Jews, in taking which into his hand, the master of the house says, "Blessed be the Lord, the Maker of the world, who has created the fruit of the vine"]

Ver. 15. Precious &c.—[That is, the Lord accounts the death of his saints of so much importance, that he will not suffer their enemies to cut them off before his appointed time; all the circumstances of their death being regulated by infinite wisdom and love, for their final and eternal benefit.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Thy servant, the son of thy handmaid.—That is, thy property, as born in thy house. See Ps. lxxxvi. 16; lxxxvii. 5.

The Septuagint translators divide this psalm into two, at the end of ver. 9, but evidently without authority.

PSALM CXVII. [This Psalm, the shortest in the whole collection, is written as a part of the preceding in thirty-two MSS.; it celebrates the deliverance from the Babylonian captivity, the grand type of the redemption of the world by the Messiah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. All ye nations.—The term nations is equivalent to Gentiles, and is therefore so quoted by the apostle, Rom. xv. 11

9—11.) Some, as Bishop Horsley, consider it only as an exordium to the psalm following; but it was probably used separately, as there seems no necessary connexion between them; and other learned men consider them as composed at very different periods. Dr. Watts's popular version is the best commentary we can offer on this psalm.

"From all that dwell below the skies
Let the Creator's praise arise:
Let the Redeemer's name be sung
Thro' every land, by every tongue.
Eternal are thy mercies, Lord;
Eternal truth attends thy word:
Thy praise shall sound from shore to shore,
Till suns shall rise and set no more."

PSALM CXVIII. Ver. 1—29. Praise to God, especially for the salvation by Messiah.—In this psalm, which is universally attributed to David, Bishop Horne remarks—"A king of Israel appears leading his people in solemn procession to the temple, (or tabernacle), there to offer up the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, for a marvellous deliverance from his enemies, and a glorious victory gained over them. After inviting the whole nation to join with him upon this joyful occasion, he describes at large his (previous) danger and his deliverance from it, which latter is wholly attributed to the power and goodness of Jehovah." After this, as Mudge has rightly ob-

PSALM CXVIII. [This Psalm was probably composed by David, after Nathan's prophetic address; and sung by alternate choirs at some public festival. It largely partakes of David's spirit, and every where shows the hand of a master: the style is grand and sublime; the subject noble and majestic.]—B.

Ver. 1. O give thanks.—This is evidently a chorus, which is repeated in the close of the psalm.

Ver. 2. Let Israel now say.—This verse was probably sung by the king and his attendants, the next, by the priests and Levites; and so on, alternately.

Verses 10, 11, 12. Destroy them.—Both Ainsworth and Bishop Horne render these words in the past ("I cut," or "I did cut.") So LXX., Vulgate, and Jerome.

Ver. 12. Quenched.—LXX. and Chaldee, "kindled." Ainsworth says, the Hebrew means both. [Dr. Deaney justly remarks, that it is familiar with David to couch such images in three words, as would in the hands of Homer be the materials of his noblest, most enlarged, and dignified descriptions. The reader has here, in miniature, two of the finest images in Homer, which, if his curiosity demands to be gratified, he will find illustrated and enlarged in the second book of the Iliad. The idea of an army resembling a fire is common both to David and Homer; but the idea of that fire being quenched, when the army was conquered, is peculiar to the Psalmist.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Thou hast thrust.—Dr. Boothroyd, following the Arabic, reads, "They have thrust;" to agree with the verse preceding; but Bishop Horsley, following the LXX., Vulgate, &c. reads, "I received a strong push," or thrust.

14 The LORD <sup>o</sup> is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

15 The voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous: the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

16 The right hand of the LORD is exalted: the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

17 I <sup>p</sup> shall not die, but live, and declare the <sup>a</sup> works of the LORD:

18 The LORD hath chastened <sup>r</sup> me sore: but he hath not given me over unto death.

19 Open <sup>s</sup> to me the gates of righteousness: I will go in to them, and I will praise the LORD:

20 This gate of the LORD, into which the righteous shall enter.

21 I will praise thee: for thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

22 The <sup>t</sup> stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner.

23 This <sup>u</sup> is the LORD's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes.

24 This <sup>v</sup> is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.

25 Save now, I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.

26 Blessed <sup>w</sup> be he that cometh in the name of the LORD: we have blessed you out of the house of the LORD.

27 God <sup>x</sup> is the LORD, which hath showed us <sup>y</sup> light: bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

28 Thou <sup>z</sup> art my God, and I will praise thee: <sup>a</sup> thou art my God, I will exalt thee.

29 O <sup>b</sup> give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXIX.

This psalm containeth sundry prayers, praises, and professions of obedience.

¶ ALEPH.

BLESSED are the <sup>a</sup> undefiled in the way, who <sup>b</sup> walk in the law of the LORD.

2 Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, and that seek him with the whole <sup>c</sup> heart.

3 They also <sup>d</sup> do no iniquity: they walk in his ways.

4 Thou <sup>e</sup> hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently.

served, there ensues (if the whole be not such from the beginning) a kind of sacred dialogue," which much resembles that in the latter part of the twenty-fourth Psalm, to which our readers may refer. Ver. 19, he demands of the priests, "Open to me the gates of righteousness," meaning the entrance to the sanctuary. "I will go into them, and praise the Lord." The verses following were probably sung alternately by the king with his retinue, and the priests and Levites.

The repeated application of the twenty-second verse to our Saviour Christ, leaves no doubt of its meaning or design. He is the great foundation stone of the Christian church, "the head of the corner." The day of his resurrection was the most joyful that the Lord ever made; and the hosannah of the priests, in verse 25, was literally adopted and addressed to our Lord Jesus by children in the temple. (Luke xix. 38.)

PSALM CXIX. Ver. 1—24. The blessedness of obedience to the word of God.—"This psalm (says Bp. Horne) is divided (most probably for the advantage of memory,) according to the number of letters which compose the Hebrew alphabet, in twenty-two portions, of eight verses each; and not only every portion, but every verse of that portion begins with the letter appropriated to it. David must, undoubtedly, have been the author. He describeth, in a series of devotional meditations,

Ver. 20. This gate.—Bishop Horne. "This (is) the gate;" referring to the gate of the tabernacle, or temple. (Dr. Kennicott supposes, with much probability, that this verse was sung by the priest, the next by the king, the three next by a chorus of people, the 25th by the king, the two next by the priest, the 28th by the king, and the last the grand chorus of the whole assembly.)—Bagster.

Ver. 22. The stone.—Whether or not this stone had any reference to David himself, as chosen by God, but rejected by many of the people, we are sure that it refers chiefly and ultimately to the Messiah, to whom it is specially applied, both by the evangelists and apostles. Matt. xxi. 42. Mark xii. 10. Luke xx. 17. Acts iv. 11. 1 Peter ii. 4.—The head stone of the corner.—That is, not the top stone, but the chief stone of the foundation, answering to what we call the first stone. See Ephes. ii. 20, 21. 1 Peter ii. 4, 5.

Ver. 24. The day . . . made.—To make (or do) a day, is to appoint, or consecrate it. See Heb. of Exod. xxxiv. 22. Deut. v. 15; x. 1.

o Ex. 15. 2, 6.
Is. 12. 2.

p Hab. 1. 12.

q Ps. 73. 23.

r 2 Co. 6. 9.

s Is. 26. 2.
Rev. 22. 14.

t Mat. 21. 42.
Ac. 4. 11.
Ep. 2. 20.
1 Pe. 2. 4, 7.

u from the LORD.

v Mat. 21. 9.
23. 39.

w Es. 8. 16.
1 Pe. 2. 3.

x Is. 25. 1.

y ver. 1.

a or, perfect, or, sincere.

b Ps. 123. 1.

c Pr. 23. 26.
1 Jn. 3. 20.

d 1 Jn. 3. 9.
5. 18.

e De. 6. 17.
11. 13, 22.

f 1 Jn. 2. 28.

g ver. 171.

h judgments of thy righteousness.

i Pr. 1. 4.

j 2 Ch. 15. 15.

k Ps. 1. 2.

l Ps. 25. 4.
ver. 26, &c.

m Ps. 1. 2.

n Ps. 116. 7.

o reveal.

p Ps. 39. 12.
He. 11. 13.
1 Pe. 1. 11.

q Ps. 63. 1.

r 1 Pe. 5. 5.

s ver. 77, 92.

t men of counsel.

u Pr. 7. 1. 4.

5 O that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!

6 Then <sup>f</sup> shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto all thy commandments.

7 I <sup>g</sup> will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned <sup>h</sup> thy righteous judgments.

8 I will keep thy statutes: O forsake me not utterly.

¶ BETH.

9 Wherewithal shall a young <sup>i</sup> man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word.

10 With <sup>j</sup> my whole heart have I sought thee: O let me not wander from thy commandments.

11 Thy <sup>k</sup> word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee.

12 Blessed art thou, O LORD: <sup>l</sup> teach me thy statutes.

13 With my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth.

14 I have rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies, as much as in all riches.

15 I will meditate <sup>m</sup> in thy precepts, and have respect unto thy ways.

16 I will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word.

¶ GIMEL.

17 Deal <sup>n</sup> bountifully with thy servant, that I may live, and keep thy word.

18 <sup>o</sup> Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.

19 I am a stranger <sup>p</sup> in the earth: hide not thy commandments from me.

20 My <sup>q</sup> soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times.

21 Thou hast rebuked the proud <sup>r</sup> that are cursed, which do err from thy commandments.

22 Remove from me reproach and contempt; for I have kept thy testimonies.

23 Princes also did sit and speak against me: but thy servant did meditate in thy statutes.

24 Thy testimonies also are my <sup>s</sup> delight, and my <sup>t</sup> counsellors.

the instruction and the comfort which, through all vicissitudes of mind and fortune, he had ever found in the word of God. The many strong expressions of love towards the law, and the repeated resolutions and vows to observe it, will often force us to turn our thoughts to the true David, whose "meat and drink it was, to do the will of him that sent him."

Henry remarks that there are ten different words by which divine revelation is here distinguished, namely, God's law, his way, his testimonies, his commandments, his precepts, his word, his judgments, his righteousness, his statutes, and his truth or faithfulness: we are not to suppose, however, that they are always used with distinct meanings, being often interchanged to prevent perpetual repetition.

Our younger readers should particularly remark, that attention to God's word is the best guard against temptation: the surest antidote against youthful sins is the treasure of the scripture: "His word is a treasure," says Henry, "worth laying up; and there is no way of laying it up safe but in our hearts." There deposited, it will fortify the mind against all the troubles of life, support us under all discouragements, and direct us in all circumstances of difficulty. He is sure to be well advised that makes the scriptures "the man of his counsel."

Ver. 27. Bind the sacrifice.—"The feast (offerings) with cords;" but the word rendered cords is sometimes used for thick branches, Lev. xxiii. 40. and may therefore refer to keeping the feast of tabernacles.

PSALM CXIX. Aleph—Beth.—The meaning is, that the first eight verses in the Hebrew, begin with aleph, answering to our A, the next eight with beth, or B, and so on.

Ver. 3. Do no iniquity.—LXX. "Work not iniquity." So Atinsoorth; and see 1 John iii. 6—10.

Ver. 17. Deal bountifully.—[Gemol, "reward" thy servant: let him have the return of his faith and prayers. From this word is derived the name of gemol, the third letter of the alphabet, which is prefixed to every verse in this part: this is a stroke of the Psalmist's art and ingenuity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Open thou mine eyes.—Or rather, uncover, unveil. St. Paul speaks of some who had still "the veil upon their hearts," or understandings. David prays, that from him this veil might be removed.

DALETH.

25 My soul cleaveth unto the dust: quicken thou me according to thy word.

26 I have declared my ways, and thou heardest me: teach me thy statutes.

27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: so shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

28 My soul <sup>v</sup> melteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word.

29 Remove <sup>w</sup> from me the way of lying: and grant me thy law graciously.

30 I have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments have I laid before me.

31 I have stuck unto thy testimonies: O LORD, put me not to <sup>x</sup> shame.

32 I will run the way of thy commandments, when thou shalt enlarge <sup>y</sup> my heart.

HE.

33 Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep <sup>z</sup> it unto the end.

34 Give <sup>a</sup> me understanding, and <sup>b</sup> I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart.

35 Make me to go in the path of thy commandments; for therein do I delight.

36 Incline my heart <sup>c</sup> unto thy testimonies, and not to <sup>d</sup> covetousness.

37 <sup>e</sup> Turn away mine eyes from beholding <sup>f</sup> vanity; and quicken thou me in thy way.

38 Establish <sup>g</sup> thy word unto thy servant, who <sup>h</sup> is devoted to thy fear.

39 Turn away my reproach which I fear: for thy judgments are good.

40 Behold, I have longed after thy precepts: quicken <sup>i</sup> me in thy righteousness.

VAU.

41 Let thy mercies come also unto me, O LORD, even thy salvation, according to thy word.

42 So shall <sup>j</sup> I have wherewith to answer him that reproacheth me: for I trust in thy word.

43 And take not <sup>k</sup> the word of truth utterly out of my mouth; for I have hoped in thy judgments.

44 So shall I keep thy law continually for ever and ever.

45 And I will walk at <sup>l</sup> liberty: for I seek thy precepts.

46 I will speak of thy testimonies also before <sup>m</sup> kings, and will not be ashamed.

47 And I will delight myself in thy commandments, which I have loved.

48 My hands also will I lift up unto thy com-v droppeth.

w Pr.30.3.

x Is.49.23.

y Is.60.5.

1 Co.6.11.

z Re.2.28.

a Pr.2.6.

b De.4.6.

c Eze.33.31.

d Lu.12.15.

1 Ti.6.10.

He.13.5.

e make to pass.

f Is.33.15.

g 2 Sa.7.25.

2 Co.1.20.

h Jn.10.10.

i or, answer him that reproacheth me in a thing.

j Is.59.21.

k large.

l Jn.8.32.36.

Ga.5.1,13.

m Mat.10.18,19.

Ac.28.1, &amp;c.

n 1 Pe.1.13, 21.

o Job.23.11.

Is.33.3.

p Eze.9.3.

q Ps.63.6.

77.6.

r Ja.10.16.

La.3.24.

s face.

Job.11.19.

t He.10.22.

u La.3.40, 41.

Lu.15.17, 18.

v or, companies.

w Pr.13.20.

x Je.3.15.

y Je.31.18, 19.

He.12.11.

z Ps.55.8.

Mat.19.17.

a ver.67.

b Ps.19.10.

Pr.5.11,19.

mandments, which I have loved; and I will meditate in thy statutes.

ZAIN.

49 Remember the word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to <sup>a</sup> hope.

50 This is my comfort in my affliction: for thy word hath quickened me.

51 The proud have had me greatly in derision: yet <sup>b</sup> have I not declined from thy law.

52 I remembered thy judgments of old, O LORD; and have comforted myself.

53 Horror <sup>c</sup> hath taken hold upon me because of the wicked that forsake thy law.

54 Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage.

55 I have remembered thy name, O LORD, in the <sup>d</sup> night, and have kept thy law.

56 This I had, because I kept thy precepts.

CHETH.

57 Thou art my <sup>e</sup> portion, O LORD: I have said that I would keep thy words.

58 I entreated thy <sup>f</sup> favour with my whole heart: be merciful unto me according to thy word.

59 I thought <sup>g</sup> on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

60 I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments.

61 The <sup>h</sup> bands of the wicked have robbed me: but I have not forgotten thy law.

62 At midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee because of thy righteous judgments.

63 I am a companion <sup>i</sup> of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts.

64 The earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy: teach me thy statutes.

TETH.

65 Thou hast dealt well with thy servant, O LORD, according unto thy word.

66 Teach <sup>j</sup> me good judgment and knowledge: for I have believed thy commandments.

67 Before I was afflicted <sup>k</sup> I went astray: but now have I kept thy word.

68 Thou <sup>l</sup> art good, and doest good; teach me thy statutes.

69 The proud have forged a lie against me: but I will keep thy precepts with my whole heart.

70 Their heart is as fat as grease; but I delight in thy law.

71 It is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes.

72 The <sup>m</sup> law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver.

Ver. 25–56. Prayer for divine instruction and direction.—Our souls naturally cleave to the dust. It is alone by the influence of God's Spirit, and by the instrumentality of his word, that they can be quickened. And when quickened to newness of life, it is still the same word that must be our guide, our consolation, our support. "Remember thy word unto thy servant on which thou hast caused me to hope." And when the word of God becomes the ground of our hope, it will become the subject of our conversation, and the theme of our rejoicing. We shall neither be ashamed nor afraid, to avow ourselves believers in divine truth. David resolves to bear testimony in favour of the God of Israel "before kings," when assembled on affairs of state: and when travelling among strangers, in "the house of his pilgrimage," that neither his voice nor his harp should be prostituted to idol worship, however popular; but the word and truth of God should form "his theme, his inspiration, and his song."

Ver. 28. Melteth for heaviness.—Grief melted him into tears.

Ver. 32. Make me to go.—Bishop Horne, "Conduct me."

Ver. 42. So shall I have.—See margin. Or, "in any matter." See Ainsworth.

Ver. 44. So shall I keep.—[The language of this verse is very emphatic. Perfect obedience will constitute a large proportion of heavenly happiness, to all eternity; and the nearer we approach to it on earth, the more we anticipate the felicity of heaven.]—Bagster.

Ver. 48. My hands also will I lift up unto thy commandments.—That is, to practise them. Compare ver. 2.

Ver. 53. Horror.—[Zilaphah, properly signifies the pestilential burning]

Ver. 57–68. The advantages of affliction and the value of God's word.—The psalmist complains of having been plundered by banditti, and by others reproached and slandered. Even in this, however, he finds both advantage and consolation. He finds it good for him that he had "been afflicted:" for, before his affliction, he had gone "astray;" but "now," says he, "have I kept thy word;" and that word, from the instruction and consolation which it administered, had become to him "more precious than thousands of gold and silver." "In the school of affliction," (says Dr. Boothroyd,) sin is brought to remembrance, repentance promoted, the judgment informed, the heart improved, the spirit of prayer strengthened, and the principles of new and holy obedience established."

"I love thee, therefore, O my God,
And breathe toward thy dear abode;
Where, in thy presence fully blest, Thy chosen saints for ever rest."—Cowper.

wind called by the Arabs Sincoom, (see Ps. xi. 6.) and is here used in a figurative sense for the most horrid mental distress; and strongly marks the idea the Psalmist had of the corrupting, pestilential, and destructive nature of sin.]—Bagster.

Ver. 54. Thy statutes have been my songs.—That is, the theme of his meditation, and source of his delight. In the early ages, it was customary to versify the laws, that the people might learn them by heart, and sing them.

Ver. 63. Good judgment.—[Rather, "Teach me (to have) a good taste (taste) and discernment:" that faculty of the mind by which I may discern distinguish, judge rightly, and relish things moral and spiritual.]—Bagster.

Ver. 70. Fat as grease.—Ainsworth. "As gross as fat;" Boothroyd. "Void

JOD.

73 Thy hands have made me and fashioned me: give me <sup>e</sup> understanding, that I may learn thy commandments.

74 They <sup>d</sup> that fear thee will be glad when they see me; because I have hoped in thy word.

75 I know, O LORD, that thy judgments are <sup>e</sup> right, and that thou in <sup>f</sup> faithfulness hast afflicted me.

76 Let, I pray thee, thy merciful kindness be <sup>e</sup> for my comfort, according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live: for thy law is my delight.

78 Let the proud be ashamed; for they dealt perversely with me, without <sup>b</sup> a cause: but I will meditate in thy precepts.

79 Let those that fear thee turn unto me, and those that have known thy testimonies.

80 Let my heart be sound <sup>i</sup> in thy statutes; that I be not <sup>j</sup> ashamed.

CAPH.

81 My soul fainteth <sup>k</sup> for thy salvation: but I hope in thy word.

82 Mine eyes fail for thy word, saying, When wilt thou comfort me?

83 For I am become like a bottle in the smoke; yet do I not forget thy statutes.

84 How many are the days of thy servant? when <sup>i</sup> wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The proud have digged <sup>m</sup> pits for me, which are not after thy law.

86 All <sup>a</sup> thy commandments are <sup>e</sup> faithful: they persecute me wrongfully; help thou me.

87 They had almost consumed me upon earth; but I forsook not thy precepts.

88 Quicken me after thy loving-kindness; so shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth.

LAMED.

89 For <sup>p</sup> ever, O LORD, thy word is settled in heaven.

90 Thy faithfulness is <sup>q</sup> unto all generations: thou hast established the earth, and it <sup>r</sup> abideth.

91 They continue this day according to thine <sup>s</sup> ordinances: for all are thy servants.

92 Unless thy law had been my delights, I should then have perished in mine affliction.

93 I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me.

94 I am thine, save <sup>t</sup> me; for I have sought thy precepts.

95 The wicked have waited for me to destroy me: but I will consider thy testimonies.

Ver. 89—120. Farther meditations on God's word, accompanied by prayer.—The psalmist's attachment to the word of God, led him to make it the theme of his meditation, both by day and night. It was honey to his taste, a light to his path, and the choicest of all his treasures. But what was that word? The Pentateuch, and a few other books of the Old Testament;

“feeling,” which is rather the interpretation. [Or, rather, “Their heart is become gross (or insensible) as fat;” the fat of animals being supposed to be without feeling; or, “as with fat,” as in Peristis.]

“Gross fat involves each fibre of his heart, Grows o'er the whole, and deadens every part.”—Bagster.

Ver. 82. Mine eyes fail.—That is, are wearied (or worn) with waiting for its fulfilment. See Ps. lix. 3.

Ver. 83. Like a bottle.—[As the bottles in the East are made of skin, it is evident that one of these hung in the smoke must soon be parched, shrivelled up, lose all its strength, and become unsightly and useless. Thus the Psalmist appeared to himself to have become useless and despicable, through the exhausted state of his body and mind, by long bodily afflictions and mental distress.]—Bagster.

Ver. 85. Digged pits.—[This metaphor is taken from the mode in which wild beasts are caught in the East: deep pits are dug in the earth, and slightly covered over with reeds, turf, &c. so as not to be discerned from the solid ground; and the animals attempting to walk over them, the surface breaks, they fall in, and are taken alive. Thus the psalmist's enemies employed craft as well as power, in order to effect his ruin.]—Bagster.—Not after thy law. —That is, contrary to thy law.

Ver. 86. Faithful.—Hebrew, “Faithfulness.”
Ver. 89. For ever, O Lord, &c.—(Or, as the Syriac reads, “Thou art (or existest) for ever, O Jehovah:” Thy word is established in the heavens.”) Tho

e Ps. 111. 10.
ver. 34. 144

d Ps. 34. 2.

e right-conscience.

f Re. 3. 19.

g to comfort me.

h 1 Ps. 2. 20.

i De. 26. 16.
Eze. 11. 19.

j ver. 6.

k Ps. 84. 2.

l 2 Th. 1. 6.
Re. 6. 10.

m Ps. 35. 7.

n ver. 138.

o faithfulness.

p Mat. 24.
34. 35.q to generation and generation.

r standeth.

s Je. 33. 25.

t Zep. 3. 17.

u Ps. 1. 2.

v it is.

w De. 4. 6. 8.
2 Ti. 3. 15.

x Job 32. 7. 9.

y Pr. 1. 15.

z Job 32. 12.
Ps. 19. 10.

a palate.

b Ps. 8. 13.

c or, candle.

d Ps. 6. 23.

e Ne. 10. 29.

f He. 13. 15.

g Job 13. 14.

h Ps. 1. 11, 12.

i Je. 15. 16.

j 2 Ch. 19. 3.

k do.

l Re. 2. 10.

m Je. 4. 14.

n Ps. 32. 7.

o Ps. 139. 19.
1 Co. 15. 33.

p Ro. 5. 5.

q Mal. 4. 3.

r 1 Jn. 2. 21.

96 I have seen an end of all perfection: but thy commandment is exceeding broad.

MEM.

97 O how love I thy law! it is <sup>a</sup> my meditation all the day.

98 Thou through thy commandments hast made me wiser than mine enemies: for <sup>r</sup> they are ever with me.

99 I <sup>w</sup> have more understanding than all my teachers: for thy testimonies are my meditation.

100 I understand more than the <sup>x</sup> ancients, because I keep thy precepts.

101 I have refrained <sup>y</sup> my feet from every evil way, that I might keep thy word.

102 I have not departed from thy judgments: for thou hast taught me.

103 How sweet <sup>z</sup> are thy words unto my <sup>a</sup> taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!

104 Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate <sup>b</sup> every false way.

NUN.

105 Thy word is a <sup>c</sup> lamp <sup>d</sup> unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

106 I have <sup>e</sup> sworn, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments.

107 I am afflicted very much: quicken me, O LORD, according unto thy word.

108 Accept, I beseech thee, the <sup>f</sup> free-will-offerings of my mouth, O LORD, and teach me thy judgments.

109 My soul is continually in <sup>g</sup> my hand: yet do I not forget thy law.

110 The wicked have laid a snare <sup>h</sup> for me: yet I erred not from thy precepts.

111 Thy testimonies have I taken as a heritage for ever: for they are the rejoicing <sup>i</sup> of my heart.

112 I have inclined <sup>j</sup> my heart to perform <sup>k</sup> thy statutes alway, even unto the <sup>l</sup> end.

SAMECH.

113 I hate vain <sup>m</sup> thoughts: but thy law do I love.

114 Thou <sup>n</sup> art my hiding-place and my shield: I hope in thy word.

115 Depart <sup>o</sup> from me, ye evil-doers: for I will keep the commandments of my God.

116 Uphold me according unto thy word, that I may live: and let me not be ashamed <sup>p</sup> of my hope.

117 Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe: and I will have respect unto thy statutes continually.

118 Thou hast trodden <sup>q</sup> down all them that err from thy statutes: for their deceit is <sup>r</sup> falsehood.

but neither the Psalms, as a whole, nor any of the prophets. If, then, a part only of the Old Testament was thus precious, what store ought we to set by our Bible, as comprehending both Testaments, and especially as including the discourses of our Lord, and the epistolary correspondence of his apostles? But the author of this psalm is an example for us, not only in word of God is as unchangeable and everlasting as his own existence; it “is established in the heavens,” beyond the reach of the revolutions of this lower world; and its accomplishment is as certain as the motions of the heavenly bodies, which are not, and cannot be, affected by the convulsions and vicissitudes of the earth and its inhabitants.]—Bagster.

Ver. 91. They continue.—[Thou hast given an ordinance or appointment to the heavens and the earth; and each continues to fulfil Thy will in the place Thou hast assigned it.]—Bagster.

Ver. 98. Exceeding broad.—[That is, I have seen that all human wisdom or knowledge, however extensive, noble, and excellent, has its bounds, and limits, and end; but Thy law, a transcript of Thine own mind, is infinite, and extends to eternity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 109. My soul <sup>in my hand.</sup>—[Rather, “My life (naphthoe) is continually in my hand;” i. e. it is in constant danger; every hour I am on the confines of death. So Xenarchus, in Athenaeus, “Having the life in the hand,” signifies continual danger and jeopardy. The LXX., Syriac, and Ethiopic read, “in thy hand;” but this is a conjectural and useless alteration.]—Bagster.

Ver. 113. I hate vain thoughts.—The term “vain,” not being in the original, various epithets have been supplied, as “wavering, foolish,” and, by Luther, “light-minded.” Perhaps no supply is necessary. Ainsworth thinks the reference is to “the top branches of trees,” continually waving in the wind; the sense may be, “I hate speculations;” meaning, sceptical notions in religion.

119 Thou <sup>a</sup> putttest away all the wicked of the earth like † dross: therefore I love thy testimonies.

120 My flesh trembleth <sup>a</sup> for fear of thee; and I am afraid of thy judgments.

Y AIN.

121 I have done judgment and justice: leave <sup>a</sup> me not to mine oppressors.

122 Be surety <sup>a</sup> for thy servant for good: let not the proud oppress me.

123 Mine eyes fail for thy salvation, and for the word of thy righteousness.

124 Deal <sup>a</sup> with thy servant according unto thy mercy, and teach me thy statutes.

125 I <sup>a</sup> am thy servant; give me understanding, that I may know thy testimonies.

126 It is time for thee, LORD, to work: for they have made void thy law.

127 Therefore I love thy commandments above <sup>a</sup> gold; yea, above fine gold.

128 Therefore I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; and I hate every false way.

B PE.

129 Thy testimonies are <sup>a</sup> wonderful: therefore doth my soul keep them.

130 The entrance of thy words giveth <sup>b</sup> light; it <sup>c</sup> giveth understanding unto the simple.

131 I opened my mouth, and panted: for I longed for thy commandments.

132 Look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me, <sup>d</sup> as thou usest to do unto those that love thy name.

133 Order <sup>a</sup> my steps in thy word: and <sup>f</sup> let not any iniquity have dominion over me.

134 Deliver me from the oppression of man: so will I keep thy precepts.

135 Make <sup>a</sup> thy face to shine upon thy servant; and teach me thy statutes.

136 Rivers <sup>b</sup> of waters run down mine eyes, because they keep not thy law.

Y TZADDI.

137 Righteous <sup>a</sup> art thou, O LORD, and upright are thy judgments.

138 Thy testimonies that thou hast commanded are <sup>b</sup> righteous and very <sup>k</sup> faithful.

139 My zeal † hath <sup>m</sup> consumed me, because mine enemies have forgotten thy words.

140 Thy word is very <sup>a</sup> pure: therefore thy servant loveth it.

141 I am small and despised: yet do not I forget thy precepts.

142 Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and <sup>o</sup> thy law is the truth.

<sup>a</sup> causeth to

<sup>c</sup> cease.

<sup>t</sup> Ecce. 22. 18.

<sup>u</sup> Hab. 3. 16.

<sup>v</sup> Ps. 37. 32.

<sup>33.</sup>

<sup>w</sup> He. 7. 22.

<sup>x</sup> Ps. 103. 10.

<sup>y</sup> Ps. 118. 18.

<sup>z</sup> Ps. 19. 10.

<sup>Pr. 8. 11.</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ver. 18.

<sup>Is. 25. 1.</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 2Co. 4. 4, 6.

<sup>c</sup> 9. 4. 6.

<sup>d</sup> according to the <sup>custom</sup>

<sup>toward.</sup>

<sup>e</sup> Ps. 17. 5.

<sup>f</sup> Ps. 19. 13.

<sup>Ro. 6. 12,</sup>

<sup>14.</sup>

<sup>g</sup> Nu. 6. 25,

<sup>h</sup> Je. 13. 17.

<sup>Is. 17.</sup>

<sup>Ecce. 9. 4.</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Da. 9. 7.

<sup>j</sup> righteousness.

<sup>k</sup> faithful-

<sup>ness.</sup>

<sup>l</sup> Ps. 69. 9.

<sup>m</sup> cut me

<sup>off.</sup>

<sup>n</sup> tried, or,

<sup>refined.</sup>

<sup>o</sup> Jn. 17. 17.

<sup>p</sup> found me.

<sup>q</sup> Pr. 10. 21.

<sup>r</sup> or, that I

<sup>may.</sup>

<sup>s</sup> Ps. 130. 6.

<sup>t</sup> Ps. 139. 2,

<sup>&c.</sup>

<sup>u</sup> Lu. 21. 33.

<sup>v</sup> La. 5. 1.

<sup>w</sup> Mt. 7. 9.

<sup>1 Jn. 2. 1.</sup>

<sup>x</sup> Lu. 16. 34.

<sup>y</sup> or, many.

<sup>z</sup> the begin-

<sup>ning of</sup>

<sup>thy word</sup>

<sup>is true.</sup>

<sup>a</sup> 1Sa. 24. 11,

<sup>17.</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 26. 21, 33.

<sup>c</sup> ver. 111.

<sup>d</sup> Pr. 3. 2.

<sup>Is. 52. 1.</sup>

<sup>Jn. 14. 27.</sup>

<sup>Ph. 4. 7.</sup>

<sup>d</sup> they shall

<sup>have no</sup>

<sup>stumbling</sup>

<sup>block.</sup>

<sup>1 Pe. 2. 8.</sup>

<sup>1 Jn. 2. 10.</sup>

his meditations on the word of God, but in his devotional breathings, mingled with those meditations; one of which is particularly worthy of our adoption. Most of our backslidings from God are preceded by too much confidence in ourselves, and in our strength to resist temptation. Well, therefore, may we pray, "Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe." Indeed, our safety depends solely on the support of divine grace.

Ver. 121—152. An appeal to, and prayer for the divine protection.—The psalmist David, as we know, being engaged in a righteous cause, is warranted in his appeal to God, to support him in his pretensions, which were founded on the divine appointment and decree; and his enemies were now so numerous, and had become so powerful, that he seems warranted in saying, "It is time for thee, Lord, to work:" for no human aid

Ver. 119. Thou putttest away.—[When Thou triest them in the refining fire, they are burnt up, fly off in fumes, or in scorica, which Thou sweepest away.]—B.

Ver. 122. Be surety.—Advocate, mediator. See Isa. xxxviii. 14.

Ver. 126. Time for thee . . . to work.—[That is, "to take vengeance," as asah signifies, Jer. xviii. 23. Mal. iii. 17. by an ellipsis of the noun. When infidels, profligates, and Pharisees, "make void the law of God," generally, then it is time for God to arise to vindicate his own honour and maintain his cause among men.]—Bagster.

Ver. 128. Therefore I esteem, &c.—Or, "Therefore all thy precepts, even all, have I approved."—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 131. I opened my mouth and panted.—Like as a traveller in hot countries gasps and pants for the cooling breeze.—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 140. Thy word is very pure.—[Gold has need to be refined; but thy word is purity itself; reflecting the holiness of Jehovah's character and government, and requiring and leading to purity of heart and life.]—Bagster.

143 Trouble and anguish have <sup>p</sup> taken hold on me: yet thy commandments are my delights. 144 The righteousness of thy testimonies is everlasting: give me understanding, and I shall <sup>a</sup> live.

P KOPH.

145 I cried with my whole heart; hear me, O LORD: I will keep thy statutes.

146 I cried unto thee; save me, <sup>a</sup> and I shall keep thy testimonies.

147 I <sup>a</sup> prevented the dawning of the morning, and cried: I hoped in thy word.

148 Mine eyes prevent the night watches, that I might meditate in thy word.

149 Hear my voice according unto thy loving-kindness: O LORD, quicken me according to thy judgment.

150 They draw nigh that follow after mischief: they are far from thy law.

151 Thou <sup>a</sup> art near, O LORD; and all thy commandments are truth.

152 Concerning thy testimonies, I have known of old that thou hast founded them for <sup>a</sup> ever.

Y RESH.

153 Consider <sup>a</sup> mine affliction, and deliver me: for I do not forget thy law.

154 Plead <sup>a</sup> my cause, and deliver me: quicken me according to thy word.

155 Salvation is far <sup>a</sup> from the wicked: for they seek not thy statutes.

156 <sup>a</sup> Great are thy tender mercies, O LORD: quicken me according to thy judgments.

157 Many are my persecutors and mine enemies; yet do I not decline from thy testimonies.

158 I beheld the transgressors, and was grieved; because they kept not thy word.

159 Consider how I love thy precepts: quicken me, O LORD, according to thy loving-kindness.

160 <sup>a</sup> Thy word is true from the beginning: and every one of thy righteous judgments endureth for ever.

W SCHIN.

161 Princes <sup>a</sup> have persecuted me without a cause: but my heart standeth in awe of thy word.

162 I rejoice <sup>b</sup> at thy word, as one that findeth great spoil.

163 I hate and abhor lying: but thy law do I love.

164 Seven times a day do I praise thee because of thy righteous judgments.

165 Great peace <sup>c</sup> have they which love thy law: and <sup>d</sup> nothing shall offend them.

seemed sufficient to extricate or deliver him. And we may always conclude this to be the case, when men make "void the law" of God. A remark, this, not impertinent in the present time, when some persons appear to glory in thus treating the divine law, though St. Paul revolted at the idea:—"What, then, do we make void the law through faith? God forbid!" (Rom. iii. 31.) The fact is, we can never think or speak too highly of any part of God's word, unless we misplace it for some other part, as the law for the gospel, &c. Though salvation be not of the law, yet the subjects of salvation should never vilify God's law, to exalt his gospel. "The law is good, if a man use it lawfully." (1 Tim. i. 8.)

Ver. 153—17. The Psalm concludes with penitence and prayer.—The great design of this psalm is, to lead us to admiring

Ver. 142. Thy righteousness.—[Men, as Bishop Horne observes, may decrease wickedness by a law; or they may change their decrees, and with them what is right to-day may be wrong to-morrow: but the law of God is righteousness, and it is truth, to-day and for ever.]—Bagster.

Ver. 148. Prevent the night watches.—[The ancient Jews divided the night into three watches of four hours each, beginning at six o'clock in the evening; before the last of which, "the day-break" or "morning watch," as the I XX. and Vulgate read, the Psalmist was awake.]—Bagster.

Ver. 160. Thy word is true from the beginning.—See margin. [Dath renders, "The sum of thy word," &c. and Archbishop Secker, "The principles of thy word;" but the textual rendering, by understanding the preposition from, before rosh, "beginning," appears to be more correct, as it is supported by the following line.]—Bagster.

Ver. 164. Seven times.—[That is, probably, many times, or frequently, as the term seven frequently denotes; but Rabbi Solomon says, that this is to be 166 LORD, I have hoped for thy salvation, and done thy commandments.

167 My soul hath kept thy testimonies; and I love them exceedingly.

168 I have kept thy precepts and thy testimonies: for <sup>a</sup> all my ways are before thee.

TAU.

169 Let my cry come near before thee, O LORD: give <sup>r</sup> me understanding according to my word.

170 Let my supplication come before thee: deliver me according to thy word.

171 My lips shall utter praise, when thou hast taught me thy statutes.

172 My tongue shall speak of thy word: for all thy commandments are righteousness.

173 Let thy hand help me; for I <sup>e</sup> have chosen thy precepts.

174 I have longed for thy salvation, O LORD; and thy law is my <sup>b</sup> delight.

175 Let my soul live, and it shall praise thee; and let thy judgments help me.

176 I <sup>i</sup> have gone astray like a lost sheep; seek thy servant; for I do not forget thy commandments.

PSALM CXX.

<sup>i</sup> David prayeth against Doeg, 3 reproveh his tongue, 5 complaineth of his necessary conversation with the wicked.

A Song of degrees.

I <sup>n</sup> my distress I cried unto the LORD, and he heard me.

thoughts of the word of God, in all its departments, and to pray for divine grace to make a proper use of it. After all, we may well conclude, with the psalmist, in the language of confession and of prayer, and each of us, for ourselves, say, "I have gone astray like a lost sheep: seek thy servant."

"Thine eyes in me the sheep behold,
Whose feet have wandered from the fold;
That guideless, helpless, strives in vain
To find its safe retreat again;
Now listens, if perchance its ear
The shepherd's well known voice may hear;
O seek thou him," thou friend of men,
And guide him to thy fold again.—Merrick, altered.

PSALM CXX. Ver. 1—7. The psalmist prays for protection against his adversaries.—The title prefixed to this and the fourteen following psalms, is, in our translation, "A Song of degrees," which is variously interpreted. The most general opinion is, that these psalms were written, either for the tribes going up in procession to worship at Mount Zion; or, for their subsequent going up from the captivity in Babylon. The psalm before us, however, seems to have no reference to either, but to be rather of the epigrammatic cast, and to favour the notion of Professor Gesenius, that the title has reference to the poetic composition. (See note.) It is generally supposed to have been written by David, when persecuted by the malignant slanders of Doeg, or some other malignant slanderers, whose words were like "sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper," in which there is a beautiful gradation of sense, terminating in a point of severity which does not appear in the translation. Slandorous words are often compared to arrows and to sharp arrows; but the force is much increased by the bow being drawn by "a mighty man;" for "as the man is, so is his strength;" (Judges viii. 21;) and the force with which understood literally; for they praised God twice in the morning before reading the decalogue, and once after; twice in the evening before the same reading, and twice after; making in the whole seven times.]—Bagster.

Ver. 175. Let my soul live.—i. e. preserve my life.

PSALM CXX. Title.—A song of degrees—which is prefixed to this and to the fourteen following psalms. The word (mahatoth) rendered "degrees," means literally, steps, or stairs, but is very generally applied to any kind of ascents. Bishop Louth calls these psalms "Odes of the Ascensions;" i. e. which were sung, either when the people came up to worship at Jerusalem, at the annual festivals, or perhaps from the Babylonish captivity. The return is certainly called the ascension, or coming up from Babylon, Ezra vii. 9. and the Syriac translator refers to this circumstance almost all the psalms that bear this inscription; but we must not omit remarking also, that both in the Old and New Testaments there is scarcely a phrase more common than "to go up to Jerusalem; to go up to the feast;" and Psalm cxvii. can scarcely be applied to any thing, but the celebration of some festival.

Besides, several of these psalms bear the name of David, and others have evident reference to his time and circumstances; but few of them could therefore be composed for the return from Babylon.

Gesenius suggests, that the term may mark a peculiar species of Hebrew composition; and it is remarkable, that these psalms are all very short, (one only exceeding nine verses,) and in several of them there is a gradation of meaning, and a degree of point toward the close, almost epigrammatic.

The Rabbinical tradition, of these Psalms being intended to be sung on the steps of the temple, is now generally rejected; besides, David lived in the time of the tabernacle, which had no steps.

Ver. 3. What shall be given, &c.—See margin; i. e. what is to be gained by deceit and slander?

e Ps. 139. 3.
Pr. 5. 21.
f Pr. 2. 6, 7.
Ja. 1. 5.
g Jos. 24. 22.
Pr. 1. 129.
Lu. 10. 42.
h Ps. 1. 2.
i Ja. 53. 6.
Lu. 15. 4.
&c.
1 Pe. 2. 25.
a Jo. 2. 2.

b or, what shall the deceitful tongue give unto thee? or, what shall it profit thee?
c added.
d or, it is as the sharp arrows of the mighty man of peace.
e or, a man of peace.
a or, shall I lift up mine eyes to the hills? whence should my help come?
Je. 3. 22.
b Ho. 13. 9.
c 1 Sa. 2. 9.
Pr. 3. 25, 26.
d Is. 27. 3.
e Is. 25. 4.
f Is. 49. 10.
Re. 7. 16.
g 2 Ti. 4. 18.
h De. 28. 6.
Pr. 2. 8.

2 Deliver my soul, O LORD, from lying lips, and from a deceitful tongue.

3 <sup>b</sup> What shall be given unto thee? or what shall be <sup>c</sup> done unto thee, thou false tongue?

4 <sup>d</sup> Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper.

5 Wo is me, that I sojourn in <sup>e</sup> Mesech, that I dwell in the tents of <sup>f</sup> Kedar!

6 My soul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace.

7 I am <sup>g</sup> for peace: but when I speak, they are for war.

PSALM CXXI.

The great safety of the godly, who put their trust in God's protection.

A Song of degrees.

I <sup>a</sup> WILL lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.

2 My <sup>b</sup> help cometh from the LORD, which made heaven and earth.

3 He <sup>c</sup> will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he <sup>d</sup> that keepeth thee will not slumber.

4 Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

5 The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy shade <sup>e</sup> upon thy right hand.

6 The <sup>f</sup> sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

7 The <sup>g</sup> LORD shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul.

8 The LORD shall preserve thy <sup>h</sup> going out his weapon strikes. But what mean these "coals of juniper?" They are remarkable, it appears, for their long continued heat, and here intimate that the wounds inflicted by the tongue of the slanderer, not only deeply penetrate, but inflame and burn for a long continuance. Hence the apostle James compares the tongue of slander to a fire enkindled from the infernal pit, and inflaming the course of nature. (James iii. 5, 6.)

PSALM CXXI. Ver. 1—8. Help in God under all circumstances.—Bishop Louth supposes the two first verses to be the language of a king of Israel going out to battle, and looking up to the oracle on Mount Zion for support; and the following part of the psalm he considers as the answer of the high priest from the tabernacle: but Bishop Horne considers the first verses as the language rather of an Israelite going up to the tabernacle, to keep one of the sacred festivals, and the following as an answer of peace and protection on his journey. This appears to us far the most probable: for, had the scene been a military one, we should have heard of shield, and sword, and buckler. The protection solicited and promised is from the burning heat of the sun, and the chilling influences of the moon, or the night air, both which were to be dreaded in Judea. "The meaning is, (says Bishop Horne,) that the good man, during his journey through life, shall be under God's protection at all seasons; as Israel in the wilderness was defended from the burning heat of the sun by the moist and refreshing shadow of the cloud; and secured against the inclement influences of the nocturnal heavens by the kindly warmth and splendour diffused from the pillar of fire. Be thou with us, thy servants, O Lord, in the world, as thou wast with Israel in the wilderness; suffer not our virtue to dissolve before the sultry gleams of prosperity; permit it not to be frozen by the chilling blasts of adversity."

Ver. 4. Sharp arrows.—See margin.—With coals of juniper.—See note on 1 Kings xix. 4. Rosenmüller considers the juniper (Rothern) of the same species with the broom, which, in Spain, retains the Arabic name, Roternus; and St. Jerome speaks of its retaining live ashes for a whole year. See Ortent. Lit. No. 804.

Ver. 5. In Mesech.—Mesech was the son of Japheth, from whom apparently the Moschi descended, who inhabited the mountains bordering upon Colchis, Iberia, and Armenia. (Strabo, l. xi.) and who afterwards peopled Russia; and the posterity of Kedar, son of Abraham, called Kedaraites by Pliny, dwelt in the south of Arabia Deserta, near the Nabathæans. Probably the Psalmist simply means that the people among whom he lived appeared to be as fierce and barbarous as these wandering tribes.]—Bagster. It is not to be as fierce and barbarous as these wandering tribes; both Ainsworth and Bishop Horne remark that the verse may be rendered, "Wo is me, that my sojourning is prolonged: I dwell in the tents of Kedar," or of the Ishmaelites.

PSALM CXXI. Ver. 1. I will lift.—See margin; i. e. to the idols worshipped in the mountains.—But we prefer the text.

Ver. 5. Thy shade, &c.—Louth, "The Lord will shade thee with his right hand."

Ver. 6. The sun.—Sun-strokes are very fatal in those hot countries. "It is a fact, too, that the moonbeams have a pernicious influence. Meat exposed to moonlight, will not take salt, but taints and spoils." Milton attributes parching to the night air:

"—————The parching air Burns sore, and cold performs th' effect of fire."

The effects of fire and frost on the human body, are known to be very similar.

and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.

PSALM CXXII.

1 David professeth his joy for the church, 6 and prayeth for the peace thereof.

A Song of degrees of David.

I WAS glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the LORD.

2 Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together :

4 Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the LORD, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD.

5 For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David.

6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem : they shall prosper that love thee.

7 Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.

8 For my brethren and companions' sakes, I will now say, Peace be within thee.

9 Because of the house of the LORD our God I will seek thy good.

PSALM CXXIII.

1 The godly profess their confidence in God, 3 and pray to be delivered from contempt.

A Song of degrees.

UNTIL thou lift I up mine eyes, O thou that dwellest in the heavens.

2 Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress ; so our eyes wait upon the LORD our God, until that he have mercy upon us.

3 Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy

a Is. 2. 2, 3.
Je. 33. 5.
Zec. 8. 21.

b De. 17. 8, 9.
2 Ch. 19. 8.

c do. ist.

d Ne. 2. 10.

a Ps. 121. 1.

b Ps. 24. 11, 4.
113. 5, 6.

c Jon. 9. 23, 27 ; 10. 6.

d Ps. 40. 1, 3
119. 32, 123
..125.

e Ps. 56. 1, 2.

f Ps. 44. 13, 16.

g Ps. 73. 5, 9.

a Ex. 15. 1, &c.

b Ps. 129. 1.

c Ps. 2. 1, 2.

d Ps. 27. 2.

e Nu. 16. 30
..34.

f Ps. 76. 10.

g Ps. 13. 4.

h Ps. 93. 3, 4.

i Ps. 17. 9.

j Isa. 23. 26, 27.

k Ps. 25. 15.

l Ps. 115. 15.

upon us : for we are exceedingly filled with contempt.

4 Our soul is exceedingly filled with the scorning of those that are at ease, and with the contempt of the proud.

PSALM CXXIV.

The church bleaseth God for a miraculous deliverance.

A Song of degrees of David.

IF it had not been the LORD who was on our side, now may Israel say ;

2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, when men rose up against us :

3 Then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us :

4 Then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul :

5 Then the proud waters had gone over our soul.

6 Blessed be the LORD, who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth.

7 Our soul is escaped as a bird out of the snare of the fowlers : the snare is broken, and we are escaped.

8 Our help is in the name of the LORD, who made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXV.

1 The safety of such as trust in God. 4 A prayer for the godly, and against the wicked.

A Song of degrees.

THEY that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever.

2 As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the LORD is round about his people from henceforth even for ever.

PSALM CXXII. Ver. 1—9. The joy of attending the house of God.—This psalm, as Bishop Lovth observes, was evidently written on occasion of some public festival at Jerusalem, whither all the tribes were required to go up three times in the year. Jerusalem was a type of the Christian church ; and as the former was "compacted together," so the latter, being "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets," is "fitly framed together," and "groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord." (Eph. ii. 20, 21.) As it was an object of the earnest desire of true Israelites to attend the typical solemnities of the law ; so is it of Christian believers to meet their Lord in the more spiritual services of the New Testament church ; but their ultimate desire is to meet him in the New Jerusalem which is above. Bishop Horne mentions of Theodore Zwinger, a learned physician of the sixteenth century, that, on his death-bed, he took leave of the world in a Latin paraphrase of this psalm, which was translated by Merrick, and from which we copy the last verse, which is an apostrophe to the New Jerusalem.

"Let me, blest seat, my name behold
Among thy citizens enrolled,
In thee for ever dwell.
Let Charity my steps attend,
My sole companion and my friend,
And Faith and Hope farewell !"

PSALM CXXIII. 1—4. Confidence in God, and prayer for deliverance.—The attention of servants (or slaves) to their masters, is, and perhaps always was, in the east, very particular and minute. Dr. Pococke says, that "at a visit in Egypt, every thing is done with the greatest decency, and the most profound silence ; the slaves, or servants, standing at the bottom of the room with their hands joined before them, watching with the utmost attention every motion of their master, who commands them by signs." Another traveller (La Motraye) says, "that the Eastern ladies are waited on even at the least wink of the eye or motion of the fingers, and that in a manner not perceptible to strangers." Supposing this, or somewhat like it, to have been the practice in Judea, the psalmist might borrow hence the imagery of this psalm ; in which he is represented as watching the indications of the divine will, so narrowly as a servant (male or female) watched the orders that were expressed by the hand of their master or mistress. Even so "our eyes wait upon the Lord our God."

From the latter part of this psalm, we are led to conclude that it was composed during a period of great contempt and scorn toward Israel from their heathen enemies. Bishop Patrick thinks it was probably at the period of Rabshakeh's blasphemy, when Hezekiah and the pious Jews watched the motions of divine providence (if we may so speak) with the most diligent attention. If so, it was probably written by Isaiah. (See 2 Kings xix. 1—5.) If the Lord's servants apply to him for relief, or for redress under injuries, it is necessary that they should watch as well as pray ; or "look up," as David himself expresses it. (Psalm v. 3.)

PSALM CXXIV. Ver. 1—8. Acknowledgments of divine mercy received.—This is a psalm of David, but it is not necessary, nor perhaps possible, to ascertain the occasion of its being written. David was frequently distressed by the inroads of numerous armies of his enemies, as by the Philistines when they spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim ; and when the Ammonites and Syrians combined against him like the billows of an overwhelming sea ; but the Lord was on his side, and they were defeated. (See 2 Sam. v. 17—25 ; x. 6—19.) Christians can have no difficulty in making a proper use of passages like these. "The great lesson which this psalm inculcates (says Bishop Horne) is, that for every deliverance, whether of a temporal or spiritual nature, we should, in imitation of the saints above, ascribe salvation to God and to the Lamb."

"Our help is in Jehovah's name,
Who formed the earth and built the skies :
He that upholds that wondrous frame,
Guards his own church with watchful eyes."—Watts.

PSALM CXXV. Ver. 1—5. The final prosperity of Zion,

Ver. 2. Eyes of servants.—[These words may be understood as expressive of a readiness to obey his commands when known ; and also as the language of dependence, expecting support, protection, and redress.]—Bagster.

PSALM CXXIV. [It is uncertain what the particular deliverance was which is celebrated in this Psalm. It is attributed to David in the present copies of the Hebrew text ; but it is to be remarked, that Isaia, "of David," is wanting in three MSS. and in the ancient versions. Some refer it to the deliverance of Hezekiah from Sennacherib ; and others to the return from the Babylonian captivity ; while Dr. A. Clarke refers it to that of the Jews from the massacre intended by Haman.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Then the waters had overwhelmed us—Meaning, the army of the enemy. Compare Isa. lix. 19.

PSALM CXXV. [Dr. Delany supposes this psalm to have been composed by David when about to attack the strong holds of Zion ; others refer it to the invasion of Judah by Sennacherib ; and the miraculous deliverance of Jerusalem ; but it most probably was written on the return from the captivity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. As the mountains.—[This comparison beautifully illustrates the power and protection of God : Jerusalem, says Sandys, is seated on a rocky PSALM CXXII. [It is very uncertain why the title of "A song of degrees," is affixed to these Psalms. As maaloth, from alah, "to ascend," denotes steps, or stairs ; some are of opinion that they were sung by the Levites, as they went up the steps or stairs of the temple. But as it also signifies simply ascents, or goings up, others explain them in reference to the return from the Babylonian captivity ; and others think they were so called because sung by the Hebrews when they went up to Jerusalem, three times a year, at the annual festivals. Some think it means a song sung with the highest elevation of the voice and music ; and others apply it to the matter of the psalm, and think it denotes a song of peculiar excellence, "a most excellent ode," as Junius and Trenellius render. The psalm was probably written by David for the use of the Israelites, when they went up to Jerusalem, after the ark was removed thither, to celebrate the sacred feasts.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. The testimony of Israel.—That is, the ark of the testimony, Exod. xl. 3, 20.

Ver. 5. The thrones of the house of Israel.—That is, of the heads of the several tribes.

PSALM CXXIII. [This psalm is probably a complaint of the captives in Babylon, relative to the contempt and cruel usage they received.]—Bagster.

3 For the rod of <sup>a</sup> the wicked shall not rest <sup>b</sup> upon the lot of the righteous; lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity.
4 Do good, O LORD, unto those that be good, and to them that are upright in their hearts.
5 As for such as turn aside unto their crooked ways, the LORD shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity: but peace shall be upon Israel.

PSALM CXXVI.

1 The church, celebrating her incredible return out of captivity, 4 prayeth for, and prophesieth the good success thereof.

A Song of degrees.

WHEN the LORD <sup>a</sup> turned <sup>b</sup> again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream.

2 Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then said they among the heathen, The LORD hath <sup>c</sup> done great things for them.

3 The LORD hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad.

4 Turn again our captivity, O LORD, as the streams in the south.

5 They <sup>d</sup> that sow in tears shall reap in <sup>e</sup> joy.

6 He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing <sup>f</sup> precious seed, shall doubtless come again with <sup>g</sup> rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him.

a wickedness.
b Is. 14.5,6.
c Ga. 6.16.
d returned the returning.
e Ps. 53.6.
f or, seed
basket.
g Ps. 30.5.
h magnified to do with them.
i Je. 31.9.
j 14.
k singing.
l or, seed
basket.
m Ps. 30.5.

a or, of
Ps. 72. title
b 1 Co. 3.6,7.
c that are builders of it in it.
d Ge. 3.17, 19.
e Ge. 33.5.
f 1 Sa. 2.5.
f filled his quiver
with.
g or, subdued
Ps. 18.47.
h or, destroy.
i Job 5.4.
j a. 112.1.
k Is. 3.10.
l Eccl. 19.10.
m Ps. 144.12.

PSALM CXXVII.

1 The virtue of God's blessing. 3 Good children are his gift.

A Song of degrees <sup>a</sup> for Solomon.
EXCEPT <sup>b</sup> the LORD build the house, they labour in vain <sup>c</sup> that build it: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

2 It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat <sup>d</sup> the bread of sorrows: for so he giveth his beloved sleep.

3 Lo, children <sup>e</sup> are a heritage of the LORD: and the fruit of the womb is his reward.

4 As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth.

5 Happy is the man that hath <sup>f</sup> his quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, but they shall <sup>g</sup> speak with the enemies in the <sup>h</sup> gate.

PSALM CXXVIII.

The sundry blessings which follow them that fear God.

A Song of degrees.

BLESSED <sup>a</sup> is every one that feareth the LORD; that walketh in his ways.

2 For <sup>b</sup> thou shalt eat the labour of thy hands: happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee.

3 Thy wife <sup>c</sup> shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thy house: thy children like olive-plants <sup>d</sup> round about thy table.

and destruction of her enemies.—In this psalm the church is comforted with the promises of God's protection and defence; and to remove, in due time, the hand of persecution from them, so that the rod (or sceptre) of the wicked (or of wickedness) shall not rest permanently on the lot (or portion) of the righteous. The reason given is, "lest the righteous put forth their hands to iniquity;" that is, lest from the universal prevalence of iniquity, they also should be drawn into the vortex of crime. Dr. Hammond quotes Aben Ezra as applying this psalm to the kingdom of the Messiah, when "the mountain of the LORD's house shall be established in the top of the mountains," (Isa. ii. 2.) while those who turn aside to the "crooked ways" of idolatry, shall be led forth to punishment with other workers of iniquity. But "peace shall be upon Israel;" or as we should rather render it, "Peace be on Israel!" (See Gal. vi. 16.)

PSALM CXXVI. Ver. 1—6. This psalm is generally, and we think justly, applied to the first return from captivity, which to many must be so unexpected, and appear so marvellous, that it must seem rather a dream than a reality. The decree of Cyrus, doubtless, filled their "mouth with songs," and even those of the heathen around them with admiration. "The LORD hath done great things for them," said they; and the Jews replied, "True! indeed the LORD hath done great things for us, and we are glad." The prayer which now arose in their hearts (for our mercies should teach us to pray as well as praise) will bear a two-fold interpretation. By "streams in the south," Bishop Louth understands the torrents produced by the periodical rains in the south of Judea, which dried up during the heat of summer; but, when the time came round, returned again from the same cause, and filled the same channels. So Israel were now about to return to their country. But Dr. Durell gives rather a different turn to the words, which he renders, "The turning of our captivity, O LORD, is as streams in the south," or desert of Judea; equally welcome and delightful as rain upon the thirsty sands.

The Israelites now going forth from Babylon, are compared to husbandmen sowing with tears, lest they should not be permitted to reap the fruit of their industry. A traveller in that country remarks: "In Palestine we have often seen the husbandman sowing, accompanied by an armed friend, to prevent his being robbed of the seed." Harmer observes, that these Israelites were in similar circumstances: they had reason to fear that their enemies would defeat their efforts; but the author of this psalm (perhaps Ezra) predicts a happy issue to their efforts, and promises them a joyful harvest.

mountain, every way to be ascended, except a little on the north, with steep ascents and deep valleys naturally fortified: for the most part, it is environed with other mountains, not far removed, as if placed in the midst of an amphitheatre."—Bagster.

Ver. 3. The rod.—Or sceptre, (see Ps. cx. 2.)
Ver. 5. Lead them forth.—That is, to punishment.—But peace, &c.—The Hebrew reads literally, "Peace (be) on Israel!"

PSALM CXXVI. Ver. 1. Like them that dream.—[Similar to this was the effect produced upon the Greeks when the Romans proclaimed their liberty at the Isthmian games, after they had vanquished Philip king of Macedonia. "Scarcely could any person believe what he heard. They gazed on each other, wondering as if it had been some illusion, similar to a dream."—Livy.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Reap in joy.—See margin; which is no doubt to be understood literally, as at our harvest homes; but with this difference, that they sung songs of praise to the true God, and not to Bacchus, or Ceres, &c. as is so common in our rejoicings. See Ruth ii. 4

Bishop Horne remarks, that "the return of Israel from Babylon holds forth a figure of the same import with the Exodus of that people from Egypt. And this psalm, like the prophecies of Isaiah, representeth the blessed effects of a spiritual redemption, in words primarily alluding to that temporal release."

PSALM CXXVII. Ver. 1—5. The importance of God's blessing on all our affairs.—Judging from the title, we should consider this psalm as probably composed by Solomon, at the time of building his own house, or the temple. The chief doctrine meant to be inculcated is, that all our labours are in vain, either to build, or to guard our habitations, without the divine aid and concurrence. Solomon expresses the same sentiment in his Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. (Prov. iii. 5, 6. Eccles. ix. 11.)

The second doctrine of the psalm is, that "children are a heritage of (or from) the LORD," and bestowed as a reward on those that serve him. Among the Jews, instead of being a burden, (as many among us consider them,) they were "as arrows in the hand of a mighty man," that is, as weapons of defence; so that their father, when himself aged and infirm, need not be afraid to speak with his enemies in the gate; since, if he were accused before the elders, they were ready to plead his cause: or, if war should be at his gate, (as in Judges v. 8.) they were able personally to defend him: and much it is to the honour of those affectionate children, who make their parent's cause their own.

PSALM CXXVIII. Ver. 1—6. The blessings of a virtuous marriage.—"Marriage (says Bishop Horne) was ordained by God, to complete the felicity of man in a state of innocence; and the benediction of heaven will ever descend upon it, when undertaken in the fear of the LORD. The vine, a lowly plant, raised with tender care, becoming, by its luxuriance, its beauty, its fragrance, and its clusters, the ornament and glory of the house to which it is joined, and by which it is supported, forms the finest imaginable emblem of a fair, virtuous, and faithful wife." The children round the family table are no less beautifully represented by a plantation of young olives, "ever fair and green." And both images, taken together, compose the most engaging picture of a happy family ever drawn by the hand of a poet.

The blessings here promised are, indeed, of a temporal nature; but pious Jews, as well as pious Christians, were used to look through these images to higher objects, of which we have an example in the Chaldee paraphrase of this expression, "It shall be well with thee," which adds "in the world to come."

PSALM CXXVII. Ver. 2. So—Atnsworth, "surely," Hammond, "since" "he giveth his beloved sleep."—An allusion to Solomon's name, Jedidiah. 2 Sam. xii. 25.

Ver. 5. That hath his quiver full.—See margin.—Speak with—"Subdue," or "destroy his enemies." Merrick quotes a Chinese remark: "When a son is born in a family, it is customary to hang up a bow and arrow before the house, as a sign that the family has acquired a defender."

PSALM CXXVIII. Ver. 3. Fruitful vine.—[The houses in the East are built in the form of a square, with an open area in the midst, with apartments on each side. This quadrangular court is adorned with spreading trees, aromatic shrubs, and fragrant flowers, which are continually refreshed by the crystal waters of a fountain playing in the midst; and to increase the beauty of the scene, they cover the stairs leading to the upper apartments of the harem with vines, and have often a lattice work of wood raised against the dead walls, upon which climbs a vine or other meriting shrub.]—Bagster.—Thy children like olive-plants, &c.—Or, Thy children round thy table like olive-plants; i. e. ever fresh and flourishing; Harmer and Boothroyd. Atnsworth

4 Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord.

5 The Lord shall bless thee out of Zion: and thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

6 Yea, thou shalt see thy children's children, and peace upon Israel.

PSALM CXXIX.

1 An exhortation to praise God for saving Israel in their great afflictions. 5 The hatred of the church are cursed.

A Song of degrees.

MANY a time have they afflicted me from my youth, may Israel now say:

2 Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth: yet they have not prevailed against me.

3 The ploughers ploughed upon my back: they made long their furrows.

4 The Lord is righteous: he hath cut asunder the cords of the wicked.

5 Let them all be confounded and turned back that hate Zion.

6 Let them be as the grass upon the house-tops, which withereth afore it groweth up:

7 Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand; nor he that bindeth sheaves his bosom.

8 Neither do they which go by say, The blessing of the Lord be upon you: we bless you in the name of the Lord.

PSALM CXXX.

1 The psalmist professeth his hope in prayer, and his patience in hope. 7 He exhorteth Israel to hope in God.

A Song of degrees.

OUT of the depths have I cried unto thee, O Lord.

2 Lord, hear my voice: let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my supplications.

3 If thou, Lord, shouldest mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?

PSALM CXXIX. Ver. 1—8. A retrospective view of persecution.—This is evidently the language of the Jewish church in a state of captivity, or rather, just emerging from it; having been subject, not only to privations and to poverty, but to the inflictions of the scourge and of the dungeon. Of these she here takes a retrospective view, alluding to the various sufferings of the nation, from the days of Pharaoh to the Babylonish captivity; and the third verse in particular—"The ploughers ploughed upon my back," &c., has been often applied (and not improperly) to the scourging that our Saviour himself endured from his apostate countrymen. The psalm itself, we have remarked, seems to have been written in the dawn of Judah's deliverance from Babylon. "The Lord is righteous," saith the prophet, in the name of his brethren; "He hath cut asunder the cords of the wicked," with which they had bound and scourged their captives.

The following part of the psalm, though in an imprecatory form, may rather be considered (as Bishop Horne renders it) as predictive of their speedy deliverance, and the righteous retribution of heaven upon their enemies. They are not only compared to grass, as in other places, but to grass on the house-tops, where it could have no depth of soil, and where it withered before it could attain sufficient growth to fill the mower's hand, or to attract the admiration of the passers by, who were accustomed to bless the productions of the earth, and those who cultivated them. (Ruth ii. 4.)

PSALM CXXX. Ver. 1—8. A penitent confession with prayer for pardon.—This very excellent penitential psalm was also perhaps written during the captivity; though some, as Bishop Patrick and others, ascribe it to the patriarch David. The writer had evidently a deep sense of his own guilt, of the necessity of pardon, and of the way in which it was to be obtained. "All true fear of God must be founded on his forgiving mercy; but for the hope of this we might, indeed we must, dread him; but could not filially and reverentially fear him."

thinks the allusion to the olive, implies legitimacy, as the olive admits no foreign graft.

PSALM CXXIX. Ver. 2. Not prevailed.—That is, so as to extirpate the Jewish nation, as appears to have been their object.

Ver. 3. Ploughers ploughed.—[This strong figure seems to intimate, that the enemies of Israel cut their backs by scourging, as the ploughers cut the soil.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. As grass upon the house-tops.—[As the tops of the houses in the East are flat, and covered with plaster of terrace, they are frequently grown over with grass, or other vegetable productions; but, from the want of proper nourishment, it is but small and weak, and from its elevation, being exposed to the scorching sun, it is soon withered. If grass, the mower cannot make hay of it; if corn, the reaper cannot make a sheaf of it. A more beautiful and striking figure, to display the weak and evanescent condition of wicked men, cannot easily be conceived.]—Bagster.

PSALM CXXX. Ver. 8. More than they that watch, &c.—Ainsworth, 682

e Ps.134.3.
f Ge.50.23.
Job 42.16.
g Ps.125.5.
a or, much.
b Ex.1.13.
14.
La.1.3.
c Jn.16.33.
d 1Co.16.22.
e Mat.13.6.
21.
f Ro.24.
a La.3.55.
Jo.2.2.
b 2Ch.6.40.
c Ps.143.2.
Ro.3.20.
24.
d Ex.34.7.
Da.9.9.
Ro.8.1.
e Je.33.8.9.
2Ti.2.19.
f or, which watch unto the morning.
g Ps.71.5.
Ro.8.24.
He.10.25.
h Ps.103.8.
i Mat.1.21.
a walk.
b wonderful.
Job 42.3.
c my soul.
d Mat.18.3.
e from now.
a 2 Sa.7.1.
&c. b habitations.

4 But there is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared.

5 I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope.

6 My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning: I say, more than they that watch for the morning.

7 Let Israel hope in the Lord: for with the Lord there is mercy, and with him is plentiful redemption.

8 And he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXXI.

1 David, professing his humility, 3 exhorteth Israel to hope in God.

A Song of degrees of David.

LORD, my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty: neither do I exercise myself in great matters, or in things too high for me.

2 Surely I have behaved and quieted myself, as a child that is weaned of his mother: my soul is even as a weaned child.

3 Let Israel hope in the Lord from henceforth and for ever.

PSALM CXXXII.

1 David in his prayer commendeth unto God the religious care he had for the ark. 3 His prayer at the removing of the ark, 11 with a repetition of God's promises.

A Song of degrees.

LORD, remember David, and all his afflictions:

2 How he swore unto the Lord, and vowed unto the mighty God of Jacob;

3 Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my house, nor go up into my bed;

4 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids,

5 Until I find out a place for the Lord, a habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.

The diligence of the priests or Levites, who, in the purlieu of the temple, watched for the rising day, that they might offer up their early sacrifices, is here used to represent the diligence and anxiety of a convinced sinner in imploring mercy.

"So waits my soul to see thy grace,
And, more intent than they,
Meets the first openings of thy face,
And finds a brighter day."—Watts.

PSALM CXXXI. Ver. 1—3. A profession of humility, and subjection to Jehovah.—This psalm is ascribed to David, and may correctly describe his feelings and disposition, which, under the influences of divine grace, were controlled and subdued, as a child that is completely weaned from the breast. It is supposed to have been composed in answer to the charges brought against him, of attempting to supplant Saul, and wrest the kingdom from him. The psalm is applied to Christ by some divines, on his being charged, with equal falsehood, with being an enemy to Cæsar. (John xix. 12.) And it is true, that all the virtues which Jews or Christians have partially possessed, resided, in their maturity and full perfection, in our divine Lord.

PSALM CXXXII. Ver. 1—18. David's anxiety to provide for the ark, and its removal.—There is some difference among commentators, as to the author of this psalm, and the occasion of its being written. If composed by David, it was probably on the second removal of the ark, from the house of Obed-edom, (1 Chron. xv. 4, &c.) and so Lightfoot places it: if by Solomon, it must have been about the time of removing the ark into the temple, which he had built for it, (2 Chron. v. 2, &c.) on which occasion the 135th and 136th Psalms are also supposed to have been written. Bishop Horne, who inclines to the former hypothesis, so clearly expresses and so beautifully improves it, that we cannot persuade ourselves to omit the following quotation:

"In all circumstances and situations, (says the Bishop,) Da-

"More than the watchmen for the morning—more than the watchmen for the morning." Hammond, "My soul hasteneth to the Lord, from the time of the morning watches." [Some suppose this to be an allusion to the city guards or to the priests who watched at the temple; but probably it refers to the case of a bewildered and benighted traveller, or the endangered mariner, who eagerly looks forward to the break of day.]—Bagster.

PSALM CXXXI. Ver. 1. Neither do I exercise ("walk") in great matters . . . too high.—Wonderful." He could appeal to God, that he should have been well satisfied in privacy and obscurity, and in the meaner occupations of a shepherd; without intermeddling with affairs of state, or other matters too high or wonderful for him."—T. Scott.

Ver. 2. Surely I have, &c.—The clause rendered "Surely I have," is literally, "If I have not," that is, "Then let mine enemies prevail against me. I have behaved and quieted myself."—I have composed and stilled my soul."—T. Scott.

PSALM CXXXII. Ver. 3. Surely I will not come.—"If I enter," being the 6 Lo, we heard of it at Ephratah: we found it in the fields of the wood.

7 We will go into his tabernacles: we will worship <sup>a</sup> at his footstool.

8 Arise, O Lord, into thy rest; thou, and the ark of thy <sup>c</sup> strength.

9 Let thy priests be clothed with righteousness; and let thy saints shout <sup>f</sup> for joy.

10 For thy servant David's sake turn not away the face of thine anointed.

11 The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of <sup>e</sup> the fruit of thy <sup>b</sup> body will I set upon thy throne.

12 If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore.

13 For the Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation.

14 This <sup>i</sup> is my rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it.

15 I will abundantly bless her provision: I will satisfy her poor with <sup>k</sup> bread.

16 I will also clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

c Ps. 122.1.

d Ps. 99.5.

e Ps. 78.61.

f Is. 65.14.

g 1 Ki. 8.25.

h belly.

i Ps. 68.16.

j or, surely.

k Lu. 1.53.

l ver. 9.

m or, candle.

n 2 Ch. 21.7.

a even to get'er.

b Ex. 30.25, 30.

c De. 4.48.

d 1 Ti. 5.8.

e or, holiness.

f 1 Ch. 16.29.

17 There will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a <sup>m</sup> lamp <sup>n</sup> for mine anointed.

18 His enemies will I clothe with shame: but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

PSALM CXXXIII.

The benefit of the communion of saints.

A song of degrees of David.

BEHOLD, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell <sup>a</sup> together in unity!

2 It is like the precious ointment <sup>b</sup> upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard: that went down to the skirts of his garments;

3 As the dew of <sup>c</sup> Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore.

PSALM CXXXIV.

An exhortation to bless God.

A Song of degrees.

BEHOLD, bless ye the Lord, all ye servants of the Lord, which by night stand in the house of the Lord.

2 Lift <sup>a</sup> up your hands <sup>b</sup> in the sanctuary, and bless the Lord.

vid was solicitous for the tabernacle and service of God. Of the oath and vow here mentioned, we have, indeed, no account in the sacred history: but we read (2 Sam. vii. 2.) of the uneasiness which he expressed to Nathan the prophet, at the thought of his dwelling in a palace of cedar, while the ark of God dwelt only within the curtains of a tent. Nay, we find (by 1 Chron. xvi. 43.) that he did not bless, and consequently did not inhabit his own house, until he had brought the ark to Zion, where the temple was afterwards erected. He could take neither pleasure nor rest, until a place was prepared for the residence of Jehovah, in the midst of his people; and from thenceforth he gave himself, with unwearied diligence, to lay in a plentiful store of the most costly materials, silver, gold, and precious stones, which were employed by his son and successor, Solomon, in constructing the magnificent and mystic edifice. Thus, in the covenant of grace, did the Son of God engage not to take possession of his heavenly palace, nor to enter into his eternal rest, until he had prepared upon the earth a place for the residence of the Lord; a building framed of materials more precious than gold and silver, more bright and beautiful than rubies, emeralds, and diamonds. All this was planned and executed by one and the same person, who first suffered in meekness and patience, like David, then reigned in glory and peace, like Solomon. The believer should spare no pains, no time, no thought, to find out and prepare in his heart an habitation for the God of Jacob, since our Lord hath graciously vouchsafed to make this general promise to us all, "If a man love me, my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." (John xiv. 23.)

Several reasons, however, incline us to the opinion of those who consider Solomon as the author. Not only are several expressions in this psalm quoted, or alluded to in his dedication prayer, which, to be sure, a son might copy from his father; but the writer speaks of David in the third person, and pleads before God the labours and afflictions which he (David) had suffered on account of his attachment to the ark of the God of Israel; the oath and covenant which God had made with him, and the promises to be fulfilled in himself, (Solomon,) as the budding of David's horn, and as a lamp to preserve his memory; but finally to be accomplished, to their utmost extent, in the Messiah himself, to whom the kingdom must be eventually surrendered, and in whom the promises must receive their ultimate accomplishment.

"The saints, unable to contain Their inward joys, shall shout and sing:
The Son of David here shall reign,
And Zion triumph in her King."—Watts.

usual form of an oath, or vow, that he would not.—Find out—That is, discover a proper situation.

Ver. 6. Lo, we heard of it (that is, of the ark) at Ephratah—The city of Shiloh, in the country of Ephraim, where the ark and tabernacle long continued, Judges xviii. 31.; xxi. 19. 1 Sam. i. 3. therefore an Ephraimite is called an Ephraimite, Judges xii. 5. See Ainsworth.—In the fields of the wood—That is, in the city of Kirjath-jearim, which signifies, the city of the woods, where the ark was twenty years, after it came home from the Philistines. 1 Sam. vi. 21.; vii. 1, 2. See Ainsworth.

Ver. 7. At his footstool.—Namely, before the ark.

Ver. 8. Arise, O Lord.—Num. x. 35. 2 Chron. vi. 41.

Ver. 10. Turn not away the face of thine anointed.—That is, "Deny not my request."

Ver. 11. The Lord hath sworn.—See 2 Sam. vii. 12. 1 Ki. viii. 25. 2 Chron. vi. 16. Luke i. 69. Acts ii. 30.

Ver. 17. There (i. e. in Zion, or Jerusalem) will I make the horn of David to bud.—[A horn is an emblem of power and sovereignty; and as one horn dropped off, another sprung up, till the budding forth of the Messiah, "the horn of salvation," (Lu. i. 69.) and the lamp, or fami<sup>l</sup> of David was not ex-

PSALM CXXXIII. Ver. 1—3. The blessedness of unity and brotherly affection.—This very beautiful, though very short psalm, is ascribed to David, and was probably written on the death of Ishbosheth, when Abner persuaded the other tribes to unite with Judah and Benjamin, under David's government. (2 Sam. v. 1, &c.) The unity of brethren is illustrated by two fine poetic images. The first is borrowed from the anointing of the high priest with the precious consecrated ointment, which spread, not its oily substance, but the rich fragrance of its perfume, on the collar of his robes. So Louth quotes from the elegant version of Buchanan:

"Sweet as the odorous balsam poured On Aaron's sacred head;
Which o'er his beard, and down his breast
A breathing fragrance shed."

The other image is from the dew, which gently distils upon the mountains. Dr. Pococke, however, who travelled the country, gives a more literal translation. Hermon he supposes the highest mountain in Judea, and that the clouds upon its summit, carried by the north winds, let fall their dews upon Zion, which lies southward.

Dr. Delany (in his life of David) supposes these images to represent the spirit of unity between the governor and people, the head and body of the nation; and if we admit the notion of Dr. Pococke, the dews may, in the same way, represent the benefit conveyed by the highest orders to all around them. But the images may be more spiritually explained. Christ, who is God's anointed, bestows the anointing of the Spirit on all his people. (1 John ii. 27.) He also is "as the dew unto Israel," refreshing and comforting his people by divine grace. (Hosea xiv. 5.)

In the close of this psalm, we have a striking proof that the more pious Hebrews did not confine their views to the present life, but carried forward their hopes and views beyond the grave, even to "life evermore."

PSALM CXXXIV. Ver. 1—3. An Evening Hymn.—Bishop Patrick thinks this short psalm (which is the last of the Songs of Degrees) was usually sung by the priests, on shutting up the gates of the temple in the evening, as the next psalm, on opening them in the morning. We read (1 Chron. ix. 33.) that some or other of the Levitical singers were constantly employed, "day and night," in singing the praises of Jehovah; so we find, in the celestial world above, the redeemed "are before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple;" (Rev. vii. 15:) but this must be taken figuratively, for a continued round of worship; for, strictly speaking, there is "no night there." (Rev. xxii. 5.)

tinguished, till "the Sun of righteousness arose with healing in his wings."—Baister.—A lamp for mine anointed.—A successor, to perpetuate his memory. See 1 Kings xv. 4. Kimchi, and other Rabbins, admit this verse to refer to the Messiah.

Ver. 18. Crown flourish.—This seems to allude to the materials of which crowns were perhaps originally made, as certain species of evergreens, the bay, laurel, &c.

PSALM CXXXIII. Ver. 2. The skirts.—"The mouth;" i. e. the edge, or rather, the button-hole of the collar, (Exod. xxxix. 23.) which was under the beard.

Ver. 3. As the dew of Hermon. . . . and of Zion.—Bishop Louth supplies the ellipsis as in our translation and in Ainsworth. (Marandrell says, "We were sufficiently instructed by experience what the holy Psalmist means by 'the dew of Hermon,' our tents being as wet with it as if it had rained all night.") Some suppose that Zion here means a part of Mount Hermon, (De. iv. 48:) but it is not written Zion here, but Zion, which is at Jerusalem.]—Baister.

PSALM CXXXIV. Ver. 1. Which by night stand.—Namely, the priests, who stood to minister in the sanctuary; or, as some think, to keep watch, Ex. viii. 35.

3 The LORD that made heaven and earth bless thee out of Zion.

PSALM CXXXV.

1 An exhortation to praise God for his mercy, 5 for his power, 8 for his judgments. 15 The vanity of idols. 19 An exhortation to bless God.

PRAISE ye the LORD. Praise <sup>a</sup>ye the name of the LORD; praise him, O ye servants of the LORD.

2 Ye <sup>b</sup>that stand in the house of the LORD, in the courts of the house of our God,

3 Praise the LORD; for the LORD is good; sing praises unto his name; for <sup>c</sup>it is pleasant.

4 For <sup>d</sup>the LORD hath chosen Jacob unto himself, and Israel for his peculiar treasure.

5 For I know that the LORD is great, and that our LORD is above all gods.

6 Whatsoever <sup>e</sup>the LORD pleased, that did he in heaven, and in earth, in the seas, and all deep places.

7 He <sup>f</sup>causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he <sup>g</sup>maketh lightnings for the rain; he bringeth the wind out of his treasures.

8 Who <sup>h</sup>smote the first-born of Egypt, both of man and beast.

9 Who sent comets and wonders into the midst of thee, O Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his servants.

10 Who <sup>k</sup>smote great nations, and slew mighty kings;

11 Sihon king of the Amorites, and Og king of Bashan, and all the kingdoms of Canaan:

12 And gave their land for a heritage, a heritage unto Israel his people.

13 Thy <sup>m</sup>name, O LORD, endureth for ever; and thy memorial, O LORD, throughout all generations.

14 For <sup>n</sup>the LORD will judge his people, and he will repent himself concerning his servants.

15 The idols of the heathen are silver and gold, the work of men's hands.

16 They have mouths, but they speak not; eyes have they, but they see not;

17 They have ears, but they hear not; neither is there any breath in their mouths.

18 They that made them are like unto them: so is every one that trusteth in them.

19 Bless the LORD, O house of Israel: bless the LORD, O house of Aaron:

a Ne.9.5.

Pa.145.1.

b Pa.92.13.

c Pa.147.1.

d Ex.19.5.

De.7.6.7.

1 Pe.2.9.

e Pa.33.9,11.

Da.4.35.

f Je.14.22.

Zec.10.1.

g Je.10.13.

h Ex.12.29.

i from man.

unto.

j Ex.7.&amp;c.

k Nu.21.24.

35.

Pa.136.17.

&amp;c.

l Jos.12.7.

Ps.44.1.-3.

78.55.

m Ex.3.15.

n to generation.

and generation.

o De.32.36.

p Pa.115.4.

&amp;c.

Is.44.12.

&amp;c.

a Pa.119.68.

b 1Ch.16.34.

2Ch.33.21.

c De.10.17.

Pa.82.1.

d Pa.72.18.

e Pr.3.19.

f Ge.1.9.&amp;c.

Je.10.12.

g for the.

rulings.

h Ex.12.29.

Pa.135.3.

&amp;c.

i Ex.14.21.

22.

Pa.78.13.

j shaken off.

k Ex.13.18.

De.8.15.

l De.29.7.

m Nu.21.21.

23.

n Jos.12.1.

&amp;c.

20 Bless the LORD, O house of Levi: ye that fear the LORD, bless the LORD.

21 Blessed be the LORD out of Zion, which dwelleth at Jerusalem. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXXXVI.

An exhortation to give thanks to God for particular mercies.

GIVE thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 O give thanks unto the God of gods: for his mercy endureth for ever.

3 O give thanks to the Lord of lords: for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 To him who alone doeth great wonders: for his mercy endureth for ever.

5 To him that by wisdom made the heavens: for his mercy endureth for ever.

6 To him that stretched out the earth above the waters: for his mercy endureth for ever.

7 To him that made great lights: for his mercy endureth for ever:

8 The sun to rule by day: for his mercy endureth for ever:

9 The moon and stars to rule by night: for his mercy endureth for ever.

10 To him that smote Egypt in their first-born: for his mercy endureth for ever:

11 And brought out Israel from among them: for his mercy endureth for ever:

12 With a strong hand, and with a stretched out arm: for his mercy endureth for ever:

13 To him which divided the Red sea into parts: for his mercy endureth for ever:

14 And made Israel to pass through the midst of it: for his mercy endureth for ever:

15 But overthrew Pharaoh and his host in the Red sea: for his mercy endureth for ever:

16 To him which led his people through the wilderness: for his mercy endureth for ever:

17 To him which smote great kings: for his mercy endureth for ever:

18 And slew famous kings: for his mercy endureth for ever:

19 Sihon king of the Amorites: for his mercy endureth for ever:

20 And Og the king of Bashan: for his mercy endureth for ever:

21 And gave their land for a heritage: for his mercy endureth for ever:

PSALM CXXXV. Ver. 1—21. This is evidently a dialogue psalm between the priests and Levites; and Henley (in Louth) supposes a third choir uttered the hallelujahs—"Praise ye Jah, praise ye Jehovah;" that is, praise ye the LORD. Verse 4 is supposed to be a general chorus, in which the congregation joined, as also verses 12, 14, 18, 21. This, however, is in great measure conjectural. The chief topics of this psalm, and of the following, and, indeed, of most of the Hebrew odes, are the deliverance from Egypt and the conquest of Canaan, with the preference of the true God before the idols of the heathen. These psalms admonish us, that it is our duty to praise God for his mercy to the church, and to the world at large; but specially to record our national mercies and deliverances, of which no nation under heaven has so many to record as ours. When the heart of man is in a suitable frame for praise, it can never want for topics, and all our temporal mercies will insensibly lead a pious mind to the blessings of redemption and eternal life.

"He for his people needful food provides.

Guards all their blessings, all their steps he guides;

Through snares and dangers safely leads them on

To endless bliss, and his own heavenly throne;

May praise perpetual to the God of heaven,

For his eternal grace and truth be given."—Simon Browne.

PSALM CXXXVI. Ver. 1—26. A general exhortation to praise God for his mercies.—The words, "for his mercy endureth for ever," which are repeated as the chorus to every verse of this psalm, were used by the Israelites in their daily worship; (1 Chron. xvi. 41;) by Solomon, at the dedication of the temple; (2 Chron. vii. 3, 6;) by Jehoshaphat, on the advice of a prophet, when he went out to engage the combined armies of the Ammonites and Moabites, (2 Chron. xx. 21.) and by their descendants, on laying the foundation of the end of each verse; and it was doubtless composed on the same occasion. It seems evidently to have been a responsive song; the first part of the verse being probably sung by the Levites, and the burden by the people.—Bagster.

Ver. 5. By wisdom made, &c.—[In the contrivance of the celestial bodies—in their specific gravities, relations, connexions, influences on each other, revolutions, &c.; and in the wonderful adaptation of the atmosphere for the purposes of refracting the light, forming rain, dew, snow, &c., are exhibited the most astonishing displays of the Divine wisdom.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Moon and stars.—[The sun is the monarch of day, the state of light; the moon of the night, the state of darkness. The rays of the sun falling on the atmosphere, are refracted and diffused over the whole of the hemisphere of the earth immediately under its orb; while those rays of that vast luminary which, because of the earth's smallness in comparison of the sun, are diffused on all sides beyond the light, falling on the opaque disc of the moon, are reflected back on the lower hemisphere, or the part of the earth opposite the sun. But the reflected light being 50,000 times less in intensity than that of the sun, there is a sufficient distinction between day and night, though each is ruled and determined by one of these two great lights.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. But overthrew.—(Exod. xiv. 27, 28; xv. 4.) The various events named in this psalm have been repeatedly referred to.

22 Even a heritage unto Israel his servant: for his mercy endureth for ever.

23 Who remembered <sup>o</sup> us in our low estate: for his mercy endureth for ever:

24 And hath redeemed us from our enemies: for his mercy endureth for ever.

25 Who <sup>p</sup> giveth food to all flesh: for his mercy endureth for ever:

26 O give thanks unto the God of heaven: <sup>q</sup>or his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXXXVII.

1 The constancy of the Jews in captivity. 7 The prophet curseth Edom and Babel.

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down; yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.

2 We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

3 For there they that carried us away captive required of us <sup>a</sup> a song; and they that <sup>b</sup> wasted <sup>c</sup> us required of us mirth, saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion.

4 How shall we sing the LORD's song in a <sup>d</sup> strange land?

5 If <sup>e</sup> I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.

6 If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer <sup>f</sup> not Jerusalem above <sup>g</sup> my chief joy.

7 Remember, O LORD, the children of Edom in the day of Jerusalem; who said, <sup>h</sup> Raze it, raze it, even to the foundation thereof.

8 O daughter of Babylon, who <sup>i</sup> art to be destroyed; happy shall he be, that <sup>k</sup> rewardeth thee as thou hast served us.

o Ps. 32, 36.
Lu. 1:48.
p Ps. 145, 15.
a the words of a song
b laid us on heaps.
c Ps. 79, 1.
d land of a stranger.
e Da. 6, 10, 11.
f Ps. 84, 10.
g the head of my joy h make bare
i Is. 13, 1, &c.
Re. 18, 6.
j wasted.
k recompenseth unto thee thy deed which thou didst to us.

l rock.
a Is. 42, 21.
b Is. 66, 1, 2
1 Pe. 5, 5.
c Mt. 7, 8, 9.
d Phil. 1, 6.
1 Th. 5, 24.
e Ja. 17, 10.
Re. 2, 23.

9 Happy shall he be, that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against <sup>l</sup> the stones.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

1 David praiseth God for the truth of his word. 4 He prophesieth that the kings of the earth shall praise God. 7 He professeth his confidence in God.

A Psalm of David.

I WILL praise thee with my whole heart: before the gods will I sing praise unto thee.

2 I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving-kindness and for thy truth: for <sup>a</sup> thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name.

3 In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me with strength in my soul.

4 All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O LORD, when they hear the words of thy mouth.

5 Yea, they shall sing in the ways of the LORD: for great is the glory of the LORD.

6 Though <sup>b</sup> the LORD be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly: but the proud he knoweth afar off.

7 Though <sup>c</sup> I walk in the midst of trouble, thou wilt revive me: thou shalt stretch forth thy hand against the wrath of mine enemies, and thy right hand shall save me.

8 The LORD will perfect <sup>d</sup> that which concerneth me: thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever: forsake not the works of thine own hands.

PSALM CXXXIX.

1 David praiseth God for his all-seeing providence, 17 and for his infinite mercies. 19 He denieth the wicked. 23 He prayeth for sincerity.

To the chief Musician, a Psalm of David.

O LORD, thou hast searched <sup>a</sup> me, and known me.

second temple. (Ezra viii. 11.) Praise is as necessary as prayer; and it is impertinent continually to supplicate the divine Being for new mercies, without thanking him for those which we already have received.

On this psalm, Henry will furnish us with two or three pertinent remarks. 1. God's mercies to his people are thus repeated and drawn out from the beginning to the end, with a progress and advance ad infinitum, (i. e. to infinity.) 2. In every favour received, we ought to notice the mercy of God, as the same now that it always has been. 3. That the everlasting continuance of God's mercy is equally to his honour and to his saints' comfort. 4. We must give thanks to God, not only because he does good to us, but also because he is good in himself; the streams must be traced to the fountain; and he is the fountain of all mercy.

"Let us, with a joyful mind,
Praise the Lord, for he is kind;
For his mercies shall endure,
Ever faithful, ever sure."—Milton.

PSALM CXXXVII. Ver. 1—9. The lament of the Israelites in Babylon. "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down—we wept."—"What an inexpressible pathos is there in these few words! (says Bishop Horne.) How do they at once transport us to Babylon, and place before our eyes the mournful situation of the Israelitish captives! Driven from their native country, stripped of every comfort and convenience, in a strange land, among idolaters, wearied and broken hearted, they sit in silence by those hostile waters. Then the pleasant banks of Jordan present themselves to their imagination; the towers of Salem rise to view; and the sad remembrance of much-loved Zion causes tears to run down their cheeks." Their harps untuned hung pendent on the willows which bordered the Euphrates; and their cruel masters, who had probably heard much of their native melodies, required of them a song, even "one of the songs of Zion." But can they sing the Lord's song in a foreign land?—the praises of Jehovah to infidels and idol-worshippers? Ah no! say they; and imprecate upon themselves the loss of limbs, or of speech, if ever they should forget their country, their city, or their God. Nay,

Ver. 25. Who giveth food.—[He who, in his gracious and universal providence, furnishes suitable food for the support and preservation of every intellectual and animal being. The appointing every living thing that sort of food which is exactly suited to its nature, desires, and necessities, (and the nature and habits of animals are endlessly diversified,) and a different kind of aliment adapted to its various stages of life, or the different periods of its growth, is an overwhelming proof of the wonderful wisdom, providence, and goodness of God; and calls for the loudest songs of gratitude and praise.]—Bagster.

PSALM CXXXVIII. [The author of this beautiful and affecting elegy is unknown; but the occasion is evident; and it was most probably composed during, or near the close of, the captivity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. Rivers of Babylon.—[These "rivers of Babylon" may have been the Tigris and Euphrates, or their branches; or the streams that flowed into them. In their captivity and dispersion, it was customary for the Jews to hold their religious meetings on the banks of rivers, (Ac. xvi. 13.) and sometimes they built their synagogues here, when expelled from the cities.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Willows.—[Willows were so plentiful at Babylon, on the banks of the Euphrates, that Isaiah calls it "the brook or river of willows;" and Sir farther, they appear to rejoice in anticipating the destruction of their enemies, the Edomites, as well as Babylonians; for it appears by the prophet Obadiah, (ver. 10,) that the Edomites, though akin to Israel, rejoiced in their overthrow; and, as it is here expressed, encouraged their enemies to raze the foundations of their city.

How terrible soever may be the judgments of God on Babylon, there is no doubt but they are "just and righteous," for so are all the ways of the Almighty. (Rev. xv. 3, 4; xvi. 5.) But let us turn our attention for a moment to the weeping sufferers, who are now involved in a more dreadful judgment for the rejection of their Saviour, and drop a prayer and a tear over them.

"O weep for those that wept by Babel's stream,
Whose shrines are desolate, whose land a dream;
Weep for the harp of Judah's broken shell; Mourn—where their God hath dwelt the goddess dwell."—Byron.

PSALM CXXXVIII. Ver. 1—8. David prophesieth the conversion of the Gentiles.—To this psalm is prefixed the name of David, with which the internal evidence agrees. God had now fulfilled his promise of giving him the kingdom; and this fidelity to his word, David considers more honourable to the divine character than the displays of mere power or wisdom. And this made such an impression upon his mind, that it was the subject of his conversation, even among kings and princes. (See Psalm cxix. 46.) From this circumstance he is led forward, in prophetic vision, to anticipate the period when they also shall know and praise Jehovah, and, instead of gross and cruel idolaters, become the "nursing fathers" of the church. (Isa. xlix. 23.)

We notice the last verse particularly, because of its containing a most important doctrine, and its practical improvement. God's promises of persevering grace have been often abused, to the neglect of practical religion; but every inference that such grace shall be afforded to those who are not anxious to persevere, is a horrid perversion of this truth. David, while he adores the perpetuity of divine mercy, prays for its continuance, and no longer than we do this, are we authorized to expect it.

PSALM CXXXIX. Ver. 1—24. The psalmist acknowledges

R. K. Porter, says, "Its banks were hoary with reeds, and the gray osier willows were yet there, on which the captives of Israel hung up their harps, and while Jerusalem was not, refused to be comforted."—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Required of us a song.—Ps. cxv. 5. "Thy marvellous works," is in the Hebrew, "The words of thy marvels."—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Let my tongue cleave.—That is, let me be speechless. See Job xxix. 10. Ezek. iii. 26.

Ver. 7. Raze it—i. e. the foundation: level it to the ground.
Ver. 8. Who art to be destroyed.—By the divine decree, Is. xlii. 1, &c. Or, as Almsworth reads it, "Who art (worthy) to be destroyed." So Rev. xvi. 8.

PSALM CXXXVIII. (Five MSS. omit edapha; and the LXX. and Arabic prefix also the names of Haggai and Zechariah.)—Bagster.

Ver. 1. Before the gods.—That is, "rulers,"—See Ps. lxxxi. 6, 7.

Ver. 2. Above all thy name.—Or, "Thou hast magnified thy name, (even) thy word, above all."—Bishop Horne.

PSALM CXXXIX. [This Psalm is supposed to have been composed by David when made king of Israel; though some think it was written by him when accused of traitorous designs against Saul. It is a most sublime ode on the

2 Thou <sup>b</sup> knowest my downsitting and my uprising, thou <sup>c</sup> understandest my thought afar off.

3 Thou <sup>d</sup> compassest my path and my lying down, and art acquainted with all my ways.

4 For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O LORD, thou <sup>e</sup> knowest it altogether.

5 Thou hast beset me behind and before, and laid thy hand upon me.

6 Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it.

7 Whither <sup>f</sup> shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?

8 If <sup>g</sup> I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in <sup>h</sup> hell, behold, thou art there.

9 If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;

10 Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.

11 If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me.

12 Yea, the darkness <sup>i</sup> hideth not from <sup>j</sup> thee; but the night shineth as the day: <sup>k</sup> the darkness and the light are both alike to thee.

13 For thou hast possessed my reins: thou hast covered me in my mother's womb.

14 I will praise thee; for I am fearfully and wonderfully made: marvellous are thy works; and that my soul knoweth <sup>l</sup> right well.

15 My <sup>m</sup> substance was not hid from thee, when <sup>n</sup> I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.

16 Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book <sup>o</sup> all my members were written, <sup>p</sup> which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.

17 How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great <sup>q</sup> is the sum of them!

18 If I should count them, they are more in

b 2 Ki. 6.12

19.27.

c Mat. 9.4

Jn. 2.24, 25

d or, winnowest.

e He 4.13.

f Je. 23.54.

Jo. 1.3.

g Am. 9.2.4

h Job 26.6.

Pr. 15.11.

i darkeneth.

j Da. 2.22.

k as in the darkness,

so is 'the light.

l greatly.

m or,

strength,

or, body.

n Job 10.8, 9.

o all of them.

p or, what days they should be fashioned.

q Ps. 40.5.

r 2 Ch. 19.2.

s way of pain, or,

grief.

1 Ch. 4.10.

a man of violences.

b Ro. 3.13.

c Je. 18.22.

d or, let them not be called into number than the sand: when I awake, I am still with thee.

19 Surely thou wilt slay the wicked, O God: depart from me therefore, ye bloody men.

20 For they speak against thee wickedly, and thine enemies take thy name in vain.

21 Do <sup>r</sup> not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee? and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee?

22 I hate them with perfect hatred; I count them mine enemies.

23 Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts:

24 And see if there be any <sup>s</sup> wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting.

PSALM CXL.

1 David prayeth to be delivered from Saul and Doeg. 8 He prayeth against them. 12 He comforteth himself by confidence in God.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

DELIVER me, O LORD, from the evil man: preserve me from the <sup>t</sup> violent man;

2 Which imagine mischiefs in their heart; continually are they gathered together for war.

3 They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent; adders' poison <sup>u</sup> is under their lips. Selah.

4 Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked; preserve me from the violent man; who have purposed to overthrow my goings.

5 The proud have hid a snare <sup>v</sup> for me, and cords; they have spread a net by the way-side; they have set gins for me. Selah.

6 I said unto the LORD, Thou art my God: hear the voice of my supplications, O LORD.

7 O God the Lord, the strength of my salvation, thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.

8 Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked: further not his wicked device; <sup>w</sup> lest they exalt themselves. Selah.

God's omniscience, and appeals to it for his integrity.—We know this psalm to be David's. A good man, who knows the deceitfulness of the human heart, will often feel the necessity of appealing to God to search and try his heart, that he may be relieved from the most dangerous of all errors, self-deception.

Various and beautiful is the imagery here employed to describe the divine omniscience. He considers, first, the human mind, and attributes to the divine Being a knowledge of its cogitations before man has time to utter them. Then he looks to God's omnipresence, which extends to the farthest part of the eastern continent, or the western sea; which descends at once to the abyss of hell, and rises to the highest heavens, where he keeps his throne, in light unapproachable. He next adverts to the secret formation of the human fœtus, embroidered, as here described, with veins and nerves, so as to form one of the most wonderful works of God. Its members, as it were, written, or delineated, before the eye of the Creator, before one of them was formed. Though anatomy, like other studies, has been much abused, few are calculated to discover more of the infinite wisdom of our Maker. We are indeed "fearfully (or awfully) and wonderfully made." Though the Jews did not practise the anatomy of man, yet their priests could not be ignorant of animal anatomy, and consequently not wholly so of the structure of the human frame, whose formation they seem to have contemplated, not only with admiration, but with a kind of awe; as they did fire in the bowels of the earth, or lightning in the elaboratory of the clouds.

When the psalmist exclaims, "How precious are thy thoughts concerning me, O God!" we are inclined to consider him as engaged in contemplating his own being as the result of divine benevolence as well as power; as having occupied the friendly, as well as inscrutable thoughts of God. He considers himself, whether waking or sleeping, as equally the subject of divine providence; and, however far his dreaming thoughts might wander from the contemplation of his Maker "when I awake (says he) I am still with thee."

Was it not from this sense of his perpetual connexion with the Deity, that David proposes to keep himself at such a distance from "blood-thirsty men;" that is, from Pagan idolaters, who almost universally delighted in offering human sacrifices. These men he considers as his enemies, because they were God's enemies; he hates them because they hate his God; and he bids them keep at a distance from him, from a conviction that God would destroy them, and from a fear of being involved in the same ruin: so the children of Israel withdrew from Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. (See Num. xvi. 26, 27.)

The psalm concludes with another appeal to God, to search and try him, and if there were in him any deceit and falsehood, to "lead" him "in the way of life everlasting."

"Searcher of hearts, my thoughts review;
With kind severity pursue,
Through each disguise, thy servant's mind.
Guide thro' the eternal path my feet,
And bring me to thy blissful seat."—Bishop Louth.

PSALM CXL. Ver. 1—13. David prays for deliverance from his enemies.—The burden of this psalm resembles that of several others. He is beset by implacable and restless enemies, and calls upon God for deliverance from them. If by "the head" of these, as Ainsworth supposes, Ahithophel were intended, it fixes the time and occasion to be that of Absalom's wisdom, knowledge, presence, and justice of God; the sentiments are grand, the style highly elevated, and the images various, beautiful, and impressive.—B.

Ver. 3. Thou compassedst—i. e. sittest all my actions and motives.

Ver. 4. For . . . not a word in my tongue.—Ainsworth, "When the speech is not (yet) in my tongue."

Ver. 6. Such knowledge.—Rather, "The (or this) knowledge," &c.

Ver. 8. If I ascend.—This thought is amplified by the prophet Amos, ch. ix. 2—4.

Ver. 9. Wings of the morning.—[Light has been proved, by many experiments, to travel at the astonishing rate of 194,188 miles in one second of time; and comes from the sun to the earth, a distance of 95,513,794 miles, in eight minutes and nearly twelve seconds! But could I even fly upon the wings or rays of the morning light, which diffuses itself with such velocity over the globe from east to west, instead of being beyond Thy reach, or by this sudden transition be able to escape Thy notice, Thy arm could still at pleasure prevent or arrest my progress, and I should still be encircled with the immensity of Thy essence. The sentiment in this noble passage is remarkably striking, and the description truly sublime.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Thou hast possessed—Or, "formed." Bishop Horne.—Covered me.—That is, with flesh and skin. Job x. 11.

Ver. 14. I am fearfully and wonderfully made.—That is, so wonderfully made, as to impress on his mind an awful sense of the majesty of his Creator.

Ver. 15. My substance.—The Hebrew means, the solid parts of the body, particularly the bones. Eccles. xi. 5.—Curiously wrought.—[Urkamitee, "embroidered," or "wrought as with a needle," referring to the external covering of the human body, the various implication of muscles, tendons, veins, arteries, fibres, membranes, nerves, and the inexpressible texture of the whole frame; as the word rendered substance, otzme, does to the bony skeleton, the foundation of the whole. The process in the gradual formation of the fœtus is beautifully compared to that in a piece of work wrought with a needle, which, with all its variety of colour, and proportion of figure, is gradually brought to perfection, under the hand of the artist, according to the pattern lying before him, from a rude mass of silk, or other material.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. My substance.—Ainsworth, "Embryo;" not the same word as in the verse preceding.

PSALM CXL. Ver. 3. They have sharpened—"They vibrate their tongues" Bishop Horsley.—Adder's poison.—The poison of asps. See note on Psalm lvi. 4.

Ver. 4. To overthrow my goings.—Ainsworth, "Footsteps."

9 As for the head of those that compass me about, let the mischief of their own lips cover them.

10 Let <sup>e</sup> burning coals fall upon them: let hem be cast into the fire; into deep pits, that they rise not up again.

11 Let not <sup>f</sup> an evil speaker be established in the earth: evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him.

12 I <sup>g</sup> know that the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted, and the right of the poor.

13 Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name: the upright shall dwell in thy presence.

PSALM CXLI.

1 David prayeth that his suit may be acceptable, 3 his conscience sincere, 7 and his life safe from snares.

A Psalm of David.

LORD, I cry unto thee: make haste unto me; give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee.

2 Let my prayer be <sup>a</sup> set forth before thee as <sup>b</sup> incense; and the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice.

3 Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips.

4 Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practise wicked works with men that work iniquity: and <sup>c</sup> let me not eat of their dainties.

5 Let the righteous smite me; <sup>d</sup> it shall be a kindness: and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head: for yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities.

6 When their judges are overthrown in stony places, they shall hear my words; for they are <sup>e</sup> sweet.

7 Our bones are scattered at the grave's mouth, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth.

8 But mine eyes are unto thee, O God the

e Ps. 11.6.

f a man of anger, or an evil speaker, a wicked man of violence, be established in the earth: let him be hunted to his overthrow.

g 1 Ki. 3.45.

a directed.

b Re. 5.8.

c Pr. 23.6.

d or, kindly, prove me: let not their reproach break my head.

e 2 Sa. 23.1.

f make.

g bare.

h Pr. 13.14.

i pass over.

a or, A Psalm of David, giving instruction.

b 1 Sa. 22.1.

c Ps. 62.8.

102. title.

d Ps. 143.4.

e Ps. 140.5.

f or, look on the right hand and see.

g Ps. 69.20.

h perished from me.

i sought after.

j Ps. 46.1.

k Ps. 73.26.

l La. 3.24.

m Ro. 8.33, 37.

n Ps. 146.7.

o Is. 61.1.

p Ps. 13.6.

q 119.17.

Lord: in thee is my trust; <sup>f</sup> leave not my soul <sup>g</sup> destitute.

9 Keep me from the snares <sup>h</sup> which they have laid for me, and the gins of the workers of iniquity.

10 Let the wicked fall into their own nets, whilst that I withal <sup>i</sup> escape.

PSALM CXLIH.

David sheweth that in his trouble all his comfort was in prayer unto God.

<sup>a</sup> Maschil of David; a Prayer when he was in the <sup>b</sup> cave.

I CRIED unto the LORD with my voice; with my voice unto the LORD did I make my supplication.

2 I poured out <sup>c</sup> my complaint before him; I showed before him my trouble.

3 When <sup>d</sup> my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou knewest my path. In <sup>e</sup> the way wherein I walked have they privily laid a snare for me.

4 <sup>f</sup> I looked <sup>g</sup> on my right hand, and beheld, but there was no man that would know me: refuge <sup>h</sup> failed me; no man <sup>i</sup> cared for my soul.

5 I cried unto thee, O LORD: I said, Thou art my <sup>j</sup> refuge and my portion <sup>k</sup> in the land of the living.

6 Attend unto my cry; for I am brought very low: deliver me from my persecutors; for they are stronger <sup>l</sup> than I.

7 Bring my soul out of <sup>m</sup> prison, that I may praise thy name: the righteous shall compass me about; for thou shalt deal bountifully <sup>n</sup> with me.

PSALM CXLIH.

1 David prayeth for favour in judgment. 3 He complaineth of his griefs. 5 He strengtheneth his faith by meditation and prayer. 7 He prayeth for grace, 9 for deliverance, 10 for sanctification, 12 for destruction of his enemies.

A Psalm of David.

HEAR my prayer, O LORD, give ear to my supplications: in thy faithfulness answer me, and in thy righteousness.

rebellion, one of the most distressing periods of David's life; and yet it is observable he never complains of him, but lays all the blame on his confederates or advisers. Whether he had ground for this, or whether he was wholly blinded by his fond partiality for that worthless youth, we need not inquire: it may be more useful to remark, that our bitterest trials often arise out of our fond partialities. David made an idol of him, and Providence made him his tormentor. We are delivered from idols of wood and stone, O let us beware of making idols of flesh and blood!

PSALM CXLI. Ver. 1-10. David prays to be kept from temptation.—The learned Peters considers this psalm to have been composed by David, "just before his flight to Achish, king of Gath, when he had a second time spared Saul's life, but could trust him no longer." (See 1 Sam. xvi. and xvii. 1, 2.) And this idea is adopted by Bishop Horne. At a distance from the tabernacle and its ordinances, he entreats that his own prayer may be accepted, instead of the offering up of incense, and as the evening sacrifice. Taking refuge among idolaters, he prays that a guard might be set over his lips, that he might say nothing that could give countenance to their crimes, and especially, that he might be kept from eating of their sacrifices, which he calls their "dainties," and which, no doubt, were the richest delicacies of their tables, and attended with plentiful libations of their choicest wines. And are there not many among us, that have reason to pray against the like temptation, from the dainties of some professing Christians?

Ver. 9. As for the head.—That is, the chief; perhaps Ahithophel.—Let the mischief of their own lips cover them.—Or, The mischief . . . shall cover them. [As rosh, rendered head, also signifies poison, especially that of serpents, which is collected in their heads, some render, "The poison of those that compass me about, even the mischief of their own lips shall cover them." (See ver. 3.) All the verbs in this passage are in the future tense.]—Bagster.

PSALM CXLI. Ver. 4. To practise wicked works.—Peters, "To attempt enterprises in wickedness, with, &c." See margin. But we prefer the text.—It shall be an excellent oil.—Dr. Boothroyd here properly inserts the comparative as, which must necessarily be understood.—For yet my prayer shall be in their calamities.—Peters and Horne, "Against their wickedness." So Ainsworth.

Ver. 6. When their judges, &c.—We confess we can make no intelligible sense of this version; but Peters and Bishop Horne read, "Their judges have been dismissed from the sides of the rock;" and heard my words that they were sweet. [Or rather, "Their judges have been dismissed, nishmeto, among (or in the sides of) the rocks, and have heard my words, that they were sweet;" referring to David's generous treatment of Saul in the cave of Engedi, and among "the rocks of the wild goats," when they heard him expostulate with him in a manner so mild and humble, that even Saul "lift up his voice and wept." 1 Sa. xxiv. 1.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Our bones are scattered, &c.—Peters renders this somewhat differently. "Like as when one cutteth and cleaveth, (so) have our bones been scattered on the earth, at the command of Saul." This is supposed to allude

Another passage meriting our remark, is the salutary nature of friendly reproof—"let the righteous smite me," instead of a deadly stroke, it shall be as precious oil, which instead of breaking, shall salubriate and refresh my head. The sixth and seventh verses require a different translation, as in our notes. We need not wonder at some difficulties in writings of 3000 years old. The conclusion is, however, easy and practical. In all our difficulties, our eyes should be directed to God, who will not leave the soul destitute that trusts in him.

PSALM CXLIH. Ver. 1-7. Prayer, the psalmist's resource in trouble.—This is a prayer of David "when he was in the cave;" most probably of Adullam, whither he fled when in danger, both from Saul and from the Philistines. (1 Sam. xxii. 1.) He was then, doubtless, in a state of utter destitution and of extreme danger; when, at times, he was probably obliged to escape alone and unattended, and when snares were literally laid to entrap his feet, as for the beasts of the forest. Then he "cried unto the Lord;" as he elsewhere says, "This poor man cried, and the Lord heard, and delivered him out of all his troubles." (Psalm xxiv. 6.)

"Come, magnify the Lord with me;
Come, let us all exalt his name;
I sought th' eternal God, and he Has not expos'd my soul to shame."—Watts.

PSALM CXLIH. Ver. 1-12. A Prayer of David for pardon and grace.—Notwithstanding the manner in which David to the massacre of the priests at Nob, (65 persons) by Doeg the Edomite, under the command of Saul, whose name signifies the grave, or hell.

Ver. 10. Let the wicked fall (Peters and Horne, "the wicked shall fall," &c.) into deep pits.—Bishop Horsley, "Into the chasms (of the yawning earth)" alluding to the punishment of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, Num. xvi. 31-35. So Parkhurst,—"Whilst that I withal escape.—Peters, "And I shall still escape," avoid their snares.

PSALM CXLIH. David was twice in great peril in caves: on one occasion, in the cave of Adullam, when he fled from Achish king of Gath; and on another, in the cave of Engedi, where he had taken refuge from the pursuit of Saul. It is not certain to which of these events this psalm refers; though probably to the former.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. I cried.—Bishop Horne, "I will cry." The Hebrew language having no present tense, frequently uses the preter and future promiscuously for it: Bishop Horne therefore renders this psalm wholly in the present tense, except the two first verses: but the general current of translators, from Ainsworth to Boothroyd, render it as ours have done, and we think justly; for we consider it as a recollection of the substance of the prayers which he offered to God while in the cave, though it is not to be supposed that he had the opportunity there to write them.

Ver. 4. I looked on my right hand.—See margin. But we prefer the text.

Ver. 7. Bring my soul out of prison.—That is, the cave in which he was environed.—Shall compass me about—That is, surround me with congratulations.

PSALM CXLIH. [The LXX., Vulgate, Ethiopic, and Arabic, state that this

2 And enter not <sup>a</sup> into judgment with thy servant: for <sup>b</sup> in thy sight shall no man living be justified.

3 For the enemy hath persecuted my soul; he hath smitten my life down to the ground; he hath made me to dwell in darkness, as those that have been long dead.

4 Therefore is my spirit overwhelmed within me; my heart within me is desolate.

5 I remember the days of <sup>c</sup> old; I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands.

6 I stretch forth my hands unto thee: my soul thirsteth <sup>d</sup> after thee, as a thirsty land. Selah.

7 Hear me speedily, O LORD: my spirit faileth: hide not thy face from me, <sup>e</sup> lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause me to hear thy loving-kindness in the <sup>f</sup> morning; for in thee do I trust: cause me to know the way <sup>g</sup> wherein I should walk; for I lift up my soul unto thee.

9 Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies: I <sup>h</sup> flee unto thee to hide me.

10 Teach <sup>i</sup> me to do thy will; for thou art my God: thy spirit is <sup>j</sup> good: lead me into the land <sup>k</sup> of uprightness.

11 Quicken <sup>l</sup> me, O LORD, for thy name's sake: for thy righteousness' sake bring my soul out of trouble.

12 And of thy mercy cut off mine enemies, and destroy all them that afflict my soul: for I am thy servant.

PSALM CXLIV.

1 David blesseth God for his mercy both to him and to man. 5 He prayeth that God would powerfully deliver him from his enemies. 9 He prometh to praise God. 11 He prayeth for the happy state of the kingdom.

A Psalm of David.

BLESSED be the LORD my <sup>a</sup> strength, which teacheth my hands to <sup>b</sup> war, and my fingers to fight:

2 My <sup>c</sup> goodness, and my fortress; my high tower, and my deliverer; my shield, and he in whom I trust; who subdueth my people under me.

(like Job) maintains his own integrity, it is abundantly evident that he looked not to be saved by his own merits, but by the mercy of God, and through the future sacrifice of the Messiah. "In thy sight (says he) shall no man living be justified;" which words are quoted by St. Paul, in his celebrated Epistle to the Romans, (chap. iii. 20.) in favour of the Christian doctrine of salvation by faith alone, (i. e. without any claim of merit on our part;) indeed, nothing can be more inconsistent, than to plead our own merits while we pray for mercy.

There are few of David's psalms, in which he does not complain of enemies, many of them arising from the eminence of his situation, and others sent as the punishment of his sins. (2 Sam. xii. 10.) Our situation may be materially different from his, but there are none of us without our enemies, against which we have the need of divine aid; but especially do we need the teaching and quickening influence of God's Holy Spirit, for which the psalmist here prays—

"Teach me to do thy holy will,
And lead me to the heav'nly hill;
Let the good Spirit of thy love Conduct me to thy courts above."—Watts.

PSALM CXLIV. Ver. 1—15. Another Psalm of David, uniting prayer and praise.—Calmet and others think, with much probability, that this psalm was composed by David after the death of Absalom; and from a collation of it with Ps. xviii. in which the same ideas and form of expression occur, there can be no doubt of both having proceeded from psalm was composed by David on the rebellion of his son Absalom; and there are several passages in it which agree remarkably well with that period: for then he had most reason to fear lest God should deal with him according to his sins; which he deprecates with such a deep sense of his unworthiness, that it has hence been numbered among the penitential psalms, of which it is the last. In it he prays to God for pardon, ver. 1; acknowledges the impossibility of being saved but by grace, ver. 2; deplors the lamentable effects of sin, ver. 3; comforts himself with a retrospect of God's mercies of old, ver. 5; and prays, in a variety of expressions, for remission of sin, sanctification, and redemption, ver. 6, 12.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. As those that have been long dead—Ainsworth, "Dead for ever," or "of old;" the giants of the antediluvian world. See note on Job xxvi. 5.

Ver. 6. My soul thirsteth.—[My soul pants after Thy grace and mercy, as the parched ground gasps for the refreshing shower, to impart beauty and fertility to the face of the earth.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. I flee unto thee, &c.—See margin. Ainsworth, "Unto thee I fly for or etc."

a Job 14.3.

b Ex. 34.7.
Ps. 130.3.
Ec. 7.20.
Ro. 3.20.
Ga. 1.16.

c Ps. 77.5, 11

d Ps. 63.1.

e or, for I am become
Ps. 88.4.

f Ps. 30.5.

g Ps. 73.24.

h Hide me with thee.

i Mi. 4.2.

j 1 Ju. 2.27.

k Ne. 9.20.

l La. 26.10.

m Hab. 3.2.

n Ep. 2.1.

o rock.

p Ps. 13.2, 31.

q La. 45.21.

r the war.

s or, mercy.

t d. or, mercy.

u d. or, mercy.

v d. or, mercy.

w d. or, mercy.

x d. or, mercy.

y d. or, mercy.

z d. or, mercy.

aa d. or, mercy.

ab d. or, mercy.

ac d. or, mercy.

ad d. or, mercy.

ae d. or, mercy.

af d. or, mercy.

ag d. or, mercy.

ah d. or, mercy.

ai d. or, mercy.

aj d. or, mercy.

ak d. or, mercy.

al d. or, mercy.

am d. or, mercy.

an d. or, mercy.

ao d. or, mercy.

ap d. or, mercy.

aq d. or, mercy.

ar d. or, mercy.

as d. or, mercy.

at d. or, mercy.

au d. or, mercy.

av d. or, mercy.

aw d. or, mercy.

ax d. or, mercy.

ay d. or, mercy.

az d. or, mercy.

ba d. or, mercy.

bb d. or, mercy.

bc d. or, mercy.

bd d. or, mercy.

be d. or, mercy.

bf d. or, mercy.

bg d. or, mercy.

bh d. or, mercy.

bi d. or, mercy.

bj d. or, mercy.

bk d. or, mercy.

bl d. or, mercy.

bm d. or, mercy.

bn d. or, mercy.

bo d. or, mercy.

bp d. or, mercy.

bq d. or, mercy.

br d. or, mercy.

bs d. or, mercy.

bt d. or, mercy.

bu d. or, mercy.

bv d. or, mercy.

bw d. or, mercy.

bx d. or, mercy.

by d. or, mercy.

bz d. or, mercy.

ca d. or, mercy.

cb d. or, mercy.

cc d. or, mercy.

cd d. or, mercy.

ce d. or, mercy.

cf d. or, mercy.

cg d. or, mercy.

ch d. or, mercy.

ci d. or, mercy.

cj d. or, mercy.

3 <sup>e</sup> LORD, what is man, that thou takest knowledge of him! or the son of man, that thou makest account of him!

4 Man <sup>f</sup> is like to vanity: his days are as a shadow that passeth away.

5 Bow <sup>g</sup> thy heavens, O LORD, and come down: touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.

6 Cast forth lightning, and scatter them: shoot out thine arrows, and destroy them.

7 Send thy <sup>h</sup> hand from above; rid me, and deliver me out of great waters, from the hand of strange children;

8 Whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood.

9 I will sing a new song unto thee, O God: upon a psaltery and an instrument of ten strings will I sing praises unto thee.

10 It is he that giveth <sup>i</sup> salvation unto kings: who delivereth David his servant from the hurtful sword.

11 Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood:

12 That our sons may be as <sup>j</sup> plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, <sup>k</sup> polished after the similitude of a palace:

13 That our garners may be full, affording <sup>l</sup> all manner of store: that our sheep may bring forth thousands and ten thousands in our streets:

14 That our oxen may be <sup>m</sup> strong to labour; that there be no breaking in, nor going out; that there be no complaining in our streets.

15 Happy <sup>n</sup> is that people, that is in such a case: yea, <sup>o</sup> happy is that people, whose God is the LORD.

PSALM CXLV.

1 David praiseth God for his fame, 8 for his goodness, 11 for his kingdom, 14 for his

David's Psalm of praise.

I WILL extol thee, my God, O king; and I will bless thy name for ever and ever.

the same pen, and that David was the author. Bishop Horne supposes it was composed soon after he ascended the throne, when he was deeply engaged in military affairs, in which, as he had the sanction of the Almighty, so was he authorized in looking to him for wisdom to direct him, and for strength to support him; in addition to which he implores the aid of storm and tempest, which on former occasions had been afforded to Israel against their enemies. (1 Sam. vii. 10.)

David then goes on to pray for national prosperity; that the youth might shoot up like plants—strong and hale; that the maidens might be furnished with every attractive accomplishment; that their granaries might be filled with corn, and their pastures with sheep; their oxen, or bullocks, strong to labour, and no complaining in the streets for want of work or food. "The psalmist concludes," as is remarked by Bishop Horne, "with pronouncing the happiness of the Israelites, when in the state of prosperity above described, and their far greater happiness in 'having Jehovah for their God,' who, by settling them in peaceful possession of the land of Canaan and the Jerusalem below, gave them a pledge and foretaste of that love, which stood engaged by covenant to bring them and us to his everlasting rest in the Jerusalem above."

"O happy we, while thus our race
The signals of thy love shall grace!
O blest the people that in thee,
Their God and faithful guardian see!"—Merrick.

PSALM CXLV. Ver. 1—21. David praises God for what he

Ver. 10. Thy spirit is good, lead me, &c.—Or, "Let thy good spirit lead me."—Ainsworth and Horne.

PSALM CXLV. Ver. 2. My goodness.—"Mercy;" i. e. the source of it: but there seems great probability that we should read with the Syriac, "My fortress," as in Ps. xviii. 1, the words being very similar in Hebrew. So Dr. Durell and Boothroyd.—"My people"—The peoples; i. e. his enemies. See Durell and Boothroyd.

Ver. 12. As corner stones.—[Or, "as corner pillars wrought after the form of those of a palace;" that is, in the fittest and best proportions, combining strength, symmetry, and beauty. No comparison can be more delicate.]—B.

Ver. 13. In our streets.—[As streets are by no means fit or usual places for sheep to bring forth their young, we should render dechotzothaimoo, with Michaelis and others, "in our open pastures," or "fields," as it is translated in Job v. 10.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. No breaking in, &c.—Bishop Lowth, "No irruption, no captivity, and no outcry in our streets."

PSALM CXLV. Title—A hymn. This is the same word which, in the 2 Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.

3 Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised; and <sup>a</sup> his greatness is <sup>b</sup> unsearchable.

4 One generation shall praise thy works to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts.

5 I will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty, and of thy wondrous <sup>c</sup> works.

6 And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts: and I will declare <sup>d</sup> thy greatness.

7 They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness, and shall sing of thy righteousness.

8 The LORD <sup>e</sup> is gracious, and full of compassion; slow to anger, and <sup>f</sup> of great mercy.

9 The LORD is good <sup>g</sup> to all: and his tender mercies are over all his works.

10 All thy works shall praise thee, O LORD; and thy saints shall bless thee.

11 They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power;

12 To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

13 Thy kingdom is <sup>h</sup> an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

14 The LORD upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down.

15 The eyes of all <sup>i</sup> wait upon thee; and thou givest them their meat in due season.

16 Thou <sup>k</sup> openest thy hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing.

17 The LORD is righteous in all his ways, and <sup>l</sup> holy in all his works.

18 The LORD is high unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth.

19 He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he also will hear their cry, and will save them.

20 The LORD preserveth all them that love <sup>m</sup> him: but all the wicked will he destroy.

a of his greatness there is no search.
b Ro. 11. 33.
c things or, words.
d it.
e Nu. 14. 18.
f great in.
g Na. 1. 7.
h a kingdom of all ages.
i Da. 2. 44.
j look unto.
k Ps. 104. 28.
l or, merciful, or, bountiful.
m Ex. 20. 6.

n Re. 5. 13.
a Hallelu-jah.
b Ps. 103. 1.
c Ps. 104. 33.
d Is. 2. 22.
Je. 17. 6, 7.
e or, exaltation.
f Ec. 12. 7.
g Re. 14. 7.
h Lu. 1. 53.
i Ps. 68. 6.
107. 14.

j Mat. 9. 30.
Jn. 9. 6.
&c.
1 Pe. 2. 9.
k Ps. 147. 6.
Lu. 13. 13.
l Pr. 15. 25.
m Job 5. 12, 13.
Pr. 4. 19.
a Ps. 92. 1.
b De. 30. 3, 4.
c Is. 61. 1.
d griefs.

21 My mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD: <sup>n</sup> and let all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLVI.

<sup>1</sup> The psalmist voweth perpetual praises to God. <sup>3</sup> He exhorteth not to trust in man. <sup>5</sup> God, for his power, justice, mercy, and kingdom, is only worthy to be trusted.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup> ye the LORD. Praise <sup>b</sup> the LORD, O my soul.

2 While <sup>c</sup> I live will I praise the LORD: I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.

3 Put <sup>d</sup> not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no <sup>e</sup> help.

4 His breath goeth forth, he <sup>f</sup> returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.

5 Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the LORD his God:

6 Which <sup>g</sup> made heaven, and earth, the sea, and all that therein is: which keepeth truth for ever:

7 Which executeth judgment for the oppressed: which giveth food to the <sup>h</sup> hungry. The LORD looseth <sup>i</sup> the prisoners:

8 The LORD <sup>j</sup> openeth the eyes of the blind: the LORD raiseth them <sup>k</sup> that are bowed down: the LORD loveth the righteous:

9 The LORD preserveth the strangers; he <sup>l</sup> relieveth the fatherless and widow: but the way of the wicked he <sup>m</sup> turneth upside down.

10 The LORD shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLVII.

<sup>1</sup> The prophet exhorteth to praise God for his care of the church, 4 his power, 6 and his mercy: 7 to praise him for his providence: 12 to praise him for his blessings upon the kingdom, 15 for his power over the meteors, 19 and for his ordinances in the church.

PRAISE ye the LORD: for it is <sup>a</sup> good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant; and praise is comely.

2 The LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts <sup>b</sup> of Israel.

3 He <sup>c</sup> healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their <sup>d</sup> wounds.

4 He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names.

is in himself, and to his people.—This and the following psalms contain pure unmingled praises, without any alloy of complaint or mourning.

"The 'greatness' of Jehovah, whether we consider it as relating to his essence or his works, is never to be fully comprehended by his saints, whose delight it is to contemplate 'the breadth, and length, and depth, and height,' (Ephes. iii. 18.) the extent and duration of his being and his kingdom; the profundity of his counsels, and the sublimity of his power and glory. These are the inexhaustible subjects of divine meditation transmitted from age to age. And as the greatness of God our Saviour hath no bounds, so his praises should have no end; nor should the voice of thanksgiving ever cease in the church. As 'one generation' drops it, 'another' should take it up, and prolong the delightful strain, till the sun and the moon shall withdraw their light, and the stars fall extinguished from their orbits." (Bishop Horne.)

"The tender mercies" of God "are over all his works," and especially every species of intelligent and even sentient creatures: for "he openeth his hand, and satisfieth the desire of every living thing." (ver. 16.) This tender mercy of God, however, must not be abused or trifled with; nor must we suppose that impotence or obstinate rebellion will always go unpunished. "Thinkest thou, O man! . . . that thou shalt escape the judgment of God? Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance, and long-suffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance? but after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds!" (Rom. ii. 4—6.)

PSALM CXLVI. Ver. 1—10. The Psalmist exhorts all men to praise God.—This psalm, and the four following, both begin and end with "Hallelujah," and might, therefore, have formed another great Hallel. (See expos. Ps. cxiii.) The time and occasion of this psalm are not certainly known, but the sense is easy and incontrovertible. The great lessons here inculcated are, the vanity of man and the folly of trusting in him; the power and goodness of God, and the safety of confiding in his promises. Man is vain, and his breath is fleeting. We have seen men of the most restless ambition, full of schemes of aggrandizement, and surrounded with flatterers, cut off in a moment, and sent down to the silent dust. Their breath and their soul have at once departed; the former to evaporate in air; the latter to appear before "God the judge of all," whose reign, like his Being, is for ever and ever, and knows no change. "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God."

"Happy the man whose hopes rely,
On Israel's God: he made the sky,
With earth and seas, and all their train,
And none shall find his promise vain."—Watts.

PSALM CXLVII. Ver. 1—20. Farther exhortations to praise God.—Of all the duties of religion, praise is the most "pleasant;" and certainly nothing can be more becoming creatures dependant as we are for every breath we draw, and especially when it is considered that we are sinners who have forfeited all the blessings which we enjoy. "Praise is comely for the up-

Ver. 4. His breath.—See Isa. ii. 22. Ainsworth, "His spirit." So Boothroyd.

PSALM CXLVII. [This Psalm is ascribed to Haggai and Zechariah, in the LXX., Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Number of stars.—[The fixed stars, in general, are considered to be innumerable suns, similar to that in our system, each having an appropriate number of planets moving round it; and, where they are in great abundance, they form primaries and secondaries, i. e. suns and Dr. Herschel supposes that this must be the case in the milky way, the volving about suns; and they form primaries and secondaries, i. e. suns and stars being there in; and that this must be the case in the milky way, the proof: On August 22, 1792, he found that, in 41 minutes, not less than 258,000 stars had passed through the field of view in his telescope! What must God be who has made, governs, and supports so many worlds, and who "tellethe the number of the stars; and calleth them by name!"—Bagster.

plural, is applied to the whole book of psalms, Tehillim. This is also one of the psalms called alphabetical, but defective in the verse which should begin with the letter Nun; but this verse is supplied by the LXX. between verses 13 and 14; viz. "The Lord is faithful in all his words; and holy (or merciful) in all his works." The same verse is found also in the Syriac, Vulgate, Arabic, Ethiopic, and at least one MS., and there could be no danger in supplying it, as the sentiment repeatedly occurs in this book of psalms.

Ver. 14. All that be bowed down—Bent double, as it were, with grief or trouble. See Ainsworth. So Ps. cxlvi. 8.

PSALM CXLVI. [This Psalm, and the four following, which end the book, are supposed to have been sung at the dedication of the second temple. In the LXX., Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic, this is attributed to Haggai and Zechariah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Put not your trust, &c.—See Ps. cxviii. 6, 7

5 Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding <sup>f</sup> is infinite.

6 The Lord lifteth up the meek: he casteth the wicked down to the ground.

7 Sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving; sing praise upon the harp unto our God:

8 Who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains.

9 He giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens <sup>h</sup> which cry.

10 He delighteth not in the strength of the horse: he taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man.

11 The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy.

12 Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

13 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

15 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

16 He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar-frost like ashes.

17 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: who can stand before his cold?

18 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

19 He showeth his word unto Jacob, his statutes <sup>p</sup> and his judgments unto Israel.

20 He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM CXLVIII.

1 The psalmist exhorteth the celestial, 7 the terrestrial, 11 and the rational creatures to praise God.

PRAISE ye the Lord. Praise ye the Lord from the heavens: praise him in the heights.

2 Praise ye him, all his angels: praise ye him, all his hosts.

3 Praise ye him, sun and moon: praise him, all ye stars of light.

4 Praise him, ye heavens of heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens.

e of his understanding there is no number.

f Ia.40.28.

g Pa.25.9. Mat.5.5. I Pa.3.4.

h Job.38.41. Mat.6.28.

i Is.62.4. Mat.3.16, 17.

j Pa.115.14.

k Who maketh thy border peace.

l fat of wheat. De.32.14. Pa.81.16.

m Pa.107.20.

n De.33.3.4. Ro.3.2.

o words.

p Mat.4.4.

q De.4.32. 34.

a Hallelu-jah.

b Pa.103.20.

c I Ki.9.27. 2 Co.12.2.

d Ge.1.1. &c.

e Is.43.20.

f birds of wing.

g Pa.8.1. Is.12.4.

h exalted.

i Ep.2.13, 17.

a Hallelu-jah.

b Pa.100.3.

c or, with the pipe.

d Pa.147.11.

e throat.

f He.4.12.

5 Let them praise the name of the Lord: <sup>d</sup> for he commanded, and they were created.

6 He hath also established them for ever and ever: he hath made a decree which shall not pass.

7 Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons, and all deeps:

8 Fire, and hail; snow, and vapours; stormy wind fulfilling his word:

9 Mountains, and all hills; fruitful trees, and all cedars:

10 Beasts, and all cattle; creeping things, and flying fowl:

11 Kings of the earth, and all people; princes, and all judges of the earth:

12 Both young men, and maidens; old men, and children:

13 Let them praise the name of the Lord: for his name alone is <sup>h</sup> excellent; his glory is above the earth and heaven.

14 He also exalteth the horn of his people, the praise of all his saints; even of the children of Israel, a people near <sup>i</sup> unto him. Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM CXLIX.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God for his love to the church, 5 and for that power which he hath given to his saints.

PRAISE ye the Lord. Sing unto the Lord a new song, and his praise in the congregation of saints.

2 Let Israel rejoice in him that <sup>b</sup> made him: let the children of Zion be joyful in their king.

3 Let them praise his name <sup>c</sup> in the dance: let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp.

4 For <sup>d</sup> the Lord taketh pleasure in his people: he will beautify the meek with salvation.

5 Let the saints be joyful in glory: let them sing aloud upon their beds.

6 Let the high praises of God be in their <sup>e</sup> mouth, and a two-edged <sup>f</sup> sword in their hand;

7 To execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people;

8 To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron;

9 To execute upon them the judgment writ-right," even for angels; but its obligation on pardoned sinners is infinite.

From the second verse of this psalm, it has been supposed that it was written after the return from captivity: "The Lord doth build up Jerusalem;" but the chief topics of the psalm refer to the general providence of God. His wisdom is displayed in his knowledge, and government of the heavenly bodies, the regulation of the seasons, the feeding of the lower creation; but, above all, in the distribution of his holy word, among his favourite nation; and this brings the subject home to our own country, to our own times, and to our own bosoms. "He hath showed his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any (other) nation," except our own.

PSALM CXLVIII. Ver. 1-14. A chorus of universal praise.—All the creatures of God in heaven and earth, animate or inanimate, sensual or intellectual, are here called upon to praise their Maker: and do they praise him? Most assuredly. The heavenly bodies? Yes: as Addison beautifully expresses it—

"For ever singing as they shine,
The hand that made us is divine."

The inhabitants of the earth? Yes: even storms and monsters. "Kings of the earth, and all people?" Most assuredly it is their duty; and if they neglect it, "dragons and all deeps" may shame them; for sinners are the only beings in God's creation chargeable with ingratitude. But may we mingle our praises with the celestial hierarchy? And why not? Are we not fellow-creatures? Before the great Eternal Being all shrink into insignificance, as the flame of an expiring taper before the meridian sun.

Rational creatures are, however, the only ones capable of design or enjoyment in the work; and music is given to man that he may participate in the employ of angels:

"Angels and men, assisted by this art,
May sing together, though they dwell apart."—Waller.

PSALM CXLIX. Ver. 1-9. Praise to God for the victories of his church.—The two great topics of this psalm are the victories of God's church, and the happy consequences that are to follow, which may be interpreted in reference to either the Old dispensation or the New. In reference to the former, we are necessarily reminded of the warlike means by which the Canaanites were to be subdued, and the glory and prosperity to which Israel were to be raised; but this we do not find accomplished till the reign of Solomon, when the nation was advanced to the highest glory, and sat and sung at their ease at the sacrificial feasts in honour of Jehovah. In referring these verses to the New Testament dispensation, we must give to the rally supposed to be the drops of rain frozen in their passage through the atmosphere; compared to morsels from the solid form the hail-stones assume.]—Bagster.

PSALM CXLVIII. Ver. 7. Dragons—That is, sea monsters. See notes on Job vii. 12. Ps. xiv. 19.

PSALM CXLIX. Ver. 2. In him that made him—Ainsworth, "In his Makers." The word is certainly plural, implying more than one person in the Godhead. See Eccles. xii. 1.

Ver. 5. Upon their beds.—Our beds are so different from those of the ancients as to convey a wrong idea. They were (and still are) carpeted seats, or cushions. Bishop Horne renders this verse and the preceding in the future, like the original. So Ainsworth.

Ver. 6. A two-edged (Heb. "two-mouthed") sword.
Ver. 9. To execute the judgment written—in the New Testament, and particularly in the book of the Revelation of St. John.

Ver. 5. Is infinite—"Without number;" i. e. the things which he understandeth.—Dale.
Ver. 10. The legs of a man—Either for swiftness in running, or strength in wrestling; for both running and wrestling were practised in the armies of the ancients. Or the horse and man may be put for cavalry and infantry.

Ver. 16. Snow like wool.—Snow is a well known meteor, formed by the freezing of the vapours in the atmosphere, while descending; the particles of which being entangled, and frozen in clusters, fall down in large flakes, like wool; and, like it, by covering the face of the earth, it preserves the vegetables from the nipping, but necessary, frost, and greatly assists vegetation.—Like ashes.—Hoar-frost is the congelation of dew, in frosty mornings, consisting of an assemblage of extremely small crystals of ice, of various figures; descending softly, and almost imperceptibly, like the light ashes of wood burnt in the open air.—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Like morsels.—Korah seems to denote here hail; which is gene-

An exhortation to praise God

ten: this honour have all his saints. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CL.

1 An exhortation to praise God, 3 with all kinds of instruments.

PRAISE <sup>a</sup>ye the LORD. Praise God in his sanctuary: praise him in the firmament of his power.

2 Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness.

same images a very different interpretation. The beds of sickness, of which this passage generally reminds us, are changed into sofas of ease and enjoyment, (speaking figuratively,) and shall hereafter be changed into thrones of glory. The two-edged sword by which the victory shall be achieved, is "the word of God," (Heb. iv. 12.) The chains and fetters by which the kings and nobles among the heathen shall be bound, are the laws and institutions of Christianity. The effects produced among the Gentiles, in the first ages, by the gospel, are well known; and what we have heard and seen in our own days, in India, in Africa, and in the South Seas, is no less extraordinary; but even more so, when we consider that it was produced without miracles or the gift of tongues.

PSALM CL. Ver. 1. Firmament.—[Rakea, from raka, to spread out as the curtains of a tent, denotes vast expanse that surrounds the globe, which we call the atmosphere, the orb of atoms, and in which are formed the rains, dews, and other meteors; and probably also includes all the celestial bodies of the solar system; in all of which the almighty power of Jehovah is most eminently displayed.]—Bagster.

[THE Psalms, or Hymns, contained in this Book, have been the general song of the universal Church; and in their praise, all the Fathers have been unanimously eloquent. Men of all nations find in these compositions a language at once suitable to their feelings, and expressive of their highest joys and deepest sorrows, as well as of all the endlessly varied wishes and desires of their hearts. Whether the pious believer, is disposed to indulge the exalted sentiments of praise and thanksgiving towards the ALMIGHTY FATHER of his being; to pour out his soul in penitence or prayer; to bewail, with tears of contrition, past offences; to magnify the goodness and mercy of God; or, to dwell with ecstasy on the divine attributes of wisdom and omnipotence; the Psalms afford him the most perfect models and examples for expressing all his sentiments and feelings. "The Psalms," as Bishop Horne remarks, with equal piety and beauty, are an epitome of the Bible, adapted to the purposes of devotion. They treat occasionally of the creation and formation of the world; the dispensations of Providence and the economy of grace; the transactions of the patriarchs; the exodus of the children of Israel; their journey through the wilderness and settlement in Canaan; their law, priesthood, and ritual; the exploits of their great men, wrought through faith; their sins and captivities; their repentance and restorations; the sufferings and victories of David; the peaceful and happy reign of Solomon; the advent of MESSIAH, with its effects and consequences; His incarnation, life, passion, death, resurrection, ascension, kingdom, and priesthood; the effusion of the Spirit; the conversion of the nations; the rejection of the Jews; the establishment, increase, and perpetuity of the Christian Church; the end of the world; the general judgment; the condemnation of the wicked, and the final triumph of the righteous with their Lord and King. These are the subjects here presented to our meditations. We are instructed how to conceive of them aright, and to express the different affections, which, when so conceived of, they must excite in our minds. They are, for this purpose, adorned with the figures, and set off with all the graces of poetry; and poetry itself is designed yet farther to be recommended by the charms of music, thus consecrated to the service of God: that so delight may prepare the way for improvement, and pleasure become the handmaid of wisdom, while every turbulent passion is calmed by sacred melody, and the evil spirit is still dispossessed by the harp of the son of Jesse. This little volume, like the paradise of Eden, affords us in perfection, though in miniature, every thing that growth elsewhere, every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; and, above all, what was there lost, but is here restored,—the tree of life in the midst of the garden. That which we read, as a matter of speculation, in the other Scriptures, is reduced to practice, when we recite it in the Psalms; in those repentance and faith are described, but in these they are acted; by a perusal of the former, we learn how others served God; but, by using the latter, we serve Him ourselves. Composed upon particular occasions, but designed for general use; delivered out as services for the Israelites under the Law, yet no less adapted for the circumstances of Christians under the Gospel, they present religion to us in the most engaging dress; communicating truths, which philosophy could never investigate, in a style which poetry can never equal; while history is made the vehicle of prophecy, and creation lends all its charms to paint the glories of Redemption. Calculated alike to profit and to please, they inform the understanding, elevate the affections, and entertain the imagination. Indited under the influence of Him, to whom all hearts are known, and all events foreshown, they suit mankind in all situations; grateful as the manna which descended from above, and conformed itself to every palate. The fairest productions of human wit, after a few perusals, like gathered flowers, wither in our hands, and lose their fragrance; but these unfading plants of paradise become, as we

PSALMS.—CL.

with all kinds of instruments.

a Hallelu-fah.

b Da. 3.5, &c.

c or, cornet.

d or, pipe.

e 1Ch. 15.16, &c.

f Re. 5.13.

3 Praise him with the sound <sup>b</sup> of the <sup>c</sup> trumpet: praise him with the psaltery and harp.

4 Praise him with the timbrel and <sup>d</sup> dance: praise him with stringed instruments and organs.

5 Praise him upon the loud <sup>e</sup> cymbals: praise him upon the high sounding cymbals.

6 Let <sup>f</sup> every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CL. Ver. 1—6. The concluding psalm.—Herein the Psalmist exhorts both priests and people to praise Jehovah with all the powers of voice and instrument which they could combine. It has been said by a learned man, that, even under the Old dispensation, instrumental music was not enjoined, but was invented by David. That David invented some instruments of music is certain, (Amos vi. 5.) but we cannot give up the divine sanction to instrumental music under that dispensation, without also giving up the inspiration of David and the book of Psalms. How far we are to follow their example, this is not the place to inquire. Most certainly God is to be praised both with heart and voice; and every "thing that hath breath" is called upon to praise him.

Ver. 3. Trumpet.—"Cornet" but the same word is used of the silver trumpets. Num. x. 2, &c.

Ver. 4. Organs.—[Oogav, probably the syryn, mouth-organ, or Pan's pipe. See on Gen. iv. 21.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Cymbals.—Metal plates, probably resembling those now used in the army, which came from the East.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

are accustomed to them, still more and more beautiful; their bloom appears to be daily heightened; fresh odours are emitted, and new sweets are extracted from them. He who hath once tasted their excellences, will desire to taste them yet again; and he who tastes them oftener will relish them best."

We subjoin the following common, but very useful Table of the Psalms, classified under their several subjects, and adapted to the purposes of private devotion.

I. PRAYERS.

1. Prayers for pardon of sin, Ps. vi. xv. xxxviii. li. cxxx. Psalms styled penitential, vi. xxxii. xxxviii. li. cii. cxxx. cxlii.
2. Prayers composed when the Psalmist was deprived of the public exercise of religion, Ps. xlii. xliii. lxiii. lxxxiv.
3. Prayers in which the Psalmist appears extremely dejected, though not totally deprived of consolation, under his afflictions, Ps. xiii. xxii. lxi. lxxvi. lxxxviii. cxlii.
4. Prayers in which the Psalmist asks help of God, in consideration of his own integrity, and the uprightness of his cause, Ps. vii. xvii. xxvi. xxxv.
5. Prayers expressing the firmest trust and confidence in God under afflictions, Ps. iii. xvi. xxvii. xxxi. lv. lvi. lvii. lxi. lxxi. lxxxv.
6. Prayers composed when the people of God were under affliction or persecution, Ps. xlv. lx. lxxiv. lxxix. lxxxiii. lxxxix. xciv. cii. cxvii. cxxxvii.
7. The following are also prayers in time of trouble and affliction, Ps. iv. v. xi. xviii. xli. lv. lix. lxiv. lxx. cix. cxx. cxli. cxlii.
8. Prayers of intercession, Ps. xx. lxvii. cxxii. cxxxii. cxlv.

II. PSALMS OF THANKSGIVING.

1. Thanksgivings for mercies bestowed on particular persons, Ps. ix. xviii. xxxii. xxx. xxxiv. xl. lxxv. ciii. cviii. cxvi. cxviii. cxxxviii. cxlv.
2. Thanksgivings for mercies bestowed upon the Israelites in general, Ps. xlv. xlviii. lxx. lxxi. lxxviii. lxxxi. lxxxv. xxcvii. cv. cxxiv. cxxvi. cxxx. cxxxv. cxxxvi. cxlix.

III. PSALMS OF PRAISE AND ADORATION DISPLAYING THE ATTRIBUTES OF GOD.

1. General acknowledgments of God's goodness and mercy, and particularly His care and protection of good men, Ps. xxiii. xxxiv. xxxvi. xxi. c. ciii. cvii. cxvii. cxli. cxlv. cxvi.
2. Psalms displaying the power, majesty, glory, and other attributes of Jehovah, Ps. viii. xix. xxiv. xxxi. xxxiii. xlvii. l. lxx. lxxi. lxxv. lxxviii. xciii. xcvi. xcvi. xcvi. xcix. cx. cxiii. cxv. cxxxiv. cxxxix. cxlvii. cxlviii. cl.

IV. INSTRUCTIVE PSALMS.

1. The different characters of good and bad men—the happiness of the one, and the misery of the other, Ps. i. v. vii. ix. x. xli. xlii. xlv. xlvii. xlviii. xlv. xxxii. xxxiv. xxxvi. xxxvii. l. lii. liii. lviii. lxxii. lxxv. lxxxix. xci. xcii. xciv. cxli. cxix. cxi. cxv. cxvii. cxviii. cxix.
2. The excellence of God's law, Ps. xix. cxix.
3. The vanity of human life, Ps. xxxix. xlix. xc.
4. Advice to magistrates, Ps. lxxii. cl.
5. The virtue of humility, Ps. cxxxix.

V. PROPHETICAL PSALMS.

Ps. ii. xvi. xxii. xl. xlv. lxviii. lxxii. lxxxviii. cx. cxviii.

VI. HISTORICAL PSALMS.

Ps. lxxviii. cv. cvii.]—Bagster.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS.

OUR Preface to this book we mainly borrow from Horne's very valuable "Introduction to the Critical Study of the Scriptures."

"It seems certain that the collection called the 'Proverbs of Solomon,' was arranged in the order in which we now have it, by different hands; but it is not therefore to be concluded, that they are not the productions of Solomon, who, we are informed, composed no less than three thousand Proverbs; (1 Ki. iv. 32.) As it is nowhere said that Solomon himself made a collection of proverbs and sentences, the general opinion is, that several persons made a collection of them. Hezekiah, among others, as mentioned in the twenty-fifth chapter; Acur, Isaiah, and Ezra, might have done the same. The Jewish writers affirm that Solomon wrote the Canticles, or Song, bearing his name, in his youth; the Proverbs in his ripper years, and Ecclesiastes in his old age.

"Michælis has observed, that the Book of Proverbs is frequently cited by the apostles, who considered it as a treasure of revealed morality, whence Christians were to derive their rules of conduct; and the canonical authority of no book of the Old Testament is so well ratified by the evidence of quotations as that of the Proverbs. The scope of this book is to instruct men in the deepest mysteries of true wisdom and understanding, the height and perfection of which is the true knowledge of the divine will, and the sincere fear of the Lord. (Prov. i. 2-7; ix. 10.) To this end the book is filled with the choicest sententious aphorisms, infinitely surpassing all the ethical sayings of the ancient sages, and comprising in themselves distinct doctrines, duties, &c. of piety towards God, of equity and benevolence towards man, and of sobriety and temperance: together with precepts for the right education of children, and for the relative situations of subjects, magistrates, and sovereigns.

"The book of Proverbs may be divided into five parts.

"Part I. In the poem or exordium, containing the first nine chapters, the teacher gives his pupil a series of admonitions, directions, cautions, and exhortations to the study of wisdom. This part, says Bishop Louth, is varied, elegant, sublime, and truly poetical, and the order of the subject is, in general, excellently preserved, and the parts are very aptly connected. It is embellished with many beautiful descriptions and personifications; the diction is polished, and abounds with all the ornaments of poetry, so that it scarcely yields in elegance and splendour to any of the sacred writings.

Part II. Extends from chapter x. to xxii. 16. and consists of what may be strictly and properly called proverbs; namely, unconnected sentences, expressed with much neatness and simplicity.

Part III. Reaches from chapter xxii. 17. to xxv. inclusive; in this part the tutor drops the sententious style, and addresses his pupil as present, to whom he gives renewed and connected admonitions to the study of wisdom.

The proverbs contained in Part IV. are supposed to have been selected from some larger collection of Solomon, by the men of 'Ezekiah,' that is, by the prophets whom he employed to restore the service and writings of the Jewish church. (2 Chron. xxxi. 20, 21.) This part, like the second, consists of detached, unconnected sentences, and extends from chapter xxv. to xxxi. Some of the proverbs which Solomon had introduced into the former part of the book are here repeated.

Part V. Comprises chapters xxx. and xxxi. In the former are included the wise observations and instructions delivered by Agur, the son of Jakoh, to his pupils, Ithiel and Ucal. The thirty-first chapter contains the precepts which were given to Lemuel by his mother, who is supposed by some to have been a Jewish woman married to some neighbouring prince, and who appears to have been most ardently desirous to guard him against vice, to establish him in the principles of justice, and to unite him to a wife of the best qualities. Of Agur we know nothing; nor have any of the commentators offered so much as a plausible conjecture respecting him.

The Proverbs of Solomon afford a noble specimen of the didactic poetry of the Hebrews; they abound with antithetic parallels; for this form is peculiarly adapted to adages, aphorisms, and detached sentences. Much, indeed, of the elegance, acuteness, and force, which are discernible in Solomon's wise sayings, is derived from the antithetic form, the opposition of diction and sentiment. Hence a careful attention to the parallelism of members will contribute to remove that obscurity in which some of the proverbs appear to be involved."

CHAPTER I.

1 The use of the proverbs. 7 An exhortation to fear God, and believe his word. 10 To avoid the enticings of sinners. 20 Wisdom complaineth of her contempt. 24 She threateneth her contemners.

THE proverbs <sup>a</sup> of Solomon the son of David, king of Israel;

2 To know wisdom and instruction; to perceive the words of understanding;

3 To <sup>b</sup> receive the instruction of wisdom, justice, and judgment, and <sup>c</sup> equity;

4 To give subtlety to the simple, <sup>d</sup> to the young <sup>e</sup> man knowledge and <sup>f</sup> discretion.

5 A wise <sup>g</sup> man will hear, and will increase learning; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels:

6 To understand a proverb, and <sup>h</sup> the interpretation; the words of the wise, and their dark <sup>i</sup> sayings.

7 ¶ The fear of the LORD <sup>j</sup> is the <sup>k</sup> beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction.

8 My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

9 For they <sup>l</sup> shall be an <sup>m</sup> ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck.

10 ¶ My son, if sinners entice thee, consent <sup>n</sup> thou not.

11 If they say, Come with us, let us lay wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause:

CHAP. I. Ver. 1–33. Title of the book—The Address of Wisdom.—A proverb, with us, is universally understood to be "a short sententious maxim," or observation; but the original Hebrew term includes the idea of poetry; and the proverbs of the first ages were certainly in this form, and also frequently enigmatical, or "dark sayings." The object of a proverb is to convey instruction in a manner best calculated to impress the memory and the heart.

After this short introduction, Wisdom addresses the reader as her son, and begins with laying down "the fear of God" as the foundation of all moral virtue, and all true wisdom. Obedience to parents is next insisted upon, and the wisdom of the ancients was, in no point, probably, so decided, as in maintaining their parental character and authority.

The next point of advice is, to avoid evil company; in all ages and countries the most fatal snare of young men, who are the persons here addressed, as females were seldom liberated from the apartment of the mother till they married. The advice here given, however, presents us with a sad picture of the state of society in those early times, since it was found

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. The proverbs.—Hebrew, Mashalim, from Mashal: "which (says Bishop Lowth) I take to be the word properly expressive of the poetical style. . . . It includes three forms, or modes of speech; the sententious, the figurative, and the sublime." The first part of the book before us, (including the nine first chapters,) says this great critic, "is varied, elegant, sublime, and truly poetical."

Ver. 2. To know wisdom.—"For knowing, . . . for perceiving," &c. Drs. Durell and B. Hodgson; Dr. Boothroyd and Holden, to the same effect. Though there be some difficulty in the construction, there is no doubt but the meaning is, that Solomon's proverbs were written for the purpose of conveying religious moral, and political knowledge.

Ver. 4. To give subtlety.—Holden, "Prudence;" Hodgson and Boothroyd, "Discernment."

Ver. 6. And its interpretation.—See margin. As words are accumulated

To this very judicious and perspicuous account and brief analysis of the book, we shall only subjoin a few brief hints, from the excellent "Preliminary Dissertation" of the Rev. Geo. Holden, M. A. prefixed to his New Translation of that book.

Mr. H. remarks that the Asiatics have, in all ages, concentrated their moral and political wisdom in certain aphorisms, which have been generally admired by other nations: that the early Greeks adopted a similar method, as witness the Sayings of the Seven Wise Men of Greece, the Golden Verses of Pythagoras, &c.; and they were copied by the Romans and other western nations, unless we rather conclude that this was a dictate of nature equally obvious to all.

On the Proverbs of Solomon, we have offered a remark or two in our notes subjoined to the first chapter, and would only add, that as it does not appear that Solomon was the collector of his own Proverbs, so neither is it certain that they were all written or uttered about the same period. Most of the detached aphorisms were probably delivered by him at the time when the fame of his wisdom drew together "all the kings of the earth to witness it." (2 Ch. ix. 23.) Some, however, seem to be so much the result of his experience, that we are inclined to date them not long prior to the composition of his Ecclesiastes. On the other hand, as he "spoke three thousand proverbs," of which we have not much above eight hundred, we think it highly probable that many of the aphorisms in the books of Ecclesiastes and Wisdom were really his, though preserved only in a Greek translation in the Apocrypha.

In Holden's remarks on the difficulties and obscurities of the Book of Proverbs, we thank him for his manly and judicious protest, against correcting and expounding Hebrew words by means of the Arabic; except only in cases where all other means of information fail, either from the Hebrew itself, or the most ancient versions.

It is but justice to subjoin, that we have made considerable use of Holden's Translation and Notes, which we have compared with that of Dr. Bernard Hodgson, with the more recent version of Dr. Boothroyd, the Paraphrase of Bishop Patrick, the Lectures of Bishop Lowth, and other authors of celebrity.

A. M. 3004.
B. C. 1000.

a 1 Ki.4.32.
Ec.12.9.

b c.2.1,9.

c equities.

d c.9.4,&c.

e Ps.119.9.

f or, advice.

g or, an eloquent speech.

h Ps.49.4.

i 73.2.

j or, princpal part.

k adding.

l Ep.5.11.

m Ps.1.1.

n Ps.119.

o eyes of every thing that hath a wing.

p Hab.2.9.

q wisdoms,

that is, excellent wisdom.

r c.8.1,&c.

Jn.7.37.

s Joel.2.23.

La.11.13.

12 Let us swallow them up alive as the grave; and whole, as those that go down into the pit:

13 We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoil:

14 Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse:

15 My son, walk <sup>m</sup> not thou in the way with them; refrain <sup>n</sup> thy foot from their path:

16 For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.

17 Surely in vain the net is spread in the <sup>o</sup> sight of any bird.

18 And they lay wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their <sup>p</sup> own lives.

19 So, <sup>q</sup> are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain; which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

20 ¶ <sup>r</sup> Wisdom <sup>s</sup> crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets:

21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates: in the city she uttereth her words, saying,

22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorers delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?

23 Turn you at my reproof: behold, I <sup>t</sup> will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you.

necessary to caution young men, seemingly not of the lowest class, against uniting with a banditti who lived by plunder and by violence. Ver. 11 to 14 contain the enticements of these profligates, and the following verses, Wisdom's advice not to yield to their persuasion.

In ver. 20, Wisdom assumes a higher tone, takes her stand in public ways, in the streets, in the markets, and at the gates of the city, that she may address all who pass through them; charges and commands them to turn back from the paths of sin and folly, and warns them of the consequences of persisting in their vicious courses.

Such appears to be the primary sense of the address; but as the Son of God has dignified the character of Wisdom by personifying it, the language here used will generally apply itself to him, and to those who speak in his name; and the awful threatenings added, should guard us all, not only against vice and violence, but against the infidelity, whether open or secret, of all who do not choose the fear of the Lord as the foundation of their knowledge, and their spring of action. From the 24th verse to the close, is set forth the great principle in the preceding verses, to express the different branches of wisdom and knowledge, so as to guard us, that the different words here used are intended to embrace the various kinds of composition which come within the general term Mashalim, or proverbs.

Ver. 12. Alive . . . as the grave, &c.—Is here not an allusion to an earthquake? See Psalm lv. 15. and note. Or is it a proverbial speech; as we often say of a great army meeting a very small one, they are "enough to eat them up?"

Ver. 19. So are the ways.—This verse is confessedly very obscure; the sense seems to be, that those who plot against the lives of others, endanger and often lose their own, either in the attempt or afterwards, by the vengeance of their relatives, or the law. There are also many other ways in which those who seek unlawful gain bring on themselves destruction, as by over exertion or the encountering unnecessary peril in the attempt.

24 ¶ Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;

25 But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof:

26 I<sup>a</sup> also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh;

27 When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you.

28 Then<sup>a</sup> shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me:

29 For that they hated<sup>a</sup> knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the LORD:

30 They would none of my counsel: they despised all my<sup>a</sup> reproof.

31 Therefore<sup>a</sup> shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices.

32 For the<sup>a</sup> turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

33 But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil.

CHAPTER II.

<sup>1</sup> Wisdom promiseth godliness to her children, 10 and safety from evil company, 20 and direction in good ways.

MY son, if thou wilt receive my words, and hide<sup>a</sup> my commandments with thee;

2 So that thou incline<sup>b</sup> thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thy heart to understanding;

3 Yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and<sup>a</sup> liftest up thy voice for understanding;

4 If thou seekest her as<sup>a</sup> silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures;

5 Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God.

6 For<sup>a</sup> the LORD giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.

7 He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly.

8 He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way<sup>a</sup> of his saints.

9 Then<sup>a</sup> shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path.

10 ¶ When wisdom entereth into thy heart and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul;

<sup>1</sup> Is 65.12

<sup>2</sup> Ec 1.15

<sup>3</sup> Zec 7.11

<sup>4</sup> Lu 14.24

<sup>5</sup> Ge 6.3

<sup>6</sup> Job 27.9

<sup>7</sup> Is 1.15

<sup>8</sup> Je 11.11

<sup>9</sup> Ec 1.12

<sup>10</sup> Ec 8.18

<sup>11</sup> Mi 3.4

<sup>12</sup> Job 21.14

<sup>13</sup> Ec 6.23

<sup>14</sup> Je 2.19

<sup>15</sup> 6.19

<sup>16</sup> z or, ease.

<sup>17</sup> a Pa 119.11

<sup>18</sup> b Is 55.3

<sup>19</sup> c givest.

<sup>20</sup> d Mat 13.44

<sup>21</sup> e 1 Ki 3.9, 12

<sup>22</sup> Ja 1.5

<sup>23</sup> f 1 Sa 2.9

<sup>24</sup> Jude 24

<sup>25</sup> g Pa 119.99

<sup>26</sup> h Jn 12.35

<sup>27</sup> i Ro 1.32

<sup>28</sup> j Pa 125.5

<sup>29</sup> k c.5.20

<sup>30</sup> l Mal 2.14

<sup>31</sup> m Ec 7.26

<sup>32</sup> n or, pluck- ed up.

<sup>33</sup> a Is 51.7

<sup>34</sup> Je 31.33

<sup>35</sup> b De 30.16

<sup>36</sup> 30.

<sup>37</sup> i Ti 4.8

<sup>38</sup> c years of.

<sup>39</sup> d 2 Co 3.3

<sup>40</sup> e or, suc- cess.

<sup>41</sup> f Ja 10.23

<sup>42</sup> Ro 12.16

<sup>43</sup> g medicine.

<sup>44</sup> h watering, or, moist- ening.

<sup>45</sup> i Ex 22.29

<sup>46</sup> Mal 3.10

<sup>47</sup> .12.

11 Discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee:

12 To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things;

13 Who leave the paths of uprightness, to<sup>a</sup> walk in the ways of darkness;

14 Who rejoice to do evil, and delight<sup>a</sup> in the frowardness of the wicked;

15 Whose ways are<sup>a</sup> crooked, and they froward in their paths:

16 To deliver thee from the<sup>a</sup> strange woman, even from the stranger which flattereth with her words;

17 Which forsaketh the guide of her youth, and forgetteth the covenant<sup>a</sup> of her God.

18 For her house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead.

19 None<sup>a</sup> that go unto her return again, neither take they hold of the paths of life.

20 ¶ That thou mayest walk in the way of good men, and keep the paths of the righteous.

21 For the upright shall dwell in the land and the perfect shall remain in it.

22 But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be<sup>a</sup> rooted out of it.

CHAPTER III.

<sup>1</sup> An exhortation to obedience, 5 to faith, 7 mortification, 9 to devotion, 11 to patience. 13 The happy gain of wisdom. 19 The power, 21 and the benefits of wisdom. 27 An exhortation to charitableness, 30 peaceableness, 31 and contentedness. 33 The cursed state of the wicked.

MY son, forget not my law; but let thy heart<sup>a</sup> keep my commandments:

2 For<sup>b</sup> length of days, and<sup>c</sup> long life, and peace, shall they add to thee.

3 Let not mercy and truth forsake thee. bind them about thy neck; write<sup>a</sup> them upon the table of thy heart:

4 So shalt thou find favour and good<sup>a</sup> understanding in the sight of God and man.

5 ¶ Trust in the LORD with all thy heart; and lean not<sup>a</sup> unto thine own understanding.

6 In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.

7 ¶ Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear the LORD, and depart from evil.

8 It shall be<sup>a</sup> health to thy navel, and<sup>b</sup> marrow to thy bones.

9 ¶ Honour the LORD with thy substance, and with the first-fruits<sup>a</sup> of all thine increase:

ple of retributive justice in the government of God:—that he will, in the judgment, treat men as they have in this world treated him, especially his calls of mercy and righteousness.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—22. The address of Wisdom continued, with a special caution against lewd women. The intrinsic value and importance of sound wisdom,—its origin from above,—its salutary tendencies,—and the dreadful consequences of neglecting it;—are all urged upon the young Israelite, (and no less upon the young Christian,) in order to guard him from the consequences of sin and folly.

This wisdom is bestowed by God upon man, for the express purpose of guiding him in the way of truth; for preserving him from the paths of vice and error; for his protection from the snares of strange women, and his deliverance from the ways of death and ruin. "The study of Wisdom and the practice of piety (says Dr. Boothroyd,) are the best securities against evil company, and all its snares."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—35. Wisdom exhorteth to various virtues, and directeth youth to seek divine Wisdom as their chief good.—St. James teaches us (chap. iii. 17.) that true Wisdom is "from above: pure and peaceable, gentle and easy to be en-

Ver. 32. The turning away.—[That is, probably, the turning away, or deflection, meshovach, of the simple from the paths of wisdom, rectitude, and piety, shall bring their ruin; and the ease, or security, shahvah, of fools, their listlessness and tranquility in a vicious course of life, shall end in their destruction.]—Bagster.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Hide—Holden. "Lay up." Ver. 7. Sound (or "substantial") wisdom.—Literally, doubled: an allusion, perhaps, to the doubling of cloth, to form a substantial garment. See note on Job xi. 6.

Ver. 8. He keepeth the paths of judgment.—Dr. Hodgson connects this with the preceding verse, thus: "To protect them in the paths of integrity," &c. So Boothroyd.

Ver. 16. From the strange woman.—From the term "strange (or foreign) treated; full of mercy and good fruits; without partiality, and without hypocrisy." Such is the Wisdom now before us; and the blessings that fill her hands, like those of true godliness, (which is the same thing,) include "the promises of the life that now is, and that which is to come." (1 Tim. iv. 8.)

As respects religion, the virtues inculcated are:—To trust in God and not be wise in our own conceit; to honour God by attending to the duties which his house and worship may require, and to regard his poor with tenderness and compassion; to submit with filial duty to the chastening hand of his providence, and to rest assured in the benevolence of his design.

Wisdom is now introduced as a queen of celestial rank, holding out rewards to all who seek her. "Length of days in her right hand; riches and honour in her left." Such are the sanctions of the Old Dispensation; those of the New are more spiritual and sublime. It is still true, however, that Religion has a natural tendency to promote our happiness, though a variety of circumstances may arise out of human frailty, and the depraved state of society, to counteract that tendency. She is a "tree of life," yielding perpetual food and pleasure to those who embrace and adhere to her. (See Rev. xxii. 2.)

woman" being used by the Hebrews to designate a harlot, Holden infers, that the greater number of these unhappy women originally were foreigners. If so, this will more fully account for the propensity of Israel to idolatry, and for the earnest entreaties of Solomon to caution them against them, though unhappily he himself neglected the cautions that he gave. From the following verse it will however appear, that Israelitish women were here included.

Ver. 17. The guide of her youth.—This may mean either her mother or her husband, as she may be supposed either single or married.

Ver. 18. Her paths unto the dead.—That is, the wicked dead, "the Re- phaim." See Job xvi. 5. and note.

Ver. 22. Shall be rooted out.—See margin. As decayed trees; not only "cut off," but "uprooted" from the earth.

CHAP. III. Ver. 8. Health (see margin) to thy navel.—"This comparison

10 So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.

11 ¶ My <sup>k</sup>son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction:

12 For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.

13 ¶ Happy <sup>l</sup>is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that <sup>m</sup>getteth understanding.

14 For <sup>n</sup>the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and <sup>o</sup>the gain thereof than fine gold.

15 She is more precious <sup>p</sup>than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her.

16 Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches <sup>q</sup>and honour.

17 Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are <sup>r</sup>peace.

18 She is a tree <sup>s</sup>of life to them that lay hold upon her: and happy is every one that retaineth her.

19 The Lord by wisdom <sup>t</sup>hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he <sup>u</sup>established the heavens.

20 By his knowledge the depths are broken <sup>v</sup>up, and the clouds drop down the <sup>w</sup>dew.

21 ¶ My son, let not them depart from thine eyes: keep sound wisdom and discretion:

22 So shall they be life unto thy soul, and grace to thy neck.

23 Then shalt thou walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble.

24 When <sup>x</sup>thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid: yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep <sup>y</sup>shall be sweet.

25 Be <sup>z</sup>not afraid of sudden fear, neither of the desolation of the wicked, when it cometh.

26 For the Lord shall be thy confidence, and <sup>a</sup>shall keep thy foot from being taken.

27 ¶ Withhold not good from <sup>b</sup>them to whom it is <sup>c</sup>due, when <sup>d</sup>it is in the power of thy hand to do it.

28 Say <sup>e</sup>not unto thy neighbour, Go, and come again, and to-morrow I will give; when thou hast it by thee.

Ec. 11. 1, 2. Mat. 10. 42.

k He. 12. 5. 6. Re. 3. 19.

l c. 8. 35, 36.

m draweth out.

n Ph. 3. 8, 9.

o Ps. 19. 10.

p Job 28. 13, &c.

q c. 8. 18.

r Ps. 119. 165. Mat. 11. 29.

s Ge. 3. 22, 24. Re. 22. 2.

t Je. 51. 15.

u or, prepared.

v Ge. 7. 11.

w Job 36. 27.

x Le. 26. 6.

y Ps. 127. 2.

z Ps. 112. 7.

a 1 Sa. 2. 9.

b the owners thereof.

c Ro. 13. 7.

d Ga. 6. 10.

e Le. 19. 13.

f or, Practise no evil.

g c. 25. 8.

h a man of violence.

i Ps. 25. 14.

j Zec. 5. 4.

k Job 8. 6, 7.

l Da. 12. 3.

m exalleveth the fools.

a De. 32. 2.

b 1 Ch. 29. 1.

c 1 Ch. 29. 9.

d or, she shall compass thee with a crown of glory.

29 ¶ Devise not evil against thy neighbour, seeing he dwelleth securely by thee.

30 Strive <sup>e</sup>not with a man without cause, if he have done thee no harm.

31 Envy thou not <sup>h</sup>the oppressor, and choose none of his ways.

32 For the froward is abomination to the Lord: but his secret is with the righteous.

33 ¶ The <sup>j</sup>curse of the Lord is in the house of the wicked: but <sup>k</sup>he blesseth the habitation of the just.

34 Surely he scorneth the scorners: but he giveth grace unto the lowly.

35 The wise <sup>l</sup>shall inherit glory: but shame <sup>m</sup>shall be the promotion of fools.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Solomon, to persuade obedience, 3 sheweth what instruction he had of his parents, 5 to study wisdom, 14 and to shun the path of the wicked. 20 He exhorteth to faith 22 and sanctification.

HEAR, ye children, the instruction of a father, and attend to know understanding.

2 For I give you good <sup>a</sup>doctrine, forsake ye not my law.

3 For I was my father's son, <sup>b</sup>tender and only beloved in the sight of my mother.

4 He <sup>c</sup>taught me also, and said unto me, Let thy heart retain my words: keep my commandments, and live.

5 ¶ Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth.

6 Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee.

7 Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding.

8 Exalt her, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour, when thou dost embrace her.

9 She shall give to thy head an ornament of grace: <sup>d</sup>a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.

10 Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings, and the years of thy life shall be many.

11 I have taught thee in the way of wisdom; I have led thee in right paths.

12 When thou goest, thy steps shall not be

The latter part of the chapter contains some wholesome precepts, not less obligatory upon us than upon the Jews of old:—Not to withhold a just debt, or even to refuse a charitable loan, when in our power to comply; not to injure an unsuspecting, harmless neighbour, nor, on the other hand, to envy the violent and froward man—the proud and scornful, “whom the Lord abhorreth.” The concluding verse is beautiful and pointed. The wise, however humble in this life, shall inherit glory in the next; and fools, however exalted, shall be exhibited to the contempt and execration of posterity.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1.—27. Solomon, in the character of a father, details the instructions that he had received from his own parents.—We learn, hence, two circumstances important in his history. 1. That he was the darling of both his parents, and probably gave early indications of uncommon talent. 2. That his mother, though disgraced by her first connexion with David, was not devoid of personal religion, nor deficient in parental attention to her offspring, particularly to Solomon.

(says M. Chardin) is drawn from the plaisters, &c. made use of in the East, upon the belly and stomach, in most maladies.”—Harmer.—And marrow. See margin; i. e. “It shall lubricate thy joints.”

Ver. 12. Even as a father, &c.—The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, chap. xii. 6, quotes this verse very differently. “And scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.” This is the version of the LXX., and Holden thinks the Hebrew text will bear it, with a slight alteration in the Masoretic points, which few Christians consider of divine authority. For Keab, “as a father,” he reads Kieeb, “to correct, chasten;” or, as the apostle renders it, “scourge;” for it implies to give pain, or soreness. (See Parkhurst.) For the son (in whom) he delighteth,” the LXX., and the apostle read, “every son whom he receiveth;” namely, into favour, which comes to the same meaning.

Ver. 13. The man that getteth.—See margin. “Understanding;” implying, that there is labour required in the extraction.

Ver. 15. Rubies.—The Hebrew Peninim is variously interpreted. It is not among the precious stones in Aaron's breastplate, Exod. xxxix. 10—13, nor does there seem any good authority for “rubies.” Gesenius inclines to “coral;” Bochart contends for “pearls;” Parkhurst for the native “magnet;” Holden, satisfied with neither, reads “gems.” See note on chap. viii. ver. 11.

Ver. 20. Clouds drop down the dew.—Dew is defined by Dr. Hutton “a thin, light, insensible mist, or rain, descending with a slow motion, and falling while the sun is below the horizon. It appears to differ from rain, as less from more. Its origin and matter are doubtless from the vapours and exhalations

We must not omit here to notice the beautiful delineation of the path, or conduct of the just, which, like the path of the sun, increases in splendour as it advances to its meridian, here called “the perfect day,” (ver. 18.) This sun, however, must set; but a brighter one shall rise to set no more. (Isa. lx. 19.)

“How fine has the day been, how bright was the sun, How lovely and joyful the course that he ran; Thee' he rose in a mist when his race he begun, And there followed some droppings of rain! But now the fair traveller's come to the west, His rays are all gold, and his beauties are best; He paints the sky gay, as he sinks to his rest, And foretells a bright rising again.”

“Just such is the Christian—his course he begins, Like the sun in a mist, while he mourns for his sins, And melts into tears; then he breaks out and shines And travels his heavenly way: But when he comes nearer to finish his race, Like a fine setting sun, he looks richer in grace, And gives a sure hope, at the end of his days, Of rising in brighter array.”—Watts.

that rise from the earth and water.” Like rain, it is wonderfully prepared and adapted, by an infinitely wise and gracious Providence, to invigorate and give life to the whole vegetable world. See on Ps. lxxii. 6.—Bagster.

Ver. 22. A grace.—That is, an ornament; as a necklace.

Ver. 27. Withhold not, &c.—See margin. Meaning, a just debt. Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 29. Devise not evil, &c. seeing.—We should rather here render the Vau “for,” (as frequently,) as an additional reason for not injuring him; “for” he dwelleth securely, or, “in confidence,” by thee.

Ver. 30. If he have done.—Rather, “Since he have done.” See Ezek. xxxv. 6.

Ver. 34. Surely he scorneth the scorners.—Both the apostles Peter and Paul quote this verse from the LXX., “He resisteth the proud.” James iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5, which is to the same effect; but the Hebrew is more spirited and poetical.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3. For I was, &c.—The pointing both of the Hebrew and English, seems here to require correction, as observed by Dr. Hodgson. The following is the version of Holden:

“For I was a son very dear to my father, And well beloved in the sight of my mother.”

The latter line we should rather render, “An only one,” (or darling) &c. Ver. 7. Get understanding.—Do not be contented merely with the lessons of wisdom, or satisfied with having a sound religious creed; but see that thou comprehend, and rightly apply, all that thou hast learned. Wisdom prescribes straitened; and when thou runnest, thou shalt not stumble.

13 Take fast hold of instruction; let her not go: keep her; for she is thy life.

14 ¶ Enter † not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men.

15 Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away.

16 For they sleep not, except they have done mischief; and their sleep is taken away, unless they cause some to fall.

17 For they eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of violence.

18 But † the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

19 The way of the wicked is as darkness: they ‡ know not at what they stumble.

20 ¶ My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings.

21 Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thy heart.

22 For they are life unto those that find them, and <sup>h</sup> health to all their flesh.

23 ¶ Keep thy heart † with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.

24 Put away from thee † a froward mouth, and perverse lips put far from thee.

25 Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee.

26 Ponder the path of thy feet, and <sup>h</sup> let all thy ways be established.

27 Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil.

CHAPTER V.

1 Solomon exhorteth to the ways of wisdom. 3 He sheweth the mischief of whoredom and riot. 14 He exhorteth to contentedness, liberality, and chastity. 22 The wicked are visited with their own sin.

MY son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding:

2 That thou mayest regard discretion, and that thy lips may keep knowledge.

3 ¶ For <sup>a</sup> the lips of a strange woman drop as a honey-comb, and her mouth is smoother than oil:

4 But her end is bitter <sup>b</sup> as wormwood, sharp <sup>c</sup> as a two-edged sword.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1.—23. Cautions against lewdness and adultery.—The picture of a harlot here drawn is so true to nature, that it answers in every age and country. “Her lips drop (with sweetness) as a honey-comb with honey, and though her moral taste is disordered, her words are smoother than oil.” This is, however, at the commencement of her acquaintance: the issue is a perfect contrast. “Her end,” whether we refer to the misery entailed upon herself or her lovers, “is bitter as wormwood;” and her oiled words become “sharper than a two-edged sword.” Often does the language of enticement end in reproaches, that penetrate the heart as a dagger or a sword. (See Psalm cxl. 3.)

As a remedy for lewdness, Solomon recommends marriage and a domestic life, under images the most delicate and impressive. It was necessary (if possible) for every house to have its own well, or cistern, and common sense dictated the propriety of drawing their water thence, instead of going to their neighbour’s well. This he applies to domestic enjoyments. “Draw water from thine own cistern.” Look at home for the best end, and the means best calculated for its attainment; understanding directs to the ways, times, places, and opportunities of practising the lessons of wisdom. Wisdom sees; but understanding feels.—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Eat the bread of wickedness—that is, live by violence and spoil. See chap. i. 13.

Ver. 18. Shineth more and more.—Heb. “Goeth on and shineth.” [This comparison is extremely beautiful, and the sense highly instructive. As the light first tinges the course of a good man: his knowledge, purity, and holiness, gradually increase, and the light of his pious example shines more and more, till he is exalted in the heavens to shine as a sun in the full blaze of endless felicity. But the path of the wicked, though they may amuse themselves with many glimmering meteors, is thick, gloomy darkness, a compound of ignorance, error, sin, and misery, until at length it terminates, perhaps unexpectedly to themselves, in “the blackness of darkness for ever.”—Bagster.]

Ver. 25. Let thine eyes look, &c.—That is, “pursue a straight forward course.” Compare ver. 27.

CHAP. V. Ver. 3. Her mouth.—Heb. “palate.”—is smoother than oil.—It is the property of the palate to be rough, and Parkhurst thinks it has its Hebrew name from that circumstance; a smooth palate must therefore imply a vitiated taste, which very properly applies to a woman of this character.

Ver. 5. Her steps take hold on (or “join to,” connect with) hell.—Hebrew,

“Pa. 1.1.

“Pa. 34.7.

“Ph. 2.15.

“Jn. 12.35.

“medicine.

“above all

“keeping.

“froward- “ness of

“mouth,

“and per-

“verseness

“of lips.

“or, all

“thy ways

“shall be “ordered

“aright.

“a. c. 6.94.

“b. Ec. 7.26.

“c. Ps. 55.21.

“—

“d. c. 7.27.

“e. strength.

“f. He. 13.4.

“g. Zec. 7.11,

“14.

“h. c. 1.25.

“6.23.

“13.1.

“i. Co. 7.2.

“j. Mal. 2.14.

“k. Ca. 9.9.

“7.3.8.

“l. water.

“m. err thou

“always in.

“n. 2 Ch. 16.9.

“Job 31.4.

“Je. 16.17.

“32.19.

“Ho. 17.2.

“He. 1.13.

“o. sins.

“p. Job 36.12.

“c. 10.21.

5 Her <sup>a</sup> feet go down to death; her steps take hold on hell.

6 Lest thou shouldest ponder the path of life, her ways are moveable, that thou canst not know them.

7 Hear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

8 Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her house:

9 Lest thou give thine honour unto others, and thy years unto the cruel:

10 Lest strangers be filled with thy <sup>e</sup> wealth; and thy labours be in the house of a stranger;

11 And thou mourn at the <sup>f</sup> last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed,

12 And say, How <sup>g</sup> have I hated instruction and my heart despised <sup>h</sup> reproof;

13 And have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined mine ear to them that instructed me!

14 I was almost in all evil in the midst of the congregation and assembly.

15 ¶ Drink waters out of thine <sup>i</sup> own cistern, and running waters out of thine own well.

16 Let thy fountains be dispersed abroad, and rivers of waters in the streets.

17 Let them be only thine own, and not strangers’ with thee.

18 Let thy fountain be blessed: and rejoice with the wife <sup>j</sup> of thy youth.

19 Let <sup>k</sup> her be as the loving hind and pleasant roe; let her breasts satisfy thee at all times; and <sup>m</sup> be thou ravished always with her love.

20 And why wilt thou, my son, be ravished with a strange woman, and embrace the bosom of a stranger?

21 For <sup>n</sup> the ways of man are before the eyes of the LORD, and he pondereth all his goings.

22 ¶ His own iniquities shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his <sup>o</sup> sins.

23 He <sup>p</sup> shall die without instruction; and in the greatness of his folly he shall go astray.

happiness, and prefer the affections of a virtuous wife to the embraces of many harlots. Thus shall thy streams be pure and uncontaminated: that is, thy offspring shall be numerous, certain, and legitimate; and far more likely to be virtuous than the produce of harlots, supposing they should not be barren.

Another image is introduced. The attachments of a modest woman are compared to those of the most shy and beautiful of the animal creation, the antelope or gazelle: a favourite image with Solomon, as we know by its repeated introduction into the book of Canticles. Here the young man is allowed at once to indulge his affections, and to enjoy those sweets, which indeed can here only be found without a sting. But the stings of an illicit intercourse are many. A man who spends his strength and property upon a harlot, at the same time in curs disgrace with men, and guilt with God, “who pondereth all his goings;” and though such an one may stifle the remonstrances of his conscience for a time, when he comes to the couch of sickness and to death, he will find it full of stings, and “a wounded spirit who can bear?”

Sheol, which may be taken in its double sense; for it is true that debauchery leads both to the grave, and to the punishments of another world.

Ver. 6. Her ways are moveable—that is, she is continually shifting her temptations, and changing her means of enticement.—Thou canst not know them—i. e. canst not be aware of her arts and subtuges.

Ver. 11. And thou mourn.—Hodgson. “Roar;” i. e. with distress and agony. It is translated roar, chap. xix. 12; xx. 2, &c.—Thy flesh and thy body—that is, “the flesh of thy body.” Holden.

Ver. 14. I was almost in all evil, &c.—Perhaps riotous and disorderly, both in religious and civil meetings; but Dr. Hodgson understands it as being brought before them as a criminal.

Ver. 19. The loving hind and pleasant roe.—[Ysaiah, rather the female deer or rock goat, (see on Ps. civ. 18.) which is one third less than the male, and not so capricious; colour less tawny; horns very small, and not above eight inches long; has two teats, like the tame she-goat; never has a beard, except, perhaps, in advanced age; and is particularly celebrated for tender affection to her young, whose safety she watches over with incessant vigilance, and for ardent attachment and fidelity to her mate. Hence Solomon here compares a faithful wife, i. to the hind, or female deer, accompanying its mate in the forest and in the plains, amidst verdure and fertility; and, 2, to the female deer, faithful to its associate on the mountain crags, and amidst the dangers and hardships of rocks and precipices.]—Bagster.—Satisfy.—Heb.

CHAPTER VI.

<sup>a</sup> Against suretyship, <sup>b</sup> idleness, <sup>c</sup> 12 and mischievousness. <sup>d</sup> 16 Seven things hateful to God. <sup>e</sup> 20 The blessings of obedience. <sup>f</sup> 25 The mischiefs of whoredom.

MY son, if thou be surety <sup>a</sup> for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,

2 Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth.

3 Do this now, my son, and deliver thyself, when thou art come into the hand of thy friend; go, humble thyself, <sup>b</sup> and make sure thy friend.

4 Give not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eyelids.

5 Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6 ¶ Go <sup>c</sup> to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise:

7 Which having no guide, overseer, or ruler,

8 Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest.

9 How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

10 Yet <sup>d</sup> a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

11 So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man.

12 ¶ A naughty person, a wicked man, walketh with a froward mouth.

13 He <sup>e</sup> winketh with his eyes, he speaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers;

14 Frowardness is in his heart, he <sup>f</sup> deviseth mischief continually; he <sup>g</sup> soweth <sup>h</sup> discord.

15 Therefore <sup>i</sup> shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he be <sup>j</sup> broken without <sup>k</sup> remedy.

16 ¶ These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination <sup>l</sup> unto him:

17 <sup>m</sup> A proud <sup>n</sup> look, a lying <sup>o</sup> tongue, and <sup>p</sup> hands that shed innocent blood,

18 A heart <sup>q</sup> that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet <sup>r</sup> that be swift in running to mischief, 19 A <sup>s</sup> false witness that speaketh lies, and he <sup>t</sup> that soweth discord among brethren.

20 ¶ My son, keep <sup>u</sup> thy father's command-

a c. 11. 15.
17. 18.
22. 26.
b or, so shalt thou prevail
with.
c Job 12. 7.
d c. 24. 33. 34.
e Job 15. 12.
f Is. 57. 30.
g easteth
forth.
h Ro. 16. 17.
i c. 1. 27.
j Je. 19. 11.
k 2Ch. 36. 16.
l of his soul.
m haughty eyes.
n Ps. 13. 27.
o Ps. 120. 3. 4.
Re. 22. 15.
p 2Ki. 24. 3. 4.
Is. 1. 15.
q Mi. 2. 1.
r Is. 59. 7.
s c. 19. 9.
t 3Ju. 9. 10.
u Ep. 6. 1.
v Da. 11. 18.
. 21.
w or, candle.
x Ps. 119.
105.
y strange tongue.
z Mat. 5. 23.
a c. 29. 3.
b Ge. 39. 14.
&c. c woman of a man, or a man's wife.
d Eccl. 13. 18.
e heart.
f He. 13. 4.
g Ca. 8. 6.
h accept the face of.
a c. 21. 7.
b Le. 18. 5.
Is. 55. 3.
c De. 32. 10.
d De. 6. 8.
e c. 6. 21.

ment, and forsake not the law of thy mother: 21 Bind them continually upon thy heart, and tie them about thy neck.

22 When <sup>v</sup> thou goest, it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest, it shall keep thee; and when thou awakest, it shall talk with thee.

23 For the commandment is a <sup>w</sup> lamp; and the law is <sup>x</sup> light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life:

24 To keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattery of the <sup>y</sup> tongue of a strange woman.

25 ¶ Lust <sup>z</sup> not after her beauty in thy heart; neither let her take thee with her eyelids.

26 For <sup>a</sup> by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread: and <sup>b</sup> the adulteress will hunt <sup>c</sup> for the precious life.

27 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?

28 Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned?

29 So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife; whosoever toucheth her shall not be innocent.

30 Men do not despise a thief, if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry;

31 But if he be found, he shall restore sevenfold; he shall give all the substance of his house.

32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman lacketh <sup>e</sup> understanding: he that <sup>f</sup> doeth it destroyeth his own soul.

33 A wound and dishonour shall he get; and his reproach shall not be wiped away.

34 For jealousy <sup>g</sup> is the rage of a man: therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance.

35 He will not <sup>h</sup> regard any ransom; neither will he rest content, though thou givest many gifts.

CHAPTER VII

1 Solomon persuadeth to a sincere and kind familiarity with wisdom. 6 In an example of his own experience, he sheweth the cunning of a whore, and the desperate simplicity of a young wanton. 24 He debortheth from such wickedness.

MY son, keep my words, and lay <sup>a</sup> up my commandments with thee.

2 Keep <sup>b</sup> my commandments, and live; and my law as the apple <sup>c</sup> of thine eye.

3 Bind <sup>d</sup> them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thy heart.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—35. Cautions against suretyship, idleness, and vice.—In a commercial country, where many classes of persons can get no employment without security, this may not only be an act of friendship, but even duty. Still, however, it requires great caution and prudence: 1. To know well the character and principles of the party for whom we become responsible; 2. And so to limit our responsibility, as not to ruin our own families in the attempt to serve others. But in the instance before us, we think there is a particular reference to the characters referred to in chapter v.—those gay and profligate young men who connect themselves with harlots, and get themselves entangled in their snares, as in the close of that chapter.

The next warning is to the idler and the sluggard, who is sent for a lesson of industry to the ant. She improves her time by gathering her food in its proper season,—the time of harvest: whereas the sluggard, on the contrary, sleeps away his mornings, which are the times wherein the day-labourer makes his harvest. Instead of working "while it is day," he trifles till his "night comes," either of sickness or death, when "no man can work." (John ix. 4.)

"water" thee. The Asiatics have no idea of any thing more delightful and refreshing than water. See Prov. xxv. 25.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Stricken thy hand.—[To strike, or join hands, was an ancient form of entering into contracts in all countries, and all ages. Thus Nestor complained, that the Trojans had violated the engagement which they had sanctioned by libations of wine and giving their right hands.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Go to the ant.—[The ant has been famous in all ages for its social habits, foresight, economy, and industry. Collecting their food at the proper seasons, they bite off the ends of the grain to prevent it germinating, and lay it up in cells till needed.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Provideth her meat in the summer.—It was a general opinion with the ancients, that the ants in summer provided their food for winter, because then they could not work; but it has been discovered that in these northern countries, they remain torpid during winter; this is found, however, not to be the case in hot houses, and therefore, probably, is not in those warm countries where the winters are much more mild than in Europe. There are many witnesses, however, to prove, that they lay up food in summer for future exigencies. See Taylor's Expos. Ind.

Ver. 11. As a traveller . . . an armed man—that is hastily and irresolutely.

Habits of idleness generally lead to licentiousness, and licentiousness as naturally to ruin. The latter part of the chapter pursues this subject, and compares the adulterer to one walking upon hot coals, or carrying fire in his bosom, and pertinently asks, Must not such a one be burnt? Lust is a fire that burns inwardly, and consumes the vitals. Jealousy is a flame that can only be extinguished by the most exemplary vengeance.—"Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word." (Psalm cxix. 9.)

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—27. Warning against an adulteress.—After a brief introductory address, this chapter presents us with the full-length portrait of a Jewish adulteress, in which we may observe—1. She was a gay and dressy woman; she wore the attire of a harlot, loose and gaudy; in consistency with which her bed was dressed with tapestry, and perfumed with myrrh, &c. 2. She was bold and impudent in her address, loud and stubborn in her behaviour, fond of the streets and places of public resort, "her feet abide not in her house." 3. Her lust was covered under the holy veil of matrimony, and her husband seems to have been so far deceived by her, as to

Ver. 12. A naughty person—Heb. "A man of Belial."

Ver. 19. Speaketh—Heb. "breatheth" lies.

Ver. 25. Take thee with her eyelids.—[This refers to the custom in the East of painting the eyelids with the powder of antimony, which has been already described, (see Note on 2 Kings, ix. 30.) and "which, although it adds to the vivacity of the eye, throws a kind of voluptuous languor over it, which makes it appear (if I may use the expression) dissolving in bliss."—Waring's Tour to Sheeraz.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Restore sevenfold—Make "a full and complete satisfaction and restitution."—Holden.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 2. Apple of thine eye.—[As the pupil of the eye, the hole or opening of the uveous coat, or iris, through which the rays of light pass, and falling upon the retina, there depict every object in its natural colour, as upon a piece of white paper. Now the pupil of the eye being essentially necessary to sight, and easily injured, it is not only, in common with the other parts, deeply intrenched in the skull, ramparted with the forehead and cheek bones, defended by the eyebrows, eyelids, and eyelashes, and placed so as to be best protected by the hands, but, by a wonderful mechanism, is contracted and dilated by the muscular power of the iris, without which an excess of light would cause instant blindness.]—Bagster.

4 Say unto wisdom, Thou art my sister; and call understanding thy kinswoman:

5 That they may keep thee from the strange woman, from the stranger which flattereth with her words.

6 ¶ For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,

7 And beheld among the simple ones, I discerned among the youths, a young man void of understanding,

8 Passing through the street near her corner; and he went the way to her house,

9 In the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night:

10 And, behold, there met him a woman with the attire of a harlot, and subtle of heart.

11 (She is loud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house:

12 Now is she without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.)

13 So she caught him, and kissed him, and with an impudent face said unto him, 14 "I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows.

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.

16 I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with fine linen of Egypt.

17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

18 Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning: let us solace ourselves with loves.

19 For the good man is not at home, he is gone a long journey:

20 He hath taken a bag of money with him, and will come home at the day appointed.

21 With her much fair speech she caused him to yield, with the flattering of her lips she forced him.

22 He goeth after her straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks;

23 Till a dart strike through his liver; and as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life.

e sons.

f c.5.32

9.4.16.

g c.5.9.

h evening of the day.

i .13.

j Je.3.3.

k 1 Ty.5.13.

Tit.2.5.

l she strengthened her face and said.

m peace-offerings are upon me.

n Is.19.9.

o in his hand.

p or, new moon.

q c.5.3.

r Ps.12.2.

s suddenly.

t Ec.9.12.

u Ju.16.19.

30.

Ne.13.26.

v c.5.5.

c 1.20.

9.3.&amp;c.

Is.55.1.3.

c 1 Co.1.27.

6.9.11.

d Ps.19.7.

11.

c.22.20.

e Ju.17.17.

f the abomination of

g wreathed.

h Ps.12.6.

i Mi.2.7.

J c.23.23.

k c.3.14,15.

16.16.

l Ph.3.9.

m or, subtly.

n Ps.97.10.

c.16.6.

Ro.12.9.

1 Th.5.22.

1 Ti.2.19.

o Ec.7.19.

p Da.2.21.

Ro.13.1.

24 ¶ Hearken unto me now therefore; O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth.
25 Let not thy heart decline to her ways, go not astray in her paths.

26 For she hath cast down many wounded: yea, many strong men have been slain by her 27 Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The fame, 6 and evidency of wisdom. 10 The excellency, 12 the nature, 15 the power, 18 the riches, 22 and the eternity of wisdom. 32 Wisdom is to be desired for the blessedness it bringeth.

WISDOM a not wisdom cry? and understanding put forth her voice?

2 She standeth in the top of high places, by the way in the places of the paths.

3 She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors.

4 Unto you, O men, I call; and my voice is to the sons of man.

5 O ye simple, understand wisdom: and ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart.

6 ¶ Hear; for I will speak of excellent things; and the opening of my lips shall be right things.

7 For my mouth shall speak truth; and wickedness is an abomination to my lips.

8 All the words of my mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing froward or perverse in them.

9 They are all plain to him that understand-eth, and right to them that find knowledge.

10 ¶ Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold.

11 For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.

12 ¶ I wisdom dwell with prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions.

13 The fear of the Lord is to hate evil: pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the froward mouth, do I hate.

14 Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding; I have strength.

15 ¶ By me kings reign, and princes decree justice.

16 By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.

intrust her with his house and property. He appears also to have lived in credit, and to have had a bag of money to take with him on his journey; and it is very evident from the preparation she had made for her lover, that she had no excuse of necessity for her licentiousness. 4. She affected to be religious. She had offered peace-offerings, and performed her vows; so that she had cleared (as some ignorant persons suppose) her account with heaven, and was ready to open a new score of sin. Never is sin so sinful as when dressed up in the garb of a religious profession. Her friendship was hypocritical as her religion; she pretended an intimate acquaintance and attachment; "I came diligently to seek thy face," which may be so far true—she came to look for a fool and found one. A sketch of his character follows, and the chapter concludes with the earnest entreaty of Wisdom to listen to her admonitions, and keep at a distance from the adulteress.

Ver. 6. My casement.—"Lattice work;" the window of a Kiosk.—Parvular.

Ver. 10. The attire of a harlot.—Bishop Patrick explains this, "In a gaudy lascivious dress."

Ver. 13. With an impudent face.—(In the East, their ideas of decency forbid a virtuous woman to lay aside, or even to lift up her veil, in the presence of the other sex; and she who ventures to disregard this prohibition, inevitably ruins her character, and the act is regarded as a signal for intrigue. Ptite ruins her character, and the act is regarded as a signal for intrigue. Ptite ruins her character, and the act is regarded as a signal for intrigue. Ptite ruins her character, and the act is regarded as a signal for intrigue.)

Ver. 14. I have peace-offerings.—The greater part of the peace-offerings, whether of the herd or flock, was returned to the offerer, to feast with his friends. Deut. xii. 6, 7. So Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 16. Decked my bed.—(Similarly adorned was the bed described by the Baron Du Tott, which consisted of many mattresses of quilted cotton, placed upon and covered with a sheet of Indian linen, a coverlet of green satin, adorned with gold embroidery in embossed work; two pillows of crimson satin, covered with similar embroidery, and a profusion of gold, &c.)—Bagster.

Ver. 20. At the day appointed.—See margin. Which was a public feast.

Ver. 22. As a fool to the correction of the stocks.—(Dr. Grey, making a slight alteration in the text, renders, "as a dog to the chain, and as a deer, till a dart strike through his liver;" and Dr. Hunt, "Or as a hart boundeth into the toils, till a dart strike through his liver." The LXX. Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic, concur in this interpretation. The circumstance of the dart, as ap-

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—36. Divine wisdom personified.—There are two ways in which Wisdom may be considered—as a quality conferred on man, and as an attribute inherent in the Divine Being. The wisdom personified in this chapter includes both. It must be the former which says, "I Wisdom dwell with Prudence, and find out the knowledge of witty (or, according to some, of all) inventions. By me kings reign, &c. But when the description is carried higher, and this Wisdom is represented as the companion of the Eternal, even before the creation of the world, we are constrained to consider it as an attribute of the Divine Being.

There is another view, however, in which Christian divines, of all ages, have explained this passage as referring to the Son of God himself, and as affording proof of his divinity; under this consideration, the chapter may be viewed in a light similar to the double sense of prophecy in David and in Isaiah;

plied to the deer, is beautiful and proper, which otherwise we are at a loss to dispose of; and this creature, of all others, was the most proper to be noticed on this occasion; for the usual representation which the Egyptians made of a man overthrown by flattery and fair speeches, was the picture of a hart captivated and ensnared by the sound of music.—Bagster.—But Dr. Hodgson adheres to the present reading, which he translates, "Yea, like a fool he runneth on to punishment."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 11. Rubies.—(The ruby is a beautiful gem of a red colour, with a tinge of purple, generally in the form of a six-sided prism, and when perfect extremely valuable: it is a species of sapphire, to which it is equal in hardness; and is sometimes chatoyant in its appearance, i. e. has a curious kind of reflection, like a cat's eye; and as this is particularly striking, and changes as you turn the stone, hence, perhaps, its name peridion, from perio, to turn, look. But the learned Bochart contends that it denotes pearls; the pearl is a hard, smooth, round body, of a sparkling white, formed of coats like an onion, and found in a shell-fish, like an oyster; a species of which Bruce mentions, of the name of pinna, from which is obtained a most beautiful pearl, "tinged with an elegant blush of red.")—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Witty inventions.—"Plans, or devices," Gesevius. There is no adjective answering to "witty," and Dr. Boothroyd translates, "every invention."

Ver. 14. Counsel is mine, &c.—Heb. "With me is counsel and sound wisdom; with me, understanding and strength." The word rendered sound wisdom, is quite different from "wisdom," in ver. 12; and is the same used chap. iii. 21. It strictly signifies "substance," or reality.

17 I <sup>a</sup> love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me.

18 Riches <sup>a</sup> and honour are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness.

19 My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver.

20 I <sup>a</sup> lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment:

21 That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures.

22 ¶ The <sup>a</sup> Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old.

23 I was set up <sup>a</sup> from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was.

24 When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water.

25 Before <sup>a</sup> the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth:

26 While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the <sup>a</sup> fields, nor <sup>a</sup> the highest part of the dust of the world.

27 When <sup>a</sup> he prepared the heavens, I was there: when he set a <sup>a</sup> compass upon the face of the depth:

28 When <sup>b</sup> he established the clouds above:
when he strengthened the fountains of the deep:

29 When he gave to the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment: when he appointed the foundations of the earth:

30 Then I was by him, as one brought up with him: and I <sup>a</sup> was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him;

31 Rejoicing in the habitable part of his earth; and my delights were with the sons of men.

32 ¶ Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children: for blessed are they that keep my ways.

33 Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not.

34 Blessed <sup>a</sup> is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors.

35 For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall <sup>a</sup> obtain favour of the Lord.

q 1 Sa. 2.20.

Jn. 14.21.

r Is. 45.19.

f Mat. 6.33.

t or, walk.

u Jn. 1.1,

&amp;c.

v Pa. 2.6.

w Is. 53.8.

x or, open places.

y or, chief.

z He. 1.2.

a or, circle.

b Job 38.10,

11.

Je. 5.22.

c Mat. 3.17,

Col. 1.13.

d Mat. 7.24,

Lu. 11.23.

e bring forth.

a Ep. 2.20,

22.

b Mat. 22.3,

&amp;c.

c killing.

d Ro. 10.15.

e Jn. 6.27.

f Mat. 7.6.

g Ho. 6.3,

Mat. 13.12

h Job 28.23,

Ps. 111.10,

c. 1.7.

i c. 10.27.

j Job 35.6,7,

Eze. 18.20.

k c. 7.11.

l of secre-

cies.

m c. 2.18.

36 But he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me love death.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The discipline, 4 and doctrine of wisdom. 13 The custom, 16 and error of folly.

WISDOM hath builded her <sup>a</sup> house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars:

2 She <sup>b</sup> hath killed her <sup>c</sup> beasts; she hath mingled her wine; she hath also furnished her table.

3 She <sup>d</sup> hath sent forth her maidens: she crieth upon the highest places of the city,

4 Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither: as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him,

5 <sup>e</sup> Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled.

6 Forsake the foolish, and live; and go in the way of understanding.

7 He that reproveth a scorner getteth to himself shame: and he that rebuketh a wicked man getteth himself a blot.

8 Reprove <sup>f</sup> not a scorner, lest he hate thee:
rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

9 Give <sup>g</sup> instruction to a wise man, and he will be yet wiser: teach a just man, and he will increase in learning.

10 The <sup>h</sup> fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the holy is understanding.

11 For by me thy days <sup>i</sup> shall be multiplied, and the years of thy life shall be increased.

12 If <sup>j</sup> thou be wise, thou shalt be wise for thyself: but if thou scornest, thou alone shalt bear it.

13 ¶ A foolish woman is <sup>k</sup> clamorous: she is simple, and knoweth nothing.

14 For she sitteth at the door of her house, on a seat in the high places of the city,

15 To call passengers who go right on their ways:

16 Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither:
and as for him that wanteth understanding,
she saith to him,

17 Stolen waters are sweet, and bread <sup>l</sup> eaten in secret is pleasant.

18 But he knoweth not that <sup>m</sup> the dead are there; and that her guests are in the depths of hell.

and there seems no more difficulty in considering the same description as applicable to a divine attribute and a divine person, than in explaining the same text as an historical fact in reference to David, and a divine prediction as relating to David's Son and Lord. We would caution Christians against resting their faith in Christ on such disputable evidence, when they have far more clear and certain proofs in other parts of Scripture. It is highly probable, however, that the apostle John alluded to this passage in the introduction to his gospel, where he speaks of his divine Master, under the character of the Logos: which may be rendered either the Wisdom, the Reason, or the Word of God.

If we were deeply imbued with the spirit of primitive Christianity, we should be pleased in every where finding, both in nature and revelation, some image of our Saviour's glory, though at the same time we must confess with the inimitable Watts,

"Nor earth, nor seas, nor sun, nor stars,
Nor heaven, his full resemblance bears;
His beauties we can never trace Till we behold him face to face."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1-18. Wisdom makes a feast and invites her guests.—Preserving the allegory, we should consider the house which Wisdom builded as a temple, and the pillars to be the several branches of science by which it is supported. The beasts killed intimate a great sacrifice, and the invitation given a feast upon that sacrifice; all which circumstances may direct us to the Christian church, as about to be erected, of which Jesus himself (the Wisdom of God) is the foundation, termination. He inclines, therefore, to render Amon, (as being of the common gender) "a foster child," which is the idea of our translators; "one brought up with him," faithful and steady to his interests; which is not very different from Loath's version, and in a case of so much difficulty, it may be wise to hesitate.

Holden, referring the latter verses, 22 to 30, to the Son of God, derives thence an argument for "eternal generation," as some of the fathers did; but as we are arguing upon a mystical allegory, we do not wish to rest thereon a doctrine of such magnitude.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. Wisdom.—[The infinite and eternal wisdom of God, which has so framed the universe, as to exhibit a scene of grandeur and stability; and made ample provision for the innumerable beings by which it is inhabited.]—B.

Ver. 3. Sent forth her maidens—Hasselquist mentions a number of women in Egypt, with black veils, going about to invite people to a banquet, and making a strange and clamorous noise.

Ver. 7. He that reproveth a scorner, (that is, a hardened profligate,) getteth himself shame, &c.—He will be laughed at, and reproached.

Ver. 8. Reprove not a scorner.—Upon the same principle our Lord directs us, "Cast not your pearls before swine," &c. Matt. vii. 6.

Ver. 10. Of the holy—Heb. "Holy ones," i. e. the blessed Trinity. So Holden, and Dr. J. P. Smith. Compare Dan. iv. 14.

Ver. 14. A seat.—An elevated and conspicuous seat; a throne. Pitts describes the courtisans of Grand Cairo, as sitting at their doors, or parading the streets, very richly dressed.

Ver. 17. Stolen waters—that is, illicit commerce.

Ver. 22. In the beginning—"At the beginning," Hodgson and Boothroyd; but there is no preposition in the original, which reads literally, "The Lord possessed me the beginning," &c.; intimating that wisdom was the source of all God's works.

Ver. 23. I was set up—Heb. "anointed." Apply this to divine wisdom personified, it means that she was enthroned over all the works of God.

Ver. 25. The fields.—See margin. Perhaps the atmosphere.—The highest part—namely, the hills. See Gen. i. 7. 10.

Ver. 28. His commandment—Heb. "His" (or "its") mouth." Applied to God, the pronoun means "his command;" to the sea, "its limits."—Appointed the foundations.—[The principles on which it is constructed, and the irreversible laws by which all its motions are governed, especially its centrifugal and centripetal force; by the former of which, or its tendency to recede from its great centre, it has its annual motion round the sun, like the other planets, at the mean distance of 95,513,794 miles; and by the latter, or its tendency to its centre, all its particles are prevented from flying off, notwithstanding the great velocity of its motion round its own axis, which causes 1042 miles of its equator to pass under any given point of the heavens in a single hour!]

Ver. 30. As one brought up with him.—Bishop Loath. "As his offspring." But this is a very difficult verse. Parkhurst thinks the Hebrew (Amon) should be rendered adverbially, "Then was I by him constantly." Taking it for a noun, Dr. Hodgson renders it, "companion." Boothroyd, "workman."

Holden, by the strange word "fabricator." It cannot be denied that Amon is used for a skillful (perhaps trusty) artificer, or artist, Sol. Song. vii. 2. but Gesenius objects to the application of this to wisdom, as wanting a female

CHAPTER X.

From this chapter to the five and twentieth are sundry observations of moral virtues, and their contrary vices.

THE proverbs of Solomon. A <sup>a</sup> wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.

2 Treasures <sup>b</sup> of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness <sup>c</sup> delivereth from death.

3 The <sup>d</sup> LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish: but he casteth away the <sup>e</sup> substance of the wicked.

4 He <sup>f</sup> becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: but <sup>g</sup> the hand of the diligent maketh rich.

5 He that gathereth in summer <sup>h</sup> is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest <sup>i</sup> is a son that causeth shame.

6 Blessings <sup>j</sup> are upon the head of the just: but <sup>k</sup> violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

7 The <sup>l</sup> memory of the just <sup>m</sup> is blessed: but <sup>n</sup> the name of the wicked shall rot.

8 The wise in heart <sup>o</sup> will receive commandments: but <sup>p</sup> a prating fool shall <sup>q</sup> fall.

9 He <sup>r</sup> that walketh uprightly walketh surely: but he that perverteth his ways shall be known.

10 He <sup>s</sup> that winketh with the eye causeth sorrow: but a prating fool shall <sup>t</sup> fall.

11 The <sup>u</sup> mouth of a righteous man <sup>v</sup> is a well of life: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

12 Hatred stirreth up strifes: but love covereth <sup>w</sup> all sins.

13 In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found: but a rod <sup>x</sup> is for the back of him that is void of <sup>y</sup> understanding.

14 Wise men lay <sup>z</sup> up knowledge: but the mouth of the foolish <sup>aa</sup> is near destruction.

15 The <sup>ab</sup> rich man's wealth <sup>ac</sup> is his strong city: the destruction of the poor <sup>ad</sup> is their poverty.

16 The labour of the righteous <sup>ae</sup> tendeth to life: the fruit of the wicked <sup>af</sup> to sin.

17 He <sup>ag</sup> is in the way of life that keepeth instruction: but he <sup>ah</sup> that refuseth reproof <sup>ai</sup> erreth.

a c. 15. 20.
22. 15. 16.
23. 15.
b Lu. 12. 19.
21.
c De. 4. 27.
Ph. 3. 9.
d Ps. 37. 25.
e or, wicked for their wickedness.
f c. 11. 24.
g c. 13. 4.
19. 15.
h Ec. 7. 8.
i Ps. 112. 6.
j Ec. 8. 10.
k fool of lips.
l or, be beaten.
m Is. 33. 15.
16.
n c. 6. 13.
o or, be beaten.
p Ps. 37. 30.
q 1 Co. 13. 4. 7.
r Ps. 4. 8.
s c. 26. 3.
t Mat. 12. 35.
13. 52.
u Ps. 52. 7.
Ec. 7. 12.
v 2 Pe. 1. 5.
w c. 1. 25. 30.
x or, causeth to err.
y Ec. 5. 2. 3.
Ja. 3. 2.
z heart.
aa Ge. 24. 35.
Ps. 37. 22.
ab Ps. 145. 19.
Mat. 5. 6.
ac Is. 5. 14. 15.
ad Mat. 7. 24.
25.
ae d. c. 9. 11.
af addeth.
ag Ec. 7. 17.
ah Ec. 12. 9.
ai Tit. 2. 8.
b frowardness.
c balances of deceit.
d De. 25. 13.
16.
e perfect stone.
f Da. 4. 30.
31.
g c. 13. 6.

18 He that hideth hatred <sup>with</sup> lying lips, and he that uttereth a slander, <sup>is</sup> a fool.

19 In <sup>the</sup> multitude of words there wanteth not sin: but he that refraineth his lips <sup>is</sup> wise.

20 The tongue of the just <sup>is</sup> as choice silver: the heart of the wicked <sup>is</sup> little worth.

21 The lips of the righteous feed many: but fools die for want of <sup>a</sup> wisdom.

22 The <sup>a</sup> blessing of the LORD, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it.

23 It is as sport to a fool to do mischief: but a man of understanding hath wisdom.

24 The fear of the wicked, it shall come upon him: but the desire <sup>b</sup> of the righteous shall be granted.

25 As the whirlwind passeth, so <sup>is</sup> the wicked no more: but the righteous <sup>is</sup> an everlasting foundation.

26 As vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke to the eyes, so <sup>is</sup> the sluggard to them that send him.

27 The <sup>d</sup> fear of the LORD <sup>e</sup> prolongeth days: but <sup>f</sup> the years of the wicked shall be shortened.

28 The hope of the righteous <sup>shall</sup> be gladness: but the expectation of the wicked shall perish.

29 The way of the LORD <sup>is</sup> strength to the upright: but destruction <sup>shall</sup> be to the workers of iniquity.

30 The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth.

31 The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom: but the froward tongue shall be cut out.

32 The lips of the righteous know what <sup>is</sup> acceptable: but the mouth of the wicked <sup>speaketh</sup> frowardness.

CHAPTER XI.

A <sup>a</sup> FALSE balance <sup>b</sup> is abomination to the LORD: but a <sup>c</sup> just weight <sup>is</sup> his delight.

2 When <sup>d</sup> pride cometh, then cometh shame: but with the lowly <sup>is</sup> wisdom.

3 The <sup>e</sup> integrity of the upright shall guide them: but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.

and his first ministers its pillars. The sacrifice alluded to, can be no other than the great atonement offered upon Calvary, and the sacrificial feast, that "feast of fat things" foretold by the prophets, and exhibited in the gospel, the ministers and missionaries of which answer to the servants sent forth to invite the guests. Such are the outlines of this admirable allegory, which may be filled up by referring to the parable of the marriage feast. (Matt. xxii. 2-4.)

Another character is here introduced as a contrast to the preceding, which answers to the adulteress described in chapter vii., though some think it no other than a personification of Folly in the character of a harlot, who is ignorant and clamorous, sitting on an elevated seat at the door of her house, and no less earnestly inviting the passers-by to partake of her secret and forbidden pleasures. But her sacrifices? Ah! "her guests" are themselves sacrificed—they are "in the depths of hell!"

Here then are two opposite characters soliciting our attention with great earnestness, namely, Wisdom and Folly, God and the world. O let us choose Wisdom and life, that we may live for ever!

CHAP. X. Ver. 1-32. Miscellaneous proverbs.—Here begins the second part of this book, being a collection of aphorisms more exactly answering to that title. (See note, ver. 1.) Those in this chapter relate chiefly to the difference between wisdom and folly, virtue and vice; and point out the preference of the former, both in itself and in its consequences. As these proverbs are mostly detached from each other, it will be impossible for us to notice them individually. We can only CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Proverbs of Solomon.—[Here the Proverbs of Solomon, properly so called, begin; and the parallels of which they consist, in this and several of the succeeding chapters, are those which Bishop Louth correctly calls the antithetic; when two lines, or members of a sentence, correspond with each other by an opposition of terms and sentiments; when the second is contrasted with the first, sometimes in expression, sometimes in sense only. Accordingly, the degrees of antithesis are various; from an exact contraposition of word to word, through a whole sentence, down to a general disparity, with something of contrariety, in the two propositions. In this example, every word has its opposite; for the terms father and mother are, as the logicians say, relatively opposite.]—Bagster.

offer a brief remark on some of the most striking, and remove difficulties in our notes.

Long life and prosperity were the sanctions of the Old Testament dispensation; yet the hopes of believers were not confined to the present life, for "the righteous hath an everlasting foundation," (ver. 25.) to which it is very difficult to attach any meaning without admitting "the hope of everlasting life." The days of the wicked, in the present life, are often shortened by their vices, and of "another and better world" they have no prospect. (Comp. chap. xi. 7.)

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1-31. Maxims of justice and equity.—This chapter contains many general observations on these topics, and on the means of happiness. It begins with an admonition concerning justice in our dealings with each other, without which society cannot be preserved. In the next place, the wise man gives a caution against pride, as a certain forerunner of ruin: this, showing itself in forgetfulness of God, confidence in themselves, and despising others, naturally leads men to destruction.

Solomon next commends sincerity and charity, and represents the vast difference there is between virtue and vice, both in order to men's private safety, and to the public security. After which follow many wise and pithy observations, with such remarks on sundry virtues and vices, as are calculated to invite to the one, and deter from the other. Among the most striking is, (ver. 22.) "A fair woman who has departed from discretion (or virtue) is compared to a ring of gold in as wine's snout." That is, beauty sunk into licentiousness is perverted from its just end, as a golden ring rooting in the flesh of a pig.

Ver. 2. Righteousness delivereth from death—that is, a good character is a better protection than riches.

Ver. 26. As vinegar to the teeth.—[As the acidity of vinegar causes unpleasantness and pain to the teeth, and by softening and dissolving the alkali of the bone, impairs their texture, and renders them incapable of mastication; and as smoke, by irritating the tender vessels, causes the eyes to smart, and prevents distinct vision; so a sluggish messenger is a continual vexation and loss to those by whom he is employed.]—Bagster.

Ver. 30. Not inhabitable (or "inhabited") the earth.—See Ps. xxxvii. 29, 34. CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. A just weight.—Heb. "A perfect stone;" stones were undoubtedly used originally as weights.

4 Riches <sup>r</sup> profit not in the day of wrath: but righteousness <sup>s</sup> delivereth from death.

5 The righteousness of the perfect shall <sup>b</sup> direct his way: but the wicked shall fall by his own wickedness.

6 The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them: but transgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness.

7 When a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish: and the hope of unjust men perisheth.

8 The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead.

9 A hypocrite with his mouth destroyeth his neighbour: but through knowledge shall the just be delivered.

10 When <sup>i</sup> it goeth well with the righteous, the city rejoiceth: and when the wicked perish, there is shouting.

11 By <sup>i</sup> the blessing of the upright the city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked.

12 He that is <sup>k</sup> void of wisdom despiseth his neighbour: but a man of understanding holdeth his peace.

13 A <sup>l</sup> tale-bearer revealeth secrets: but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter.

14 Where no counsel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety.

15 He that is surety for a stranger shall <sup>m</sup> smart for it: and he that hateth <sup>n</sup> suretiship is sure.

16 A <sup>o</sup> gracious woman retaineth honour: and strong men retain riches.

17 The <sup>p</sup> merciful man doeth good to his own soul: but he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh.

18 The wicked worketh a deceitful work: but to him <sup>q</sup> that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward.

19 As righteousness tendeth to life: so he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death.

20 They that are of a froward heart are abomination to the Lord: but <sup>r</sup> such as are upright in their way are his delight.

21 Though <sup>s</sup> hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished: but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered.

22 As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which <sup>t</sup> is without discretion.

f Ezr. 7.19.
Zep. 1.18.

g Ge. 7.1.

h rectify.

i Es. 8.15.

j c. 14.34.

k destitute of heart.

l he that speaketh,
being a tale- bearer.

m be sore broken.

n those that strike hands.
c. 6.1.

o c. 31.30.

p Mat. 5.7.
25.34, &c.

q Ho. 10.12.
Gal. 6.9.
Ja. 3.18.

r Ps. 11.7.

s Is. 27.4.

t departeth
from.

u Ro. 2.8.9.
He. 10.27.

v 2Co. 9.6.

w or, soul
of bless- ing.

x Is. 32.8.

y Job 29.13.

z Ma. 10.24.
1 Ti. 6.9.

a takeh.

b Mat. 4.19.
Ja. 5.20.

c Je. 25.29.
1 Pe. 4.17,
18.

a Ec. 8.8.

b Is. 25.33.
1Co. 11.7.

c Mat. 7.24
-27.

d perverse
of heart.

23 The desire of the righteous is only good: but <sup>a</sup> the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

24 There <sup>v</sup> is that scattereth, and yet in creaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty.

25 The <sup>w</sup> liberal <sup>x</sup> soul shall be made fat: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself.

26 He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him: but blessing <sup>y</sup> shall be upon the head of him that selleth it.

27 He that diligently seeketh good procureth favour: but he that seeketh mischief, it shall come unto him.

28 He <sup>z</sup> that trusteth in his riches shall fall: but the righteous shall flourish as a branch.

29 He that troubleth his own house shall inherit the wind: and the fool shall be servant to the wise of heart.

30 The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that <sup>a</sup> winneth souls <sup>b</sup> is wise.

31 Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth: much more <sup>c</sup> the wicked and the sinner.

CHAPTER XII.

WHOSO loveth instruction loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof is brutish.

2 A good man obtaineth favour of the Lord: but a man of wicked devices will he condemn.

3 A <sup>a</sup> man shall not be established by wickedness: but the root of the righteous shall not be moved.

4 A <sup>b</sup> virtuous woman is a crown to her husband: but she that maketh ashamed is as rottenness in his bones.

5 The thoughts of the righteous are right: but the counsels of the wicked are deceit.

6 The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood: but the mouth of the upright shall deliver them.

7 The <sup>c</sup> wicked are overthrown, and are not: but the house of the righteous shall stand.

8 A man shall be commended according to his wisdom: but he that <sup>d</sup> is <sup>d</sup> of a perverse heart shall be despised.

9 He that is despised, and hath a servant, is better than he that honoureth himself, and lacketh bread.

10 A righteous man regardeth the life of his CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—28. Farther miscellaneous proverbs.—“This chapter (says Bishop Patrick) begins with an admonition, often inculcated in this book, concerning the affection wherewith a man that would be wise and good, ought to receive charitable reproofs. And there are several things repeated concerning the providence of Almighty God, in punishing (bad) men according to their wickedness, and delivering good men from those who seek their destruction; which are notably expressed in ver. 5—7, where he observes how the wicked, labouring to compass their ends, by cozenage, or by violence, even by blood, not only miscarry in their designs, but are unexpectedly overturned and subverted out of their places, wherein they behaved with such injustice and cruelty.

“There are divers instructions also repeated about several virtues and vices, especially those of the tongue; among which

Ver. 4. Righteousness delivereth.—See chap. x. 2.
Ver. 7. When a wicked man, &c.—This assertion strongly implies that ‘the righteous hath hope in his death,’ as in chap. xiv. 32.
Ver. 13. A tale-bearer revealeth, &c.—See margin. Or rather, as Dr. Hodgson renders it, “A tale-bearer, walking about, revealeth secrets.”
Ver. 16. A gracious woman—that is, a benevolent, kind-hearted woman. Compare next verse.

Ver. 21. Though hand join in hand.—[A very solemn method of taking an oath, in the East, as has been already shown, (on 2 Kings x. 15.) is joining hands, uttering at the same time a curse upon the false swearer. To this form there appears to be here an evident allusion: “Though hand join in hand”—ratify their agreement by an oath, “the wicked shall not be unpunished;” however confederated, justice shall take care that they escape not punishment.]—Bastger.

Ver. 25. The liberal soul—See margin—shall be made fat—that is, enriched with blessings.

Ver. 27. Diligently seeketh—[Properly, “rising early to seek” what is greatly desired.]—Bastger.

Melancthon commends this to the remembrance of the reader (ver. 22.) ‘Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord,’ who recommends to us, (says he,) the love and care of truth, both in doctrines concerning himself, and in arts, and in all honest covenants and contracts. For truth being among the chief and most conspicuous virtues, the contrary vice is condemned by a terrible word—abomination.”

Lord Bacon, upon another passage in this chapter, (ver. 10.) observes, “That there is implanted in man’s nature, a noble and excellent affection of pity and compassion, (called here Mercy,) which extends itself even unto brute creatures, that are by divine ordination subject to his command. Nay, farther, it is most certain that the worthy any soul is, (i. e. the better its disposition,) the larger is its compassion. For contracted and degenerate minds, imagine these things appertain

Ver. 29. He that troubleth his own house, (probably by his penuriousness) shall inherit the wind—that is, he shall get nothing by it. See ver. 24.
Ver. 30. The fruit of the righteous—This we apprehend to be an elliptical expression, “the fruit of the righteous is like the fruit of the tree of life.” See chap. iii. 13.—He that winneth—catcheth, or taketh; an allusion to hunters.

Ver. 31. Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more—This does not imply that the Almighty is more just to one class than another; but as the just shall be rewarded or chastened according to his conduct, so assuredly the wicked shall not go unpunished! So the LXX. “If the righteous scarcely be saved,” that is, not without chastisement for his sins, “where shall the ungodly and sinner appear?” And this appears to be quoted by an apostle, 1 Pet. iv. 18.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 4. A virtuous wife is a crown.—This alludes to the ancient custom of wearing chaplets, and nuptial crowns.

Ver. 9. He that is despised and hath a servant.—[Or, rather, as in the old translation, “He that is despised, and is his own servant, is better than he that boasteth himself and wanteth bread;” with which the versions generally beast: but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.

11 He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread: but he that followeth vain persons is void of understanding.

12 The wicked desireth the net of evil men: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit.

13 The wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips: but the just shall come out of trouble.

14 A man shall be satisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth: and the recompense of a man's hands shall be rendered unto him.

15 The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise.

16 A fool's wrath is presently known: but a prudent man covereth shame.

17 He that speaketh truth sheweth forth righteousness: but a false witness deceit.

18 There is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword: but the tongue of the wise is health.

19 The lip of truth shall be established for ever: but a lying tongue is but for a moment.

20 Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

21 There shall no evil happen to the just: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

22 Lying lips are abomination to the Lord: but they that deal truly are his delight.

23 A prudent man concealeth knowledge: but the heart of fools proclaimeth foolishness.

24 The hand of the diligent shall bear rule: but the slothful shall be under tribute.

25 Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop: but a good word maketh it glad.

26 The righteous is more excellent than his neighbour: but the way of the wicked seduceth them.

27 The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting: but the substance of a diligent man is precious.

28 In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death.

CHAPTER XIII.

A WISE man heareth his father's instruction: but a scorner heareth not rebuke.

2 A man shall eat good by the fruit of his mouth: but the soul of the transgressors shall eat violence.

not to them; but the mind that looks upon itself as a nobler portion of the universe, is kindly affected towards inferior creatures out of the communion there is between them; therefore, we see, that under the old law there were many precepts concerning this, which were not so much ceremonial, as institutions of mercy." (See Exod. xxxiii. 5, 19. Deut. v. 4, &c.)

Without sanctioning every expression of this great man, we may freely admit the importance of this moral duty of compassion to the brute creation. "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast; but the tender mercies of the wicked," even their pretended kindnesses, are, in fact, cruel. And if their kindness be cruel, what, then, can we think of their severity?

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—25. More general maxims on various agree. That is, it is better to be in lowliness and obscurity, and to support one's self by manual labour, than to want the necessities of life through a foolish vanity, or the pride of birth, which refuses to labour.—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Desireth the net.—See margin. The Hebrew bears both senses, and we prefer the former, as meaning that the wicked man desires a dishonest (or unlawful) net, that he may take advantage of his neighbours.

The root of the righteous.—Meaning, their riches have a root in their industry. A Spanish ambassador being shown, in the treasury of Venice, a great quantity of gold, turned up some from the bottom: and on being asked why he did so, he replied, "To see if it had any root; for his master's riches had a root in his gold mines."

Ver. 16. Presently known.—Intimating that a wise man will pause before he shows his anger.

Ver. 18. There is that speaketh, &c.—[That is, the keen, piercing words of an enemy. Allusions of this nature seem to be justified by real occurrences; for Theophrastus informs us, that the Turks sometimes fight, having a naked sword between their teeth, and a market in their hands.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. But for a moment.—that is, he is soon confuted.

e or, hossels.

f Pa. 128.2.

g Jo. 2.8.

h or, fortress.

i Hab. 1.15.

j The snare of the wicked is in the transgression of his lips.

k 2 Pe. 2.9.

l Is. 3.10, 11.

m c. 3.7.

n in that day.

o Ps. 57.4.

p 1 Pe. 3.13.

q c. 6.16, 17.

r c. 15.2.

s Ec. 10.12.

t or, deceitful.

u c. 15.23.

v or, abominable.

w ver. 13.

x Is. 23.14.

y Je. 25.27.

z 31.

a c. 3.2, &amp;c.

d c. 10.4.

e Ps. 119.163.

f c. 11.5, 6.

g sin.

h ver. 11.

i Ec. 11.1, 2.

j Job 18.5, 6.

k or, candle.

l c. 20.21.

m with the hand.

n Ps. 128.2.

o 2 Ch. 36.16.

p Lu. 16.31.

q Ps. 115.13.

r or, in peace.

s c. 14.27.

t spreadeth.

u an ambassador of faithfulness.

v c. 15.5.

w ver. 12.

x 1 Co. 15.33.

y broken.

z Ps. 32.10.

a Ec. 2.28.

3 He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life: but he that openeth wide his lips shall have destruction.

4 The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing: but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat.

5 A righteous man hateth lying: but a wicked man is loathsome, and cometh to shame.

6 Righteousness keepeth him that is upright in the way: but wickedness overthroweth the sinner.

7 There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing: there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches.

8 The ransom of a man's life are his riches: but the poor heareth not rebuke.

9 The light of the righteous rejoiceth: but the lamp of the wicked shall be put out.

10 Only by pride cometh contention: but with the well advised is wisdom.

11 Wealth gotten by vanity shall be diminished: but he that gathereth by labour shall increase.

12 Hope deferred maketh the heart sick: but when the desire cometh, it is a tree of life.

13 Whoso despiseth the word shall be destroyed: but he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded.

14 The law of the wise is a fountain of life to depart from the snares of death.

15 Good understanding giveth favour: but the way of transgressors is hard.

16 Every prudent man dealeth with knowledge: but a fool layeth open his folly.

17 A wicked messenger falleth into mischief: but a faithful ambassador is health.

18 Poverty and shame shall be to him that refuseth instruction: but he that regardeth reproof shall be honoured.

19 The desire accomplished is sweet to the soul: but it is abomination to fools to depart from evil.

20 He that walketh with wise men shall be wise: but a companion of fools shall be destroyed.

21 Evil pursueth sinners: but to the righteous good shall be repayed.

22 A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children: and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.

23 Much food is in the tillage of the poor: but subjects.—We shall notice two or three passages that require explanation. Ver. 8. we read, "There is [a man] who maketh himself rich," that is, accumulates great wealth, "yet hath nothing," because, in arbitrary countries, if this became known, the prince may, under some pretence or other, demand the whole, as in the next verse, for "the ransom of their life." On the other hand, there are benevolent persons who spend their property in doing good, who enjoy great riches in the public esteem, and are not likely to be called upon in the way just mentioned. Their character screens them from the suspicion of ill-gotten wealth, and from the rebuke and restraint which that often calls for from the government.

Ver. 16. we read, "Every prudent man dealeth with (or in) knowledge," and turns the merchandise to good account;

Ver. 21. No evil . . . to the just.—that is, eventually all shall be overruled for good.

Ver. 26. The righteous is more excellent.—i. e. "more successful;" because "the way," i. e. the course of life adopted by the wicked, "seduceth them" into extravagance and crime.

Ver. 27. The slothful roasteth not.—that is, even when he gets food gratis, he is too idle to dress it.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 2. Eat violence.—This expression appears to us elliptical; the latter clause, fully expressed, would be, "But the soul of transgressors (by the fruit of their mouth) shall eat violence."

Ver. 14. To depart.—Heb. "To turn him." So Boothroyd, &c.

Ver. 17. A wicked messenger falleth into mischief, (or evil, and involves others with him,) but a faithful ambassador (the class of messengers here intended) is health.—Holden, "A healing medicine;" it being his office to heal differences, and promote peace.

Ver. 22. A good man leaveth.—[Property honestly acquired is permanent, but genera experience taught even the heathen, that "the third generation shall not possess the goods that have been unjustly acquired."—Bagster.

there is that is destroyed for want of judgment.

24 He <sup>b</sup> that spareth his rod hateth his son : but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes.

25 The righteous eateth to the satisfying of his soul : but the belly of the wicked shall <sup>c</sup> want.

CHAPTER XIV.

EVERY wise woman buildeth <sup>a</sup> her house : but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands.

2 He that walketh in his <sup>b</sup> uprightness feareth the LORD : but he that is perverse in his ways despiseth <sup>c</sup> him.

3 In the mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride : but the lips of the wise shall preserve them.

4 Where no oxen are, the crib is clean : but much increase is by the strength of the ox.

5 A faithful witness will not lie : but a false witness will utter lies.

6 A scorner seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not : but <sup>d</sup> knowledge is easy unto him that understandeth.

7 Go from the presence of a foolish man, when thou perceivest not in him the lips of knowledge.

8 The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way : but the folly of fools is deceit.

9 Fools <sup>e</sup> make a mock at sin : but among the righteous there is favour.

10 The heart knoweth <sup>f</sup> his own bitterness ; and a stranger doth not intermeddle with his joy.

11 The <sup>g</sup> house of the wicked shall be overthrown : but the tabernacle of the upright shall flourish.

12 There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end <sup>h</sup> thereof are the ways of death.

13 Even <sup>i</sup> in laughter the heart is sorrowful ; and the end of that mirth is heaviness.

14 The backslider <sup>j</sup> in heart shall be filled with his own ways : and a good man shall be satisfied from himself.

15 The simple believeth every word : but the prudent man looketh well <sup>k</sup> to his going.

b c. 19.18.
22.15.
23.13.
29.15,17.

c 2Th.3.10.

a c.24.3.
Ru.4.11.

b Ps.25.21.

c Ro.2.4.

d c.8.9.

e c.10.23.

f the bitterness of his soul.

g Job 8.15.
Mat.7.25,
27.

h Ro.6.21.

i Ec.2.2.

j c.1.31.
Je.2.19.

k c.4.25.

l c.16.6.

m Ja.1.19.

n Ps.49.14.
Mal.4.3.

o c.19.7.

p many are the lovers of the rich.

q Ps.41.1-3.
Mat.25.
34,&c.
He.6.12.

r Ec.7.13.

s Is.33.6.

t c.16.32.

u short of.

v c.22.2.

w Ps.23.4.

x c.29.11.

y nations.

16 A <sup>l</sup> wise man feareth, and departeth from evil : but the fool rageth, and is confident.

17 He that is soon <sup>m</sup> angry dealeth foolishly : and a man of wicked devices is hated.

18 The simple inherit folly : but the prudent are crowned with knowledge.

19 The evil <sup>n</sup> bow before the good ; and the wicked at the gates of the righteous.

20 The <sup>o</sup> poor is hated even of his own neighbour : but <sup>p</sup> the rich hath many friends.

21 He that despiseth his neighbour sinneth : but <sup>q</sup> he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he.

22 Do they not err that devise evil ? but mercy and truth shall be to them that devise good.

23 In all labour there is profit : but the talk of the lips tendeth only to penury.

24 The crown of the wise is their riches : but the foolishness of fools is folly.

25 A true witness delivereth souls : but a deceitful witness speaketh lies.

26 In <sup>r</sup> the fear of the LORD is strong confidence : and his children shall have a place of refuge.

27 The fear of the LORD is a <sup>s</sup> fountain of life to depart from the snares of death.

28 In the multitude of people is the king's honour : but in the want of people is the destruction of the prince.

29 He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding : but he that is <sup>t</sup> hasty of spirit exalteth folly.

30 A sound heart is the life of the flesh : but envy the rottenness of the bones.

31 He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his <sup>v</sup> Maker : but he that honoureth him hath mercy on the poor.

32 The wicked is driven away in his wickedness : but the righteous hath hope in his <sup>w</sup> death.

33 Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding : but that which is in the midst of fools is made <sup>x</sup> known.

34 Righteousness exalteth a nation : but sin is a reproach to <sup>y</sup> any people.

(chap. iii. 14.) but "the fool layeth open (Marg. spreadeth out) his folly," as travelling merchants do their goods, but to no effect; for who will purchase folly?

Again, ver. 22. We learn that a good man "leaveth an inheritance to his children's children," which may, in the first place, intimate that he does not forfeit his inheritance, either by extravagance or crime; yet this inheritance does not always consist of lands and tenements; but the character of a good man is often a portion to his children; and his blessing and prayers their best inheritance. Thus Bishop Hall esteemed the prayers and admonitions of his pious mother; and the excellent Flavel says, "I bless God for a religious tender father, who often poured out his soul to God for me; and this stock of prayers I esteem above the fairest inheritance on earth."

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—35. More general observations.—"As the foregoing chapter began with the character of a wise son, so this with that of a good mother, who, by her prudent care, makes the family flourish, when a foolish woman throws all into confusion and distress: for so the wise man observes, 'She pulls down the house with her own hands,' that is,

Ver. 23. There is that is destroyed.—Or, "There (it is) destroyed," or perhaps, for want of judgment in cultivation. See ch. xii. 11.

Ver. 24. He that spareth his rod.—See note on ch. iii. 12.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 3. Is a rod (or branch) of pride.—According to the language or character of persons, the Hebrews represent a sword, or a rod, or branch, as it were growing out of the mouth. The former intends spiteful and malicious words; this, <sup>p</sup> vapouring and boasting language.

Ver. 5. To him that understandeth.—Rather, "To him that hath understanding;" (Holden.) i. e. who hath been divinely taught.

Ver. 30. A sound heart.—That is, "an honest and good heart." Lu. viii. 15.

Ver. 32. Driven away in his wickedness.—God has frequently illustrated the truth of this solemn threatening. The last hours of Altamont, of Newport, and of Voltaire, are a striking comment. But in the destruction of the leaders, in the reign of terror, during the French revolution, we see God fulfilling his own word. Says Sir Walter Scott, in his Life of Napoleon, "The Hotel de Ville, was surrounded by about 1500 men, and cannon turned upon the doors. The deserted group of Terrorists within, conducted themselves like scorpions, which, when surrounded by a circle of fire, are said to turn their stings on each other, and on themselves. Mutual and ferocious upbraiding took place among these miserable men." "Wretch, were these the means you promised to furnish," said Payan to Henriot, whom he found intoxicated and incapable of re-ruins the family without any other help. There needs no more than a bad wife to undo a family," Bishop Patrick.

In the sixth verse, Solomon observes, "A scorner seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not;" on which the great Lord Bacon hath made this useful gloss: "He that comes to seek after knowledge, with a mind (disposed) to scorn and censure, shall be sure to find matter enough for his humour, but none for his instruction;" the grand reason of which is, the want of that humble disposition which our Lord declares necessary to constitute a disciple of Wisdom's school, and a subject of the Saviour's kingdom. (Mark x. 15.) He that would be truly wise, must not be wise in his own conceit.

One other passage is too important to be passed over: "The backslider in heart," who secretly revolts from God, and turns back into the ways of sin, "shall be filled with his own ways;" he shall "have enough of it," as we proverbially say: he shall "eat of the fruit of his own doings, and be filled with his own devices," (chap. i. 31.) and the good man who perseveres in the way of truth and righteousness, he also shall "be satisfied from himself;" or rather, as Holden and Dr. Booth royd render it, "from his ways;" that is, the testimony of a solution or exertion; and seizing on him as he spoke, he precipitated the revolutionary general from a window. Henriot survived the fall only to drag himself into a drain, in which he was afterwards discovered and brought out to execution. The younger Robespierre threw himself from the window, but had not the good fortune to perish on the spot. It seemed as if even the melancholy fate of suicide, the last refuge of guilt and despair, was denied to men who had so long refused every species of mercy to their fellow creatures. Las Bas alone had calmness enough to dispatch himself with a pistol shot. Saint Just, after imploring his comrades to kill him, attempted his own life with an irrisolute hand and failed. Couthon lay beneath the table, brandishing a knife, with which he repeatedly wounded his bosom, without daring to add force enough to reach his heart. Their chief, Robespierre, in an unsuccessful attempt to shoot himself, had only inflicted a horrible fracture on his under jaw. In this situation they were found like wolves in a lair, foul with blood, mutilated, despairing, and yet not able to die! Robespierre lay on a table in an ante-room, his head supported by a deal box, and his hideous countenance, half hidden by a bloody and dirty cloth bound round the shattered chin. When led forth to execution, the wretch yelled aloud, to the horror of the spectators."

Ver. 33. That which is in the midst, &c.—That is, a fool soon discovers his own emptiness.

35 The king's favour is toward a wise * servant: but his wrath is against him that causeth shame

CHAPTER XV.

A SOFT * answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger.

2 The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright: but the mouth of fools *pour*eth out foolishness.

3 The eyes of the LORD are in every place, beholding the evil and the good.

4 A wholesome * tongue is a tree of life: but perverseness therein is a breach in the spirit.

5 A fool despiseth his father's instruction: but he that regardeth reproof is prudent.

6 In the house of the righteous is much treasure: but in the revenues of the wicked is trouble.

7 The lips of the wise disperse knowledge: but the heart of the foolish doeth not so.

8 The * sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD: but the prayer of the upright is his delight.

9 The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: but he loveth him that followeth after righteousness.

10 Correction is grievous unto him that forsaketh the way: and he that hateth reproof shall die.

11 Hell and destruction are before the LORD: how much more then the hearts of the children of men?

12 A scorner loveth not one that reproveth him: neither will he go unto the wise.

13 A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance: but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken.

14 The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledge: but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness.

15 All the days of the afflicted are evil: but he that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.

16 Better is little with the fear of the LORD, than great treasure and trouble therewith.

17 Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.

18 A wrathful man stirreth up strife: but he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife.

19 The way of the slothful man is as a hedge of thorns: but the way of the righteous is * made plain.

20 A wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish man despiseth his mother.

21 Folly is joy to him that is * destitute of z Mat. 24. 46

a Jn. 8. 1. 3.

b Isa. 25. 24.

c Eccl. 10. 12.

d Job 34. 21.

e Job 32. 19.

f Job 41. 13.

g Job 41. 13.

h Job 41. 13.

i Job 41. 13.

j Job 41. 13.

k Job 41. 13.

l Job 41. 13.

m Job 41. 13.

n Job 41. 13.

o Job 41. 13.

p Job 41. 13.

q Job 41. 13.

r Job 41. 13.

s Job 41. 13.

t Job 41. 13.

u Job 41. 13.

v Job 41. 13.

w Job 41. 13.

x Job 41. 13.

y Job 41. 13.

z Job 41. 13.

a Job 41. 13.

b Job 41. 13.

c Job 41. 13.

d Job 41. 13.

e Job 41. 13.

f Job 41. 13.

g Job 41. 13.

h Job 41. 13.

i Job 41. 13.

j Job 41. 13.

k Job 41. 13.

l Job 41. 13.

m Job 41. 13.

n Job 41. 13.

o Job 41. 13.

p Job 41. 13.

q Job 41. 13.

r Job 41. 13.

s Job 41. 13.

t Job 41. 13.

u Job 41. 13.

v Job 41. 13.

w Job 41. 13.

x Job 41. 13.

y Job 41. 13.

z Job 41. 13.

a Job 41. 13.

b Job 41. 13.

c Job 41. 13.

d Job 41. 13.

e Job 41. 13.

f Job 41. 13.

g Job 41. 13.

h Job 41. 13.

i Job 41. 13.

j Job 41. 13.

k Job 41. 13.

l Job 41. 13.

m Job 41. 13.

n Job 41. 13.

o Job 41. 13.

p Job 41. 13.

q Job 41. 13.

r Job 41. 13.

s Job 41. 13.

t Job 41. 13.

u Job 41. 13.

v Job 41. 13.

w Job 41. 13.

x Job 41. 13.

y Job 41. 13.

z Job 41. 13.

a Job 41. 13.

b Job 41. 13.

c Job 41. 13.

d Job 41. 13.

e Job 41. 13.

f Job 41. 13.

wisdom: but a man of understanding walketh uprightly.

22 Without counsel purposes are disappointed: but in the multitude of counsellors they are established.

23 A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth: and a word spoken in due season, how good is it!

24 The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath.

25 The LORD will destroy the house of the proud: but he will establish the border of the widow.

26 The thoughts of the wicked are an abomination to the LORD: but the words of the pure are * pleasant words.

27 He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house; but he that hateth gifts shall live.

28 The heart of the righteous studieth to answer: but the mouth of the wicked poureth out evil things.

29 The LORD is far from the wicked: but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

30 The light of the eyes rejoiceth the heart: and a good report maketh the bones fat.

31 The ear that heareth the reproof of life abideth among the wise.

32 He that refuseth instruction despiseth his own soul: but he that heareth reproof get teth understanding.

33 The fear of the LORD is the instruction of wisdom; and before honour is humility.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the LORD.

2 All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes; but the LORD weigheth the spirits.

3 Commit thy works unto the LORD, and thy thoughts shall be established.

4 The LORD hath made all things for himself: yea, even the wicked of the day of evil.

5 Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the LORD: though hand join in hand, he shall not be unpunished.

6 By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil.

7 When a man's ways please the LORD, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him.

8 Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right.

9 A man's heart deviseth his way: but the LORD directeth his steps.

10 A divine sentence is in the lips of the good conscience, and the assurance of the divine favour and blessing.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—33. More general observations.—This chapter opens with wise counsels as to the use and government of the tongue—an art of no little difficulty and importance. Some excellent instructions are then given relative to public worship. “The sacrifice of the wicked,” however large, however costly, “is an abomination to the Lord,” because the offerer himself, while a wicked man, cannot be accepted. Nor is there any possibility of deceiving the Almighty: “For hell and destruction are before the Lord: how much more then the hearts of the children of men?” (Comp. Ps. cxxxix.)

When “a merry heart” is recommended, we must not understand it of a giddy or a thoughtless heart, but a cheerful and contented one, in opposition to that “sorrow of heart” which

CHAP. XV. Ver. 4. A wholesome tongue.—See margin; or, as Boothroyd, “The healing tongue.”

Ver. 10. Correction.—“Instruction.” So it is rendered, ch. i. 2, and below, ver. 32, 33. The word bears both senses.

Ver. 11. Hell and destruction.—See Job xxvi. 6, and note.

Ver. 13. A merry.—A lively, rejoicing heart. So ver. 15.

Ver. 17. A dinner of herbs.—That is, sallads.—A stalled ox.—An ox fattened in the stall.

Ver. 23. In due season.—Hebrew, “In its season;” opportunely, pertinently.

Ver. 24. The way of life is above.—That is, elevated as a cause. See verse 19.

breaks and overwhelms the spirit. To whom “folly is joy,” (ver. 21.) he “is destitute of wisdom.”—“A word spoken in due season,” may be either a word of admonition or of consolation: the former may save from ruin, the latter from despair. (See chap. xxv. 11.)

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—33. Miscellaneous proverbs continued.—The first apothegm, though it admits of a pious interpretation, is not an accurate translation. The Hebrew runs literally thus:—

“To man (belongeth) the dispositions of the heart; But to Jehovah the answer of the tongue:”

And this exactly corresponds to the doctrine of the 9th verse;

“A man's heart deviseth his way; But the Lord directeth his steps.”

The Scriptures would furnish many facts illustrative of this,

Ver. 27. Greedy of gain.—[He that will be rich is a torment to himself and family by his avariciousness and penury, and a curse to those with whom he deals.]—Hateth gifts, &c.—He who hateth whatever is given to pervert the judgment.]—Bagster.

Ver. 30. Maketh the bones fat.—That is, makes a man cheerful and content.

Ver. 32. He that heareth.—“Obeyeth the truth, possesseth a heart;” the heart being understood to be the seat of knowledge.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 4. The Lord hath made.—Not “created,” but “prepared, provided, appointed;” as Exod. xv. 17. Psalm xxxi. 19. Gill's Cause of God.

Ver. 10. A divine sentence.—This had reference, probably, to what has been called “The judgment of Solomon,” 1 Kings iii. 28.

king: his mouth transgresseth not in judgment.

11 A <sup>m</sup> just weight and balance are the Lord's: all the <sup>n</sup> weights of the bag are his work.

12 It is an abomination to kings to commit wickedness: for <sup>o</sup> the throne is established by righteousness.

13 Righteous lips are the delight of kings; and they love him that speaketh right.

14 The wrath of a king is as messengers of death: but a wise man will pacify it.

15 In the light of the king's countenance is life; and his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain.

16 How <sup>p</sup> much better is it to get wisdom than gold? and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver?

17 The highway of the upright is to depart from evil: he that keepeth his way preserveth <sup>q</sup> his soul.

18 Pride <sup>r</sup> goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.

19 Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud.

20 He that <sup>s</sup> handleth a matter wisely shall find good: and whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he.

21 The wise in heart shall be called prudent: and the sweetness of the lips increaseth learning.

22 Understanding is a well-spring of life unto him that hath it: but the instruction of fools is folly.

23 The heart of the wise <sup>t</sup> teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips.

24 Pleasant words are as a <sup>u</sup> honey-comb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones.

25 There <sup>v</sup> is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.

26 <sup>w</sup> He that laboreth laboreth for himself; for his mouth <sup>x</sup> craveth it of him.

27 <sup>y</sup> An ungodly man diggeth up evil: and in his lips there is as a burning fire.

28 A froward man <sup>z</sup> soweth strife: and a whisperer separateth chief friends.

29 A violent man enticeth his neighbour, and leadeth him into the way that is not good.

30 He shutteth his eyes to devise froward things: moving his lips he bringeth evil to pass.

31 The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

32 He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city.

m Le. 19. 36.

n stones.

o c. 29. 14.

p c. 8. 11, 19.

q c. 10. 9.

r Ec. 6. 6, &amp;c. Da. 4. 31.

s or, understandeth a matter.

t maketh wise.

u Ps. 19. 10.

v c. 12. 26.

w The soul of him that.

x boweth unto.

y A man of Belial.

z sendeth forth.

a Jo. 1. 7.

a or, good cheer.

b Je. 17. 10.

c c. 14. 31.

d Job 31. 29. Ob. 11. 16.

e held innocent.

f Ps. 127. 5.

g A tip of excellency.

h a tip of lying.

i stone of Grace.

j or, procureth.

k c. 15. 5.

l or, exalteth more a wise man than to strike a fool a hundred times.

m Ho. 13. 8.

n Ps. 55. 12. 15.

o c. 20. 3.

p Ex. 23. 7. Is. 53. 23, 24.

q c. 13. 24.

r heart.

s Ja. 3. 16.

t The froward of heart.

33 The lot <sup>a</sup> is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord.

CHAPTER XVII.

BETTER is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than a house full of <sup>a</sup> sacrifices with strife.

2 A wise servant shall have rule over a son that causeth shame, and shall have part of the inheritance among the brethren.

3 The refining pot is for silver, and the furnace for gold: but <sup>b</sup> the Lord trieth the hearts.

4 A wicked doer giveth heed to false lips; and a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue.

5 Whoso <sup>c</sup> mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker: and he <sup>d</sup> that is glad at calamities shall not be <sup>e</sup> unpunished.

6 Children's <sup>f</sup> children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers.

7 <sup>g</sup> Excellent speech becometh not a fool: much less do <sup>h</sup> lying lips a prince.

8 A gift is as a <sup>i</sup> precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it: whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth.

9 He that covereth a transgression <sup>j</sup> seeketh love; but he that repeateth a matter separateth <sup>k</sup> very friends.

10 A <sup>k</sup> reproof <sup>j</sup> entereth more into a wise man than a hundred stripes into a fool.

11 An evil man seeketh only rebellion: therefore a cruel messenger shall be sent against him.

12 Let a <sup>m</sup> bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly.

13 Whoso <sup>n</sup> rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house.

14 The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore <sup>o</sup> leave off contention, before it be meddled with.

15 He <sup>p</sup> that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abomination to the Lord.

16 Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom seeing he hath no heart to it?

17 A friend <sup>q</sup> loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity.

18 A man void of <sup>r</sup> understanding striketh hands, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend.

19 He <sup>s</sup> loveth transgression that loveth strife: and he that exalteth his gate seeketh destruction.

20 <sup>t</sup> He that hath a froward heart findeth no good: and he that hath a perverse tongue fall-eth into mischief.

one of which we shall quote. Balaam's heart was disposed to curse Israel for reward; but his tongue was not under his own control. "How can I curse whom God hath not cursed?" (See Num. xxiii. 35; xxiv. 5-8.)

The maxims in the former part of this chapter belong chiefly to the doctrine of providence, and their practical tendency is comprised in this verse,

"Commit thy works unto the Lord,
And thy thoughts shall be established."

This we consider as exactly parallel to Ps. xxxvii. 5. "Commit thy way," &c.; the doctrine is, that after all due prudence and consideration, we must leave the result of all our affairs in the hand of God, who alone can insure success.

The 4th verse hath, indeed, stirred up some angry contro-

Ver. 14. Messengers of death.—The king's executioners. See Orient. Cust. No. 199.

Ver. 15. As a cloud of the latter rain—which promises an abundant harvest. Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 21. The sweetness of the lips—is eloquence, which, if it do not increase the learning of the speaker, wonderfully increases his reputation for it with the hearers. Compare ver. 23.

Ver. 22. Well-spring.—[Or, "a fountain of life" that is, according to the Hebrew idiom, a living fountain, or a well supplied by a perennial spring, contrasted with one of those cisterns in which rain water is caught.]—Bagester.

Ver. 28. He that laboreth.—"The soul of the labourer laboreth for himself; for his mouth boweth unto him." Holden, "Layeth this burden on him." So Boothroyd.

Ver. 27. An ungodly man diggeth up evil;—i. e. studies and labours to find some ground of contention or revenge.

Ver. 30. Moving his lips.—That is, muttering slanders.

Ver. 33. The whole disposing thereof.—Bishop Louth, "The determination of it," &c.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. Full of sacrifices.—Holden, "Sacrificial banquets," meaning peace-offerings. See ch. vii. 14.

Ver. 10. A reproof entereth more into, &c.—In modern language, "affects more deeply." So Boothroyd.

Ver. 19. Exalteth his gate.—[In various parts of the East, they are obliged 21 He that begetteth a fool doeth it to his sorrow: and the father of a fool hath no joy.

22 A merry heart doeth good <sup>a</sup> like a medicine: but a broken spirit <sup>v</sup> drieth the bones.

23 A wicked man taketh a gift out of the bosom to pervert the ways of judgment.

24 Wisdom <sup>v</sup> is before him that hath understanding; but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.

25 A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her that bare him.

26 Also to punish the just is not good, nor to strike princes for equity.

27 He that hath knowledge <sup>a</sup> spareth his words: and a man of understanding is of <sup>v</sup> an excellent spirit.

28 Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise: and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THROUGH <sup>a</sup> desire a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom.

2 A fool hath no delight in understanding, but that his heart may discover itself.

3 When the wicked cometh, then cometh also contempt, and with ignominy reproach.

4 The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and <sup>b</sup> the well-spring of wisdom as a flowing brook.

5 It <sup>c</sup> is not good to accept the person of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.

6 A fool's lips enter into contention, and his mouth calleth for strokes.

7 A fool's mouth is his <sup>d</sup> destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul.

8 The words of a <sup>e</sup> tale-bearer are <sup>f</sup> as wounds, and they go down into the innermost <sup>h</sup> parts of the belly.

9 He also that is slothful in his work is brother to him that is a great waster.

10 The name of the LORD is a strong <sup>i</sup> tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is <sup>j</sup> safe.

11 The rich man's wealth is his strong city, and as a high wall in his own conceit.

12 Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before <sup>k</sup> honour is humility.

a or, so.

v c.13.14.

w Ec.2.14.

x Ja.1.19.

y or, a cool.

a or, he that separates himself, seeketh according to his desire, and intermeddleth in every business.

b c.10.11.

c Le.19.15.

De.16.19.

d Ec.10.12.

e or, whisper.

f or, like as when men are wounded.

g c.12.18.

h chambers.

i Ps.18.2.

j set aloft.

k Lu.14.11.

l returneth a word.

m Ju.7.51.

n Ps.147.3.

o c.15.14.

p Ge.27.41.

q Mat.12.37.

r Is.57.19.

s c.19.14.

a c.28.6.

b held innocent.

c a man of gifts.

13 He that <sup>l</sup> answereth a matter <sup>m</sup> before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him.

14 The spirit of a man will sustain his infirmity; but a wounded <sup>n</sup> spirit who can bear?

15 The heart of the prudent <sup>o</sup> getteth knowledge; and the ear of the wise seeketh knowledge.

16 A man's gift maketh room for him, and bringeth him before great men.

17 He that is first in his own cause, seemeth just; but his neighbour cometh and searcheth him.

18 The lot causeth contentions to cease, and parteth between the mighty.

19 A brother <sup>p</sup> offended is harder to be won than a strong city: and their contentions are like the bars of a castle.

20 A man's belly shall be satisfied with the fruit of his mouth; and with the increase of his lips shall he be filled.

21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue: and they that love it shall eat the fruit <sup>r</sup> thereof.

22 Whoso <sup>s</sup> findeth a wife findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favour of the LORD.

23 The poor useth entreaties; but the rich answereth roughly.

24 A man that hath friends must show himself friendly: and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

CHAPTER XIX.

BBETTER <sup>a</sup> is the poor that walketh in his integrity, than he that is perverse in his lips, and is a fool.

2 Also, that the soul be without knowledge, it is not good; and he that hasteth with his feet sinneth.

3 The foolishness of man perverteth his way: and his heart fretteth against the LORD.

4 Wealth maketh many friends; but the poor is separated from his neighbour.

5 A false witness shall not be <sup>b</sup> unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall not escape.

6 Many will entreat the favour of the prince: and every man is a friend to <sup>c</sup> him that giveth gifts.

7 All the brethren of the poor do hate him: how much more do his friends go far from reflects the light. But it is generally supposed that the wise man had reference to the bribes frequently presented to judges, and to which, often, more attention was paid than to the justice of the cause. The admonition to avoid strife and contention, ver. 14. is beautifully explained, in allusion to the cutting open a dyke for the purpose of watering land, when it often rushes with such impetuosity as to flood the country, and carry away the cottages. Such is the case with contentions and litigations; the wise man, therefore, advises to pause beforehand, and, as Holden well expresses it, "Before contention be meddled with, dismiss it." When Solomon asks, ver. 16, "Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom, seeing he hath no heart to it?" he strongly expresses the folly of rich men, who, instead of seeking wisdom, spend all their energies in folly and extravagance. Lastly, he gives the true character of friendship, in its perpetuity; "A friend loveth at all times;" and the proper characteristic of a brother is, that he was born a friend, and born for seasons of adversity. "A friend in need (says the English proverb) is a friend indeed."

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—24. Miscellaneous proverbs continued.—Having explained, in the Notes below, the chief difficulties to have the doors of their houses very low, not more than three feet, to prevent the Arabs, who scarcely ever dismount, from riding into their courts and houses, and spoiling their goods. He then, who, through pride and ostentation, made a high gate, sought his own destruction.—Harmer.—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Out of the bosom.—That is, his bosom.

Ver. 24. Wisdom is before him.—Holden, "is present to him."

Ver. 26. Nor to strike (or smite) princes (nobles, or judges) for equity.—For acting uprightly and independently.

Ver. 27. An excellent spirit.—"A cool spirit." Compare with the verse preceding.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. Through desire, a man, &c.—See margin. But this version, though better than the common text, is too wordy. Holden's is:

"He that separates himself, seeketh (his) desire; he dealeth in all sound wisdom."

So the word here used is rendered, ch. ii. 7. See the note there.

Ver. 2. But that his heart may discover itself.—Here we prefer the version in the early part of this chapter, we shall here confine our remarks to some of the concluding verses, upon two of the chief blessings of human life—matrimony and friendship.

Ver. 22. "Whoso findeth a wife, findeth a good thing;" that is, matrimony is in itself good; "honourable in all, with the bed undefiled." (Heb. xiii. 4.) "And he that obtaineth a wife, obtaineth favour;" or rather, "a favour from the Lord," who said at the first institution of marriage, "It is not good for man to be alone." (Gen. ii. 18.) It is true, that by the fault of either party, the blessing may be turned into a curse, and so may all the blessings of the present life.

In our last chapter we noticed Solomon's description of a friend and a brother, and here it is added, that friendship sometimes exceeds the love of kindred; and though the wise man might not at the time have any farther reference, it seems impossible for a true Christian to read this remark without recollecting Him who "loved and died for"—not his friends, but his enemies; for "Christ died for the ungodly." Rom. v. 8—10.

"A Friend and Brother he appears, And well fulfils the names he wears."—Watts.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—29. Farther miscellaneous apothegms.—

of Dr. Boothroyd, "In discovering (the thoughts of) his own heart." This may be explained by an allusion to ch. xiii. 16. See Exposition.

Ver. 6. His mouth calleth for strokes.—Holden, "His mouth provoketh blows."

Ver. 8. The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds, and they go down.—"They descend" to the innermost parts, &c. See Jude, iii. 21, 22.

Ver. 10. And is safe.—"It is set aloft;" i. e. out of the reach of enemies.

Ver. 20, 21. A man's belly shall be satisfied, &c.—The subject here considered, is the power of the tongue, which may not only, by its eloquence, fill the belly, but save the life.—They that love it (that love to talk) will eat the fruit of their own words, whether wise or foolish, good or evil.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1. Better is the poor, &c.—This apothegm evidently wants point, which Holden and others give it, by adding, from the parallel passage, chap. xxviii. 6. the words, "though he be rich," which make the sense complete.

Ver. 3. His heart fretteth.—Holden, "Murmureth."

him? he pursueth them with words, yet they are wanting to him.

8 He <sup>a</sup> that getteth <sup>e</sup> wisdom loveth his own soul: he that keepeth understanding shall find good.

9 A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall perish.

10 Delight is not seemly for a fool; much less for a servant to have rule over princes.

11 The <sup>f</sup> discretion of a man deferreth his anger; and <sup>g</sup> it is his glory to pass over a transgression.

12 The king's wrath is as the roaring of a lion; but his favour is as dew <sup>h</sup> upon the grass.

13 A foolish son is the calamity of his father: and the contentions of a wife are a continual dropping.

14 House <sup>i</sup> and riches are the inheritance of fathers: and a prudent wife <sup>k</sup> is from the Lord.

15 Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep; and an idle <sup>l</sup> soul shall suffer hunger.

16 He <sup>m</sup> that keepeth the commandment keepeth his own soul; but he that despiseth his ways shall die.

17 He <sup>n</sup> that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and <sup>o</sup> that which he hath given will he pay him again.

18 Chasten <sup>p</sup> thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare <sup>q</sup> for his crying.

19 A man of great wrath shall suffer punishment: for if thou deliver him, yet thou must <sup>r</sup> do it again.

20 Hear counsel, and receive instruction, that <sup>s</sup> thou mayest be wise in the latter end.

21 There are many devices in a man's heart; nevertheless the counsel of the Lord, that shall stand.

22 The desire of a man is his kindness: and a poor man is better than a liar.

23 The <sup>t</sup> fear of the Lord tendeth to life: and he that hath it shall abide satisfied; he shall not be visited with evil.

24 A slothful man hideth his hand in his bosom, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth again.

25 Smite a scorner, and the simple will <sup>v</sup> beware: and reprove one that hath understanding, and he will understand knowledge.

In several of the proverbs in the early part of this chapter, integrity, knowledge, and truth, are contrasted with riches and folly: and the poor man who is honest, intelligent, and pious, is preferred before the rich man who is ignorant, perverse, and fretful. Yet, such is the state of the world, that Wealth maketh many friends, while Poverty scatters them: still, in the sight of God and good men, wisdom is better than folly; and "he that getteth and keepeth understanding," shall find good in the issue.

Industry, charity, and parental discipline, are favourite topics with Solomon, especially the latter, of which he appears to have seen and felt the great importance, and probably regretted his own neglect in the case of his son Rehoboam, who, in many respects, answered to the character of the fool which he so well describes. "Chasten," or "correct thy son while there is hope," implies that parental discipline should begin early to

Ver. 10. Delight—Rather, "delicacy." See Deut. xxviii. 54, 56.

Ver. 13. A continual dropping.—"The waters," by a continual dropping, wear away the stones;" so the perpetual contentions of a brawling woman wear away the peace and patience of her husband.

Ver. 17. That which he hath given.—Boothroyd, "His recompense will be rendered unto him."

Ver. 18. Let not thy soul spare for his crying.—See margin. Holden, "And thy soul will not desire (Boothroyd, not lift up a wish for) his death."

Ver. 19. A man of great wrath . . . If thou deliver . . . thou must do it again.—That is, a violent and passionate man is always getting into broils, and incurring punishment.

Ver. 21. There are many devices, &c.—See chap. xvi. 1, 9.

Ver. 22. The desire—Rather, "the desirable." Holden, "A desirable thing in man is his kindness," and (or "but") a poor man who can do nothing, is better than a liar, who promises and will do nothing.

Ver. 24. Hide his hand in his bosom.—Taalachai is never the bosom, but a pan, dish, or bowl, such as the poor eat out of with their hands, 2 Kings xxi. 13, 2 Chron. xxxv. 13. See Orient. Cust. No. 201. The idle man dipeth his hand into the dish for soup, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth again.

Ver. 26. He that wasteth his father.—Hodgson, "He that plundereth his father, or driveth away his mother, is;" &c.

d c.2.10.12.

e a heart.

f or, prudence

g c.16.32.

h Ho.14.5.

i c.27.15.

j 2Co.12.14.

k c.18.22.

l 2Th.3.10.

m Lu.10.23.

n Ec.11.1.

o or, his deed.

p c.23.13,14.

q or, to his destruction, or, to cause him to die.

r add.

s De.32.29.

t Ps.90.12, 14.

u Job.23.13.

v Ps.33.10, 11.

w c.16.1,9.

x 21.30.

y Is.14.26, 27.

z 46.10.

aa Ac.5.39.

ab 1Ti.4.8.

ac v be cunning.

ad w a witness of Belial.

ae x Job.15.16.

af Ho.4.5.

ag y Is.29.20.

ah a Is.23.7.

ai Ho.4.11.

aj b c.16.32.

ak c or, winter.

al d c.19.15.

am e Mat.6.2.

an f or, bounty.

ao g Lu.18.8, 11.

ap h 2Sa.23.4.

aq i 2Ch.6.36.

ar j 1Jn.1.9.

as j a stone and a stone.

at k Da.25.13.

au l an ephah and an ephah.

av m Ps.94.9.

aw n Ro.12.11.

26 He that wasteth his father, and chaseth away his mother, is a son that causeth shame and bringeth reproach.

27 Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge.

28 An <sup>w</sup> ungodly witness scorneth judgment: and <sup>x</sup> the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity.

29 Judgments are prepared for <sup>y</sup> scorners, and stripes for the back of fools.

CHAPTER XX.

WINE <sup>a</sup> is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

2 The fear of a king is as the roaring of a lion: whoso provoketh him to anger sinneth against his own soul.

3 It is an honour <sup>b</sup> for a man to cease from strife: but every fool will be meddling.

4 The sluggard will not plough by reason of the <sup>c</sup> cold; therefore <sup>d</sup> shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing.

5 Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of understanding will draw it out.

6 Most men will proclaim <sup>e</sup> every one his own <sup>f</sup> goodness: but a <sup>g</sup> faithful man who can find?

7 The just man walketh in his integrity: his children are blessed after him.

8 A king that sitteth in the throne of judgment scattereth <sup>h</sup> away all evil with his eyes.

9 Who <sup>i</sup> can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?

10 Divers <sup>k</sup> weights, and divers measures, both of them are alike abomination to the Lord.

11 Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right.

12 The <sup>m</sup> hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them.

13 Love <sup>n</sup> not sleep, lest thou come to poverty; open thine eyes, and thou shalt be satisfied with bread.

14 It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth.

have its proper effect; for when habits of insubordination are formed, the task is almost hopeless. Of the latter clause, the margin seems to direct to the preferable interpretation: "Let not thy soul spare him to his own ruin," when perhaps even a parent's heart might rather wish to see him dead, than alive and criminal. (See Notes.)

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—30. Various moral precepts continued.—"The first precept in this chapter is against drunkenness, as an enemy to wisdom, even in common things, much more in those of everlasting consequence; for that it commonly expels out of men's minds all reverence, both to God and to others, inclining them to take the license to say or do any thing, without restraint or discretion; and what unruly passions it excites when the brain is disturbed with it, is known to all, and need not be here recited. The word (Homeh) which Solomon here uses, and which we render raging, or outrageous, includes

Ver. 27. The instruction . . . to err.—That is, to hear erroneous teachers. The supplementary words seem unnecessary.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 2. The fear.—That is, his wrath, which excites fear. Compare chap. xvi. 14; xix. 12.

Ver. 3. It is an honour for a man.—Heb. Ish, a man of rank or eminence, as opposed to a fool.

Ver. 4. Cold.—See margin; which is more accurate.

Ver. 6. Most (or many) men . . . his own goodness, but a faithful man—a man who is all that he pretends to be—soho, &c.

Ver. 10. Divers weights, &c.—"A stone and a stone."—Measures.—"An ephah and an ephah;" i. e. stones of different weight, and measures of different capacity.

Ver. 13. Open thine eyes.—That is, early in the morning, as the context shows.

Ver. 14. It is naught.—[Such tricks in trade, if not actionable, are certainly dishonest; and to make them a subject of boast, is to proclaim that a man is an artful knave, who has met with another simple enough to be cheated. St. Augustine relates, that a certain mountebank, having promised to show what was in every man's heart, stood up, and in a single sentence redeemed his pledge: "You all wish to buy cheap, and to sell dear."—He was applauded for every one felt it to be a description of his own heart, and was satisfied that all others were similar.]—Bagster.

15 There is gold, and a multitude of rubies: but the lips of knowledge are a precious jewel.

16 Take his garment that is surety for a stranger: and take a pledge of him for a strange woman.

17 Bread of <sup>p</sup>deceit is sweet to a man; but afterwards his mouth shall be filled with gravel.

18 Every purpose is established by counsel: and with good advice make war.

19 He that goeth about as a tale-bearer revealeth secrets: therefore meddle not with him that flattereth with his lips.

20 Whoso curseth his father or his mother, his lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness.

21 An inheritance may be gotten hastily at the beginning; but the end thereof shall not be blessed.

22 Say not thou, I will recompense evil; but wait on the Lord, and he shall save thee.

23 Divers weights are an abomination unto the Lord; and a false balance is not good.

24 Man's goings are of the Lord; how can a man then understand his own way?

25 It is a snare to the man who devoureth that which is holy, and after vows to make inquiry.

26 A wise king scattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them.

27 The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly.

28 Mercy and truth preserve the king: and his throne is upholden by mercy.

29 The glory of young men is their strength: and the beauty of old men is the gray head.

30 The blueness of a wound cleanseth away evil: so do stripes the inward parts of the belly.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will.

them all; signifying that discomposed, unquiet, and restless state of mind, which expresses itself in some wild motions or other, according as men are naturally inclined. But nothing worse can be said of it than this, that it makes men stupid sots, or profane scoffers at religion and all sobriety."—Bp. Patrick.

"Counsel in the heart of man," that is, his plans and designs, (says Solomon) "is like deep water" in a well; "but a man of understanding" and penetration, "will draw," or wind "it out" of him. Lord Bacon, who was a second Solomon, gives six rules, whereby the secrets of public men may be discovered; namely, their countenances, words, (rather accidental than deliberate), actions, dispositions, the ends or objects they are known to have in view, and the relations of other persons.

The question, (ver. 3.) "Who can say, I have made my heart clean?" evidently implies its depravity, and the impossibility of cleansing our own hearts, as well as the folly of pretending to perfection in the present life: a doctrine which we shall find Solomon inculcating with equal decision in other places. (See 1 Kings viii. 46; 2 Chron. vi. 36; Eccles. vii. 20.)

Ver. 15. Rubies.—"Gems." See note on ch. iii. 15; viii. 11.

Ver. 16. Take his garment, &c.—This is better rendered by Dr. Durell, Holden, and others: "Take his garment, when a stranger is surety;" but in the latter clause we prefer Dr. Boothroyd's version: "And his pledge for (the debts of) strangers."

Ver. 17. Bread of deceit filled with gravel.—That is, bread procured by fraud, will eat as if there were sand or gravel in it; which is said to be one way in which criminals were sometimes punished.

Ver. 20. His lamp shall be put out.—That is, his posterity shall be cut off. See 1 Kings xv. 4, and note.

Ver. 25. And after vows, &c.—The general sense is, that men do wrong first, and begin to inquire whether they have done so, when it is too late. But the old divines apply it to sacrilege, thus: A man robs God of his due, and then vows to make amends. See Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 26. And bringeth the wheel over them—that is, crushes them by the weight of his authority, as corn was threshed with the cart wheels. See Isa. xxviii. 27, 28.

Ver. 30. The blueness of a wound.—This is very difficult to translate. Dr. Boothroyd's version seems most intelligible: "As the suppurating of a wound cleanseth the evil, so (do) stripes," &c. The phrase "the inward parts of the belly," among the Hebrews, answers to our phrase "the inside," which is often used for the inner man—the mind. See ch. xviii. 9; xxvi. 22.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. The king's heart, &c.—[In the East, their gardens are

o c.8.19.

p lying, or falsehood

q c.24.6. Lu.14.31.

r or, enticeth

s or, candle.

t balances of deceit.

u Je.10.23.

v or, lamp.

w is a purging medicine against evil.

x Je.12.10.

—

a 1 Sa.15.22

b Houghtiness of eyes.

c or, light.

d 2 Pe.2.3.

e gaze, or, dwell with.

f woman of contentions.

g a house of society.

h is not favoured.

i Ps.107.43. Ho.14.9.

j Mat.18. 33,34. 25:41. 46. Ja.2.13.

k Mat.7.23.

l c.13.20.

m or, sport.

n c.11.8. Is.43.3,4.

o land of the desert.

2 Every way of a man is right in his own eyes: but the Lord pondereth the hearts.

3 To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.

4 A high look, and a proud heart, and the ploughing of the wicked, is sin.

5 The thoughts of the diligent tend only to plenteousness; but of every one that is hasty only to want.

6 The getting of treasures by a lying tongue is a vanity tossed to and fro of them that seek death.

7 The robbery of the wicked shall destroy them; because they refuse to do judgment.

8 The way of man is froward and strange but as for the pure, his work is right.

9 It is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top, than with a brawling woman in a wide house.

10 The soul of the wicked desireth evil: his neighbour findeth no favour in his eyes.

11 When the scorner is punished, the simple is made wise: and when the wise is instructed, he receiveth knowledge.

12 The righteous man wisely considereth the house of the wicked: but God overthroweth the wicked for their wickedness.

13 Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard.

14 A gift in secret pacifieth anger: and a reward in the bosom strong wrath.

15 It is joy to the just to do judgment: but destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity.

16 The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead.

17 He that loveth pleasure shall be a poor man: he that loveth wine and oil shall not be rich.

18 The wicked shall be a ransom for the righteous, and the transgressor for the upright.

19 It is better to dwell in the wilderness, than with a contentious and an angry woman.

The maxim (ver. 27.) that "the spirit of man is the candle (or lamp) of the Lord," is more disputed. The word here rendered "spirit," is the same that is used for the breath of life, which constituted man a living animal; but it seems here to refer particularly to the conscience, which as the lamp of God in the temple, (the sacred chandelier), illuminated the holy place, and showed all the sacred furniture; so the conscience of man, when not put out by sin, discovers all the secret recesses of the human heart. (See Note on ver. 30, and compare 1 Cor. ii. 11.)

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—31. More miscellaneous proverbs.—Solomon adverts to the doctrine of providence frequently, and apparently with peculiar pleasure. "A man's heart deviseth his way; but the Lord directeth his steps." (Chap. xvi. 9.) So here, even "the king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, . . . as the rivers of water, he turneth it whithersoever he will."

This is an evident allusion to the ancient method of watering gardens, by directing small streams through the grounds by the foot. (Deut. xi. 10.) So with the same ease doth the Lord watered by means of small rills or canals, dug from one stream, and running in different directions as occasion requires. Thus the direction even of the king's heart is in the hand of JEHOVAH, as the distribution of water through the garden is at the will of the gardener.—Baxter.

Ver. 4. A high look.—See margin. So chap. vi. 17.—The ploughing ("the light," or "lamp") of the wicked, . . . is sin.—So the ancient versions, and best modern translators. Michaelis suggests, that "the high look and the proud heart" are the lamp of the wicked discovering his real character and disposition.

Ver. 7. Destroy them.—"Awe," or "terrify them."

Ver. 8. Froward.—Parkhurst thinks the word means unsteady, alluding to an overloaded beast; but may it not rather allude to a drunken man, reeling and staggering as he goes?

Ver. 9. A corner of the house-top.—It was common to form little closets, like arbours, in a corner of the flat roofs, where persons sometimes slept, in the summer time.—Then with a brawling woman, &c.—A woman of contentions in a house of society; i. e. a large house, in which several families reside. Orient. Cust. No. 293. Orient. Lit. No. 839.

Ver. 12. The righteous wisely considereth the house of the wicked.—That is, investigates their conduct.—But God overthroweth the wicked.—The words "but God," seem an unnecessary supplement: the Heb. literally reads, "overthrowing the wicked," &c. See Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 17. He that loveth pleasure.—But the Hebrew rather means joy and festivity, which agrees with the latter part of the verse.

20 There is treasure <sup>p</sup> to be desired and oil <sup>q</sup> in the dwelling of the wise; but a foolish man spendeth it up.

21 He <sup>r</sup> that followeth after righteousness and mercy findeth life, righteousness, and honour.

22 A wise man scaleth <sup>s</sup> the city of the mighty, and casteth down the strength of the confidence thereof.

23 Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles.

24 Proud and haughty scorner is his name, who dealeth in <sup>t</sup> proud wrath.

25 The desire of the slothful killeth him; for his hands refuse to labour.

26 He coveteth greedily all the day long: but the righteous giveth and spareth not.

27 The sacrifice <sup>u</sup> of the wicked is abomination: how much more, when he bringeth it <sup>v</sup> with a wicked mind?

28 A <sup>w</sup> false witness shall perish: but the man that heareth speaketh constantly.

29 A wicked man hardeneth his face: but as for the upright, he <sup>x</sup> directeth his way.

30 There <sup>y</sup> is no wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the Lord.

31 The horse <sup>z</sup> is prepared against the day of battle: but <sup>a</sup> safety is of the Lord.

CHAPTER XXII.

A <sup>b</sup> GOOD name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and <sup>c</sup> a loving favour rather than silver and gold.

2 The <sup>d</sup> rich and poor meet together: the Lord is the maker of them all.

3 A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished.

4 <sup>e</sup> By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, honour, and life.

5 Thorns and snares <sup>f</sup> are in the way of the froward: he that doth keep his soul shall be far from them.

6 <sup>g</sup> Train up <sup>h</sup> a child in <sup>i</sup> the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

7 The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower is servant to the <sup>j</sup> lender.

dispose of the hearts of men of all ranks in society, to fulfil his purposes; for "he doth according to his will in the armies of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth." (Dan. iv. 35.)

A most important sentiment occurs near the close of this chapter; namely, "The sacrifice of the wicked is abomination," meaning, in the sight of God; and for this plain reason—wicked men themselves are at enmity with God; and as he reads the heart, he knows this; and that their sacrifice is brought neither from a sense of love nor gratitude, and therefore it cannot be acceptable. Much less can it be so when brought with "a wicked mind," or "in wickedness," as the Hebrew reads; that is, from motives of hypocrisy, or to answer some sinister design. See Ps. l. 7—23.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1—16. Conclusion of the second part of this book.—The second maxim in this chapter contains the true doctrine of equality: "The rich and the poor meet together: the Lord is the Maker of them all." Creatures, as creatures, are all equal in his sight; and however unequal their character and circumstances in life may be, they are all equal in the grave, and shall stand upon the same principle of equality before his judgment bar: "for we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, whether good or bad." (2 Cor. v. 10.) This doctrine cuts up the root of pride. What hath any man that he hath not received? Who shall dare to treat with cruelty and oppression the poor man, at whose side he may stand before the judgment seat of his Maker?

Ver. 24. In proud wrath.—See margin; i. e. in the excess, or outrage of pride.

Ver. 28. But the man that heareth, &c.—The sense is, the false witness ("the witness of lies") shall be confronted and confounded by the true witness, who, having heard to the end, (as the Hebrew implies,) speaketh constantly; i. e. gives a true and consistent evidence.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 4. By humility.—See margin. So Holden and Dr. Boothroyd.

p Lu. 6.45.

q Mat. 25.3.

r Ro. 2.7.

s Ec. 9.14.

t Is. 1.11.

u In wickedness.

v witness of lies.

x or, considereth.

y Is. 8.9,10.

z or, victory.

a or, favour is better.

b 1 Co. 12.

c or, The reward of humility.

d Job 18.8.

e or, catechise.

f Ep. 6.4.

g his.

h man that lendeth.

i Job 4.8.

j or, with the rod of his anger he shall be consumed.

k good of eye.

l 2 Co. 9.6.

m or, and hath grace in his lips.

n Mat. 5.8.

o Is. 59.19.

p or, matters.

q Ec. 7.26.

r Mt. 2.2.5.

s Ps. 90.12.

t in thy belly.

u or, trust thou also.

v 1 Pe. 3.15.

w or, those that send thee.

x Mal. 3.5.

8 He <sup>i</sup> that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity, and <sup>j</sup> the rod of his anger shall reap.

9 <sup>k</sup> He that hath a bountiful eye <sup>l</sup> shall be blessed; for he giveth of his bread to the poor.

10 Cast out the scorner, and contention shall go out; yea, strife and reproach shall cease.

11 He that loveth pureness of heart, <sup>m</sup> for the grace of his lips the king <sup>n</sup> shall be his friend.

12 The eyes of the Lord preserve <sup>o</sup> knowledge, and he overthroweth the <sup>p</sup> words of the transgressor.

13 The slothful man saith, There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets.

14 The mouth of strange women is a deep pit: he <sup>q</sup> that is abhorred of the Lord shall fall therein.

15 Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child; but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him.

16 He <sup>r</sup> that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want.

17 Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise, and apply <sup>s</sup> thy heart unto my knowledge.

18 For <sup>t</sup> it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them within thee; they shall withal be fitted in thy lips.

19 That thy trust may be in the Lord, I have made known to thee this day, even <sup>u</sup> to thee.

20 Have not I written to thee excellent things in counsels and knowledge, 21 That I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth; that thou mightest answer <sup>v</sup> the words of truth to <sup>w</sup> them that send unto thee?

22 Rob not the poor, because he is poor: neither oppress the afflicted in the gate:

23 For <sup>x</sup> the Lord will plead their cause, and spoil the soul of those that spoiled them.

24 Make no friendship with an angry man; and with a furious man thou shalt not go:

25 Lest thou learn his ways, and get a snare to thy soul.

26 Be not thou <sup>y</sup> one of them that strike hands or of them that are sureties for debts.

Another maxim of great importance, and perhaps more frequently quoted than any other in the book, relates to the great advantage of early education: "Train up a child in the way that he should go." The margin says, "Catechise" but the true sense appears to be, initiate, or "train up" in the practice of his duty; and then there is great reason to hope he will form habits of religion and good morals, from which he will not be easily diverted. The word also signifies to dedicate, (as Gesenius observes,) and the solemn dedication of children to God, is a probable means of deeply impressing them with their sense of duty; and furnishes them with an important plea in prayer—"Our fathers trusted in thee, . . . . and thou didst deliver them." Ps. xxii. 4.

Ver. 17—29. A continued discourse on wisdom and prudence.—This, as remarked in our Introduction, commences the third part of the Proverbs; but instead of distinct apothegms, Solomon now addresses his readers as a master his pupils, in a connected series of precepts, to the end of the 24th chapter. He insists on the pleasantness and certainty of wisdom and truth, which, when adhered to, will encourage trust in God, and create confidence in man. There is, indeed, not much novelty of remark in the few verses before us, except in the 24th verse, which advises his pupils to make "no friendship," to form no intimacy, with "an angry" or passionate man, lest his manners should become "a snare" to them, and lead them into the same sin and folly. It is, indeed, not easy to calculate the evils which arise from passion, either to the angry man himself, or to the unhappy subjects of his rage. Many

Ver. 6. Train up a child.—See margin. Heb. "Initiate upon the mouth;" i. e. by the command, namely, of God.—In the way he should go.—Hebrew, "in his way." So that this clause might read literally, "Initiate a child by the command of God in his way."

Ver. 8. The rod of his anger shall fail.—See margin. So Holden. "The rod (or sceptre) of his anger," means his assumed authority.

Ver. 13. Lion without.—(That is, the slothful man uses any pretext, how ever improbable, to indulge his love of ease and indolence.)—Bagster

27 If thou hast nothing to pay, why should he take away thy bed from under thee?

28 Remove not the ancient <sup>v</sup> landmark, which thy fathers have set.

29 Seest thou a man diligent <sup>z</sup> in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before <sup>a</sup> mean men.

CHAPTER XXIII.

WHEN thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee:

2 And put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite.

3 Be not desirous of his dainties: for they are deceitful meat.

4 Labour <sup>a</sup> not to be rich: cease from thine own <sup>b</sup> wisdom.

5 Wilt thou <sup>c</sup> set thine eyes upon that which is not? for riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven.

6 Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meats:

7 For as he thinketh in his heart, so <sup>is</sup> he: Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart <sup>is</sup> not with thee.

8 The morsel which thou hast eaten shalt thou vomit up, and lose thy sweet words.

9 Speak not in the ears of a fool: for he will despise the wisdom of thy words.

10 Remove <sup>d</sup> not the old <sup>e</sup> landmark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherless:

11 For their redeemer <sup>is</sup> mighty; he shall plead their cause with thee.

12 Apply thy heart <sup>f</sup> unto instruction, and thine ears to the words of knowledge.

13 Withhold not correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die.

14 Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and <sup>g</sup> shalt deliver his soul from hell.

15 My son, if <sup>h</sup> thy heart be wise, my heart shall rejoice, even <sup>i</sup> mine.

16 Yea, my reins shall rejoice, when thy lips speak right things.

17 Let <sup>j</sup> not thy heart envy sinners: but <sup>be</sup> thou in the fear of the LORD all the day long.

18 For surely there is an <sup>k</sup> end; and thine expectation shall not be cut off.

19 Hear thou, my son, and be wise, and guide thy heart <sup>l</sup> in the way.

or, bound.

s c. 12.24.

a obscure.

a 1Ti.6.9,10.

b c. 26.12.

c cease

thine eyes to fly.

d c. 22.28.

e or, bound.

f c. 22.17.

g 1 Co.5.5.

h c. 29.3.

i or, I will rejoice.

j Ps. 37.1, 3.

k or, resist.

l c. 4.23.

m Lu. 21.34.

n Ro. 13.13.

n their flesh.

o c. 30.17.

p Ep. 6.1, 2.

p Is. 55.1.

Mat. 13.44

Re. 3.18.

q c. 4.5, 7.

c. 10.1.

r c. 15.20.

s Ps. 119.2.

t c. 22.14.

u c. 7.12.

v or, a robber.

w Is. 5.11, 22

Hab. 2.5.

x or, a cockatrice.

y heart.

z Je. 5.3.

a knew.

b Is. 56.12.

c c. 23.17.

ver. 19.

d Ps. 10.7.

e c. 14.1.

f c. 20.15.

20 Be <sup>m</sup> not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of <sup>n</sup> flesh:

21 For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty: and drowsiness shall clothe <sup>a</sup> a man with rags.

22 Harken <sup>o</sup> unto thy father that begat thee, and despise not thy mother when she is old.

23 Buy <sup>p</sup> the truth, and sell it not; <sup>also</sup> wisdom, <sup>q</sup> and instruction, and understanding.

24 The <sup>r</sup> father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice: and he that begetteth a wise <sup>child</sup> shall have joy of him.

25 Thy father and thy mother shall be glad, and she that bare thee shall rejoice.

26 My son, give me thy <sup>s</sup> heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways.

27 For a whore <sup>is</sup> a deep <sup>t</sup> ditch; and a strange woman <sup>is</sup> a narrow pit.

28 She also lieth <sup>u</sup> in wait <sup>v</sup> as for a prey, and increaseth the transgressors among men.

29 Who hath <sup>w</sup> wo? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes?

30 They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine.

31 Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, <sup>when</sup> it moveth itself aright.

32 At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like <sup>x</sup> an adder.

33 Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thy heart shall utter perverse things.

34 Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the <sup>y</sup> midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast.

35 They have stricken <sup>z</sup> me, <sup>shalt</sup> thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, and I <sup>a</sup> felt it not: when shall I awake? I <sup>b</sup> will seek it yet again.

CHAPTER XXIV.

BE not thou envious <sup>a</sup> against evil men, neither desire to be with them.

2 For their heart studieth destruction, and their lips <sup>b</sup> talk of mischief.

3 Through wisdom <sup>c</sup> is a house builded; and by understanding it is established:

4 And by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious <sup>d</sup> and pleasant riches.

fatal disorders originate in the convulsions which anger raises in the human breast; many fatal accidents of manslaughter, and even murder, result from the consequence of this fatal passion upon others. (See Matt. v. 22.)

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 1—35. Temperance, justice, and other virtues, strongly recommended.—The first virtue upon the list is temperance, especially at the tables of the great, who were too apt to press their inferiors to indulge in luxuries, which at the same time they grudge them; and perhaps despise, if they do not reproach them, for complying with their importunities. He therefore counsels such as are fond of the indulgences of the table, to place a powerful restraint upon their appetites, which is the obvious meaning of the metaphorical expression, "Put a knife to thy throat;" though others extend it to imply a guard upon their words or conversation, which may be equally necessary, though perhaps not here intended.

Equally pointed is his caution against that old trick of the oppressor, removing the ancient landmarks, that form the boundaries of their ground, so as to add the fields of the poor to their own domains: a crime expressly forbidden in the Mosaic law, and visited with the curses of the people. (Deut. xix. 14.—xxvii. 17.) Nor is this all: "their redeemer is mighty," and will assuredly plead the cause of the poor.

The latter part of the chapter again cautions against lewdness and intemperance. A harlot is a deep pit and narrow, closing upon the unhappy man that may be taken in her snare.

The following caveat against intemperance is remarkably beautiful and poetical. "The drunkard is exposed to the same dangers as the mariner, without being able to guard against them; frequently does he get insulted and beaten, without knowing the cause; and so bewitched is he with the vice, that he no sooner recovers from his stupor, than he plunges into it again."

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1—34. Cautions against envy and fretfulness; with exhortations to the study of wisdom.—The first caution here, is against being envious of the prosperity of the wicked, against which the wise man's father had so well argued in the beginning of the 37th Psalm. Solomon argues, that wisdom is riches, and strength, and power. It builds

Ver. 29. Mean—i. e. either, 1. Men in darkness themselves, ignorant and mean; or, 2. Men unknown, and undistinguished.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 4. Cease from thine own wisdom.—"Thine own understanding," or prudence; which too often unites with the world and Satan, and says, "Get a fortune honestly if you can; if not, get one at all events." But Solomon says, and God says, "Labour not to be rich," but to "provide things honestly in the sight of all men; to lay up treasures in heaven;" and to "cease from thine own understanding."—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Wilt thou set (Heb. "dart") thine eyes?—Alluding to an eagle darting on its prey. But while the covetous man is darting his eye upon his prey of expected riches, behold, they take to their wings, the strong and rapid wings of the eagle, and fly away. Is there not something designed and beautiful in omitting the word riches in the original, to be supplied, having just before called them "that which is not?"

Ver. 8. And lose.—Holden. "Retract" thy sweet words.

Ver. 18. There is an end—Rather, "an issue" of punishment to the wicked, and of happiness to the righteous.

Ver. 20. Riotous eaters of flesh.—The Arabs eat but little flesh, and so did the Hebrews, probably, except at their great festivities: gluttons in flesh are here classed with wine-bibbers and drunkards. Marg. "Of their flesh." Some render it (says Holden) "among themselves;" (so Theodotian;) i. e. in their convivial parties.

Ver. 20. Mixed wine.—[That is, not wine diluted and lowered with water, but made stronger, and more intoxicating, by the addition of more powerful ingredients, as honey, spices, myrrh, deffrutum, opiates, &c.]

Ver. 31. When it giveth his colour.—Heb. "Its eye;" i. e. when it sparkles. So Holden, &c.—When it moveth itself aright.—Holden, "When it goeth down sweetly."

Ver. 32. An adder.—"A cockatrice." Bochart, "A basilisk;" some serpent, whose bite was fatal.

5 A <sup>w</sup> wise man is <sup>s</sup> strong, yea, a man of knowledge <sup>is</sup> increaseth strength.

6 For by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war: and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.

7 Wisdom is too high <sup>is</sup> for a fool: he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

8 He that deviseth <sup>is</sup> to do evil shall be called a mischievous person.

9 The thought <sup>is</sup> of foolishness is sin: and the scorner is an abomination to men.

10 If thou faint <sup>is</sup> in the day of adversity, thy strength is <sup>is</sup> small.

11 If thou forbear to deliver <sup>is</sup> them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain;

12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not; doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it? and he that keepeth thy soul, doth <sup>is</sup> not he know it? and shall <sup>is</sup> not he render to every man according to his works?

13 My son, eat thou honey, because it is good; and the honey-comb, which is sweet <sup>is</sup> to thy taste:

14 So <sup>is</sup> shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul: when thou hast <sup>is</sup> found it, then there shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

15 Lay not wait, O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous; spoil not his resting place:

16 For a just man falleth seven times, and riseth <sup>is</sup> up again: but <sup>is</sup> the wicked shall fall into mischief.

17 Rejoice <sup>is</sup> not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thy heart be glad when he stumbleth:

18 Lest the Lord see it, and it <sup>is</sup> displease him, and he turn away his wrath from him.

19 <sup>is</sup> Fret not thyself because of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked;

20 For there shall be no reward to the evil man; the <sup>is</sup> candle of the wicked shall be put out.

21 My son, fear <sup>is</sup> thou the Lord and the king: and meddle not with <sup>is</sup> them that are given to change:

22 For their calamity shall rise suddenly; and who knoweth the ruin of them both?

23 These things also belong to the wise. It is

e c.21.22.

f in strength.

g strength-eneth might.

h Ps.10.5.

i c.14.22.

j Mat.5.28.

k He.12.5.

l narrow.

m Ps.82.4.

n Je.32.19.

o upon thy palate.

p Ps.19.10.

q Je.15.16.

r Mi.7.8.

s Am.8.14.

t Job 31.29.

u be evil in his eyes.

v or, Keep not company with the wicked.

w or, lamp.

x 1 Pe.2.13

y 17.

y changers.

z Le.19.15.

a blessing of good.

b answereth right words.

c Mat.5.39.

d 44.

e Ro.12.17.

f 19.

g set my heart.

h a man of shield.

i De.29.29.

j Job 29.16.

k there is no searching.

l Set not out thy glory.

m Lu.14.8.

n 10.

not <sup>is</sup> good to have respect of persons in judgment.

24 He that saith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him shall the people curse, nations shall abhor him:

25 But to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and a <sup>is</sup> good blessing shall come upon them.

26 Every man shall kiss his lips that <sup>is</sup> giveth a right answer.

27 Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field; and afterwards build thy house.

28 Be not a witness against thy neighbour without cause; and deceive not with thy lips.

29 Say <sup>is</sup> not, I will do so to him as he hath done to me: I will render to the man according to his work.

30 I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding;

31 And, lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down.

32 Then I saw, and <sup>is</sup> considered it well: I looked upon it, and received instruction.

33 Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

34 So shall thy poverty come as one that travellet; and thy want as <sup>is</sup> an armed man.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Observations about kings, 8 and about avoiding causes of quarrels, and sundry causes thereof.

THESE are also proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied out.

2 It <sup>is</sup> the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honour of kings is to search out <sup>is</sup> a matter.

3 The heaven for height, and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings <sup>is</sup> unsearchable.

4 Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer.

5 Take away the wicked from before the king, and his throne shall be established in righteousness.

6 <sup>is</sup> Put not <sup>is</sup> forth thyself in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men:

7 For better it is that it be said unto thee, Come up hither; than that thou shouldest be the house, and stores it with true wealth; and is even the best defence in war, because it furnishes able counsellors.

But wisdom is out of the reach of fools, who are not able to open their lips before the elders and wise men in the gate of the city, where they were wont to assemble.

"The thought of foolishness is sin."—This is a maxim that requires some explanation. Solomon's fool is not a simple, well-meaning man; but one whose heart is corrupt, and his actions stained by immorality; his thoughts, therefore, arising from a corrupt heart, and leading to such immoral conduct, must be sinful, and no doubt tainted with infidelity.

The two following precepts (ver. 11, 12.) are, as Melancthon remarks, evidently addressed to magistrates, or persons of influence, who are forbidden to connive at injustice and violence; with the assurance that the Most High will not connive at them. (See Ps. lxxxi.)

The remark (ver. 16.) that "a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again," has occasioned some controversy; and though it be true indeed of moral failures, (for "there is no man that sinneth not," 1 Kings viii. 46.) yet that does not appear to be the sense of this passage, as we infer from the context, wherein the wicked is warned not to lay wait for the righteous; for though he may succeed in his villany for a time, he shall finally be punished. The righteous may fall under his power time after time, but he shall rise again; but when the wicked fall, he falls into utter ruin. (See Note.)

The close of the chapter contains one of the most beautiful pictures ever drawn by the pen of Solomon, that of the Sluggard; and the best commentary on it that we have seen, is Watts' inimitable hymn,

"Tis the voice of the sluggard, I heard him complain," &c.

which is, or ought to be, learned by every child.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1—28. Proverbs collected by the scribes of Hezekiah.—Solomon, we are told, spake 3000 proverbs, lit-

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 5. A wise man is strong.—[His wisdom enables him to construct a great variety of machines, by which, under his own influence, he can do the labour of a hundred or even a thousand men. Hence the maxim of Lord Bacon, "knowledge is power." From wisdom comes all mathematical learning and mechanical knowledge, and originally the inclined plane, the wedge, the screw, the pulley in all its multiplications, and the lever in all its combinations and varieties, by which prodigies of power are produced, far surpassing all animal or muscular power and energy.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Thy strength is small.—Hebrew, "Narrow," or contracted.

Ver. 11. Drawn.—Holden, "Hurried away."

Ver. 13. My son eat thou.—Rather, "thou eatest" honey, &c. . . .

So, &c.

Ver. 16. Fall into mischief.—Holden, "Are overwhelmed with evil."

Ver. 19. Fret not thyself because of.—See margin. But Drs. Hodgson and Boothroyd adhere to the sense of our translators; the former reading, "Rejoice not," and the latter, "Vex not thyself," &c.

Ver. 21. Given to change.—Hebrew, "Changers."

Ver. 27. Prepare thy work.—That is, fit the timbers together, before thou raise them.

put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen.

8 Go <sup>1</sup> not forth hastily to strive, lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.

9 Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself; and discover not <sup>a</sup> a secret to another:

10 Lest he that heareth it put thee to shame, and thine infamy turn not away.

11 A word <sup>1</sup> fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

12 As an ear-ring of gold, and an ornament of fine gold, so is a wise reprover upon an obedient ear.

13 As the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to them that send him: for he refresheth the soul of his masters.

14 Whoso boasteth <sup>k</sup> himself of a false gift is like clouds <sup>m</sup> and wind without rain.

15 By long forbearing is a prince persuaded, and a soft tongue breaketh the bone.

16 Hast thou found honey? eat so much as is sufficient for thee, lest thou be filled therewith, and vomit it.

17 <sup>n</sup> Withdraw thy foot from thy neighbour's house; lest he be <sup>o</sup> weary of thee, and so hate thee.

18 A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow.

19 Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint.

20 As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as vinegar upon nitre, so is he that singeth songs to a heavy heart.

21 If <sup>q</sup> thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink:

22 For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord shall <sup>r</sup> reward thee.

f c.17.14.

g Mat.5.25. 18.15.

h the secret of another.

i spoken upon his secrets.

j c.1.8.9.

k Lu.18.17, &amp;c.

l in a gift of falsehood.

m Jude 12.

n or, Let thy foot be added in.

o full.

p Ps.57.4.

q Ex.23.4.5. Mat.5.44. Ro.12.20.

r 2Sa.16.12.

a or, bringeth forth rain; so doth a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.

a Na.23.8.

b Mat.21.24.

c eyes.

d or, violence.

e lifted up.

f or, putteth a precious stone in a heap of stones.

g or, A great man grieveth all, and he heareth the fool, he heareth also transgressors.

23 The north wind <sup>a</sup> driveth away rain: so doth an angry countenance a backbiting tongue.

24 It is better to dwell in the corner of the house-top, than with a brawling woman and in a wide house.

25 As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country.

26 A righteous man falling down before the wicked is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt spring.

27 It is not good to eat much honey: so for men to search their own glory is not glory.

28 He that hath no rule over his own spirit, is like a city that is broken down, and without walls.

CHAPTER XXVI.

<sup>i</sup> Observations about fools, 13 about sluggards, 17 and about contentious busybodies.

AS snow in summer, and as rain in harvest, so honour is not seemly for a fool.

2 As the bird by wandering, as the swallow by flying, so the curse <sup>a</sup> causeless shall not come.

3 A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.

4 Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him.

5 Answer <sup>b</sup> a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own <sup>c</sup> conceit.

6 He that sendeth a message by the hand of a fool cutteth off the feet, and drinketh <sup>d</sup> damage.

7 The legs of the lame are <sup>e</sup> not equal: so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

8 As he that <sup>f</sup> bindeth a stone in a sling, so is he that giveth honour to a fool.

9 As a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard, so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

10 <sup>g</sup> The great God that formed all things both rewardeth the fool, and rewardeth transgressors.

tle more than a fourth of which are preserved in the sacred Scriptures; and these were probably gathered from the minutes of learned and pious men, at different times, and inserted in the first four parts of this general collection. Those in this and the four chapters following, appear not to have been added before the time of Hezekiah, whose scribes and learned men (among whom the seers and prophets are to be reckoned) appear to have taken pains to collect the genuine remains of David and Solomon, and to insert them in the books of Psalms and Proverbs: for neither all of one, nor of the other, were collected at the same time, or by the same persons. The observations contained in this chapter, are chiefly political and civil, addressed to princes and rulers; and some of them are clothed in very beautiful figures: as, for instance, the following: "A word fitly spoken," or a parable or figure well wrought up, (alluding to the manufacture of pottery on the wheels,) is compared to "apples (or citrons) of gold, in basket (or net) work of silver," in which the fruit and the vehicle, the sentiment and the language, mutually set off each other.

The imagery of verse 20 is more difficult; we understand it as follows: "As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather" chills the feelings; or, "as he that pours vinegar upon natron" creates a fermentation: so he that singeth (merry) songs to a heavy heart, either chills the feelings of the mind, as cold does the body, or exasperates it, as vinegar ferments natron. (See note on ver. 20.)

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 1—23. Sundry observations upon fools, and sluggards, and busy bodies.—The first is easy of exposition. "Snow in summer, and rain in harvest," are unexpected and injurious; so is "honour" conferred upon a fool. The next is more difficult: we conceive it to mean—as the sparrow is made to wander, and the swallow (or dove) to fly, so is it the nature of a malediction to fall upon the head at which it is aimed: but as neither can the sparrow, nor any other bird

Ver. 8. Lest, &c.—That is, lest thou be conquered.

Ver. 9. A secret.—Rather, "The secret," namely, the cause of debate.

Ver. 11. A word fitly spoken.—Hebrew, "A word spoken upon the wheels," alluding to the manufacture of pottery. Jer. xviii. 3.—Apples—Or citrons. See Sol. Song, ii. 3.—In pictures—Bishop Lowth, "Net-work;" Dr. Hodgson and Holden, "Baskets" of silver. [Rather, "is like golden apples in baskets of silver." A word spoken with propriety, opportunely, and suitably to the occasion, is as much in its place, and as conspicuously beautiful, as the golden fruit which appears through the apertures of an exquisitely wrought silver basket.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. As the cold of snow.—Harmer says, the Hebrews and other Orientals use snow to cool their wines in summer. Instead of "cold of snow," Dr. Hunt and others read, "a vessel of snow."

Ver. 16. Eat so much.—So much only. Boothroyd, "Only what is sufficient."—Lest thou be filled.—Bishop Lowth, "Lest thou be satiated therewith, and nauseate it."

Ver. 20. As vinegar upon nitre.—[The original does not signify what is now commonly called nitre, or saltpetre, but a fixed alkali known among chemists as the natron of the ancients, and carbonate of soda; found native in Syria and India, and used for the purposes of washing. If vinegar be poured on it, says Dr. Shaw, a strong fermentation immediately takes place, which illustrates what Solomon says here.]—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Driveth away rain.—See margin. [Moncomye says, that when travelling on the coast upon January, 1648, from Tripoli in Syria, between Lebanon and the sea, it rained without ceasing, while the north wind blew directly in his face.]—Bagster. If we admit the marginal reading of this clause, so must we of the next, which is, "So doth a backbiting (or secret) tongue an angry countenance;" which gives an easy and consistent sense, and is adopted by the best modern translators.

Ver. 26. A righteous man falling down.—Holden, "erring;" Parishurst, "sliding;" Boothroyd, "offending;" the meaning is, that a religious character falling into immorality, grieves his friends, and disgraces his character, just as dirt and rubbish, thrown into a fountain, defile and render it useless.

Ver. 28. Is like a city . . . broken down?—That is, he is thrown off his guard, and exposed to danger.

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 2. Causeless.—Gratis; without divine permission.

Ver. 3. Whip for the horse.—[According to our notions, we should rather say, a bridle for the horse, and a whip for the ass; but it should be considered, that the eastern asses are not only much more beautiful, but better governed than ours; and being active and well broken, they need only a bridle to guide them, whereas their horses being scarce, and often caught wild, and badly broken, are much less manageable, and need the correction of the whip.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Cutteth off the feet.—That is, a fool is unfit for a messenger as a man without feet.—Drinketh damage.—Violence. "So we read of 'drinking wrath.'" Job xxi. 20.

Ver. 7. Are not equal.—Hebrew, "Are lifted up;" i. e. one shorter than the other. So we speak of a bad rhyme, or imperfect simile, as lame or halting.

Ver. 8. As he that bindeth a stone in a sling.—See margin. [This probably refers, as Coverdale understands it, to the custom of throwing a stone to the heap under which a criminal was buried. "As he who throws a stone to Mercury's heap, so is he who gives honour to a fool." Mercury was the god of highways; and stones were erected in different parts to guide the traveller; hence those lines of Dr. Young:

Death stands like Mercuries in every way;
And kindly points us to our journey's end."—Bagster.

The marginal rendering is generally rejected.—The meaning is, that as a stone in a sling is thrown away utterly, so is honour bestowed upon a fool.

Ver. 9. As a thorn, &c.—The meaning seems to be, that a fool is no more fit to handle a parable, than a drunkard is to handle a thornbush, which requires great care.

Ver. 10. The great God.—This is variously translated, but the common version is preferred by Holden, Boothroyd, &c.

11 As <sup>h</sup> a dog returneth to his vomit, so <sup>a</sup> a fool : returneth to his folly.

12 Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit ? <sup>j</sup> there is more hope of a fool than of him.

13 The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way ; a lion is in the streets.

14 As the door turneth upon his hinges, so doth the slothful upon his bed.

15 The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom ; <sup>k</sup> it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth.

16 The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men that can render a reason.

17 He that passeth by, and <sup>l</sup> meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.

18 As a mad man who casteth <sup>m</sup> firebrands, arrows, and death, 19 So is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and saith, Am not I in sport ?

20 <sup>n</sup> Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out : so where there is no <sup>o</sup> tale-bearer, the strife <sup>p</sup> ceaseth.

21 As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire ; so is a contentious man to kindle strife.

22 The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds, and they go down into the <sup>q</sup> innermost parts of the belly.

23 Burning lips and a wicked heart are like a potsherd covered with silver dross.

24 He that hateth <sup>r</sup> dissembleth with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him ;

25 When he <sup>s</sup> speaketh fair, believe him not : for there are seven abominations in his heart.

26 <sup>t</sup> Whose hatred is covered by deceit, his wickedness shall be showed before the whole congregation.

27 Whoso <sup>u</sup> diggeth a pit shall fall therein : and he that rolleth a stone, it will return upon him.

28 A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it ; and a flattering mouth worketh ruin.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Observations of self-love, 5 of true love, 11 of care to avoid offences, 23 and of the household care.

BOAST not <sup>a</sup> thyself of <sup>b</sup> to-morrow ; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.

2 Let another <sup>c</sup> man praise thee, and not thine own mouth ; a stranger, and not thine own lips.

either fly or fall without our heavenly Father's knowledge, (Matt. x. 29—31.) so neither can the curse of an enemy alight upon us, without his permission.

The 4th and 5th verses have been supposed contradictory, but are only enigmatical. To "answer a fool according to his folly," is, in the first instance, to give a foolish answer, and make ourselves like him ; but, in the second case proposed, to answer a fool according to his folly, is to give such an answer as his question deserves, in order to convict him of folly, and prevent his being "wise in his own conceit."

In the subsequent parts of the chapter occur several pithy remarks on the conduct of the fool, the idler, and the sluggard ; characters very nearly allied, and almost equally detestable. The slothful, in particular, stays away from his work under the pretence of some imaginary danger, and turns from side to side, like a door upon its hinges, without resolution to rise. When he is up, his first concern is to eat : yet when he dips his hand into the dish, so idle is he, that it grieves (or wearies)

Ver. 17. A dog by the ears.—That is, a strange dog ; for dogs in the East run wild, and are not domesticated, as with us.

Ver. 23. Burning lips.—That is, ardent professions of friendship from a wicked heart, however smooth, shining, and splendid they may appear, are like a vile vessel covered over with base metal.]—Bagster.

Ver. 28. Lying tongue, &c.—[He that injures another hates him in proportion to the injury, says Tacitus : and strange to say, in proportion to the innocence of the injured.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 14. Blesseth his friend.—[So the Italian proverb, "He who praises you more than he was wont to do, hath either deceived you, or is about to do it." Extravagant public professions are always to be suspected.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Continual dropping.—[That is, a contentious wife is a source of incessant and unavoidable vexation, like the constant dropping through a decayed roof in a very rainy day.]—Bagster.

h 2 Pe. 2. 22.
i steriateh.
j Re. 3. 17.
k or, he is weary.
l or, is enraged.
m flames, or, sparks
n without wood.
o or, whisperer.
p is silent.
q chambers.
r or, is known.
s maketh his voice gracious.
t or, Hatred is covered in secret.
u Ps. 7. 15, 16.
v La. 12. 19.
w Ja. 4. 13. 16.
x to-morrow day.
y c. 25. 27.
z heaviness.
a cruelty.
b an overflowing.
c 1 Jn. 3. 12.
d or, jealousy.
e c. 34.
f c. 28. 23.
g Ps. 141. 5.
h or, earnest, or frequent.
i treadeth under foot.
m Job 6. 7.
n from the counsel of the soul.
o c. 18. 24.
p c. 23. 15, 24.
q Ps. 57. 1. 3.
r c. 19. 13.
s 1 Co. 9. 7, 13.
t Ma. 4. 23.
u Col. 3. 22.
v 1 Pe. 2. 18. 21.
w c. 30. 16.
x not.
y Ec. 1. 8.
z Is. 1. 5.
a Je. 5. 3.

3 A stone is <sup>d</sup> heavy, and the sand weighty ; but a fool's wrath is heavier than them both.

4 Wrath is <sup>e</sup> cruel, and anger <sup>f</sup> is outrageous ; but who <sup>g</sup> is able to stand before <sup>h</sup> envy ?

5 Open <sup>i</sup> rebuke is better than secret love.

6 Faithful <sup>j</sup> are the wounds of a friend ; but the kisses of an enemy are <sup>k</sup> deceitful.

7 The full soul <sup>l</sup> loatheth a honey-comb ; but <sup>m</sup> to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet.

8 As a bird that wandereth from her nest, so is a man that wandereth from his place.

9 Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart : so doth the sweetness of a man's friend <sup>n</sup> by hearty counsel.

10 Thine own friend, and thy father's friend, forsake not ; neither go into thy brother's house in the day of thy calamity : for better <sup>o</sup> is a neighbour that is near than a brother far off.

11 My <sup>p</sup> son, be wise, and make my heart <sup>q</sup> glad, that I may answer him that reproacheth me.

12 A prudent man foreseeth <sup>r</sup> the evil, and hideth himself ; but the simple pass on, and are punished.

13 Take his garment that is surety for a stranger, and take a pledge of him for a strange woman.

14 He that blesseth his friend with a loud voice, rising early in the morning, it shall be counted a curse to him.

15 A <sup>s</sup> continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike.

16 Whosoever hideth her hideth the wind, and the ointment of his right hand, which be wrayeth itself.

17 Iron sharpeneth iron ; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend.

18 Whoso <sup>t</sup> keepeth the fig tree shall eat the fruit thereof : so he that waiteth on <sup>u</sup> his master shall be honoured.

19 As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man.

20 Hell <sup>v</sup> and destruction are <sup>w</sup> never full ; so <sup>x</sup> the eyes of man are never satisfied.

21 As the fining pot for silver, and the furnace for gold ; so is a man to his praise.

22 Though <sup>y</sup> thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

him to put it to his mouth. (See chap. xix. 24.) Yet so opinionated is he, that he fancies himself "wiser than seven men that can render a reason ;" and when he is enraged, he acts the madman, and "throws about firebrands, arrows, and death," in pretended sport.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1—27. Cautions against presumption, self-conceit, &c.—The first maxim is a most excellent admonition against vain confidence, and is beautifully amplified by St. James, (chap. iv. 13—15.) who shows the folly of anticipating futurity.

"Forsake not thy father's friend," is a maxim of such worth, that Solomon's own son, Rehoboam, lost five sixths of his kingdom by neglecting it. (1 Kings xii. 6—14.) Friendship is undoubtedly a Christian, as well as a moral virtue : but why does Solomon advise, "Go not into thy brother's house in the day of thy calamity ?" obviously because a neighbour that is nigh at hand, is better to apply to than a distant relative. But there is a friendship much to be suspected. When

Ver. 17. Iron sharpeneth.—[As iron or steel will bring a knife to a better edge, when properly whetted, so one friend may excite another to reflect deeply, furnish useful hints, and invigorate and improve each other by mutual intercourse.]—So Horace :

"But let me sharpen others, as the hone Gives edge to razors, though itself has none."—Bagster.

Ver. 21. So is a man to his praise.—That is, "as the fining pot and the furnace test the precious metals, so is a man tried by the praises bestowed on him." If he can bear them without injury, his character may be pronounced sterling.

Ver. 22. Though thou shouldst bray (or pound) a fool in a mortar.—We learn from Knolls' History of the Turks, that such a barbarous punishment has been employed against that cruel people ; but we have no proof of its high antiquity, and much doubt its being here referred to.

23 Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks, and <sup>1</sup> look well to thy herds.

24 For <sup>2</sup> riches are not for <sup>3</sup> ever: and doth the crown endure to <sup>4</sup> every generation?

25 The hay appeareth, and the tender grass <sup>5</sup> sheweth itself, and herbs of the mountains are gathered.

26 The lambs are for thy clothing, and the goats are the price of the field.

27 And thou shalt have goats' milk enough for thy food, for the food of thy household, and for the <sup>6</sup> maintenance of thy maidens.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

General observations of impiety and religious integrity.

THE wicked flee when <sup>7</sup> no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion.

2 For the transgression of <sup>8</sup> a land many are the princes thereof: but by <sup>9</sup> a man of understanding and knowledge the state thereof shall be prolonged.

3 A <sup>10</sup> poor man that oppresseth the poor is like a sweeping rain <sup>11</sup> which leaveth no food.

4 They <sup>12</sup> that forsake the law praise the wicked: but such as keep the law contend with <sup>13</sup> them.

5 Evil <sup>14</sup> men understand not judgment: but they <sup>15</sup> that seek the LORD understand all things.

6 Better is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, than he that is perverse in his ways, though he be rich.

7 Whoso keepeth the law is a wise son: but he that <sup>16</sup> is a companion of riotous men shameth his father.

8 He <sup>17</sup> that by usury and <sup>18</sup> unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor.

9 He <sup>19</sup> that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination.

10 Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he shall fall himself into his own pit: but the upright shall have good things in possession.

11 The rich man is wise in his <sup>20</sup> own conceit; but the poor that hath understanding searcheth him out.

y set thy heart.

z strength.

a Ja. 1. 10, 11.

b generation and generation.

c Ps. 104. 14.

d life.

e Le. 26. 17, 35.

f Ps. 53. 5.

g or, men of understanding, and wisdom shall they like-wise be.

h Mat. 18. 23, 30.

i without food.

j Ps. 10. 3.

k Ep. 5. 11.

l Ps. 92. 6.

m Ja. 7. 17.

n Co. 2. 15.

o 1 In. 2. 20, 27.

p or, feedeth gluttons.

q Job 27. 16.

r by increase.

s 1 Zec. 7. 11.

t his eyes.

u or, sought for.

v Ps. 32. 3, 5.

w 1 In. 1. 8, 10.

x Ro. 2. 5.

y Ps. 84. 11.

z or, unpunished.

a 1 Ti. 6. 9.

b or, hath an evil eye.

c or, hath an evil eye.

d or, hath an evil eye.

e or, hath an evil eye.

f or, hath an evil eye.

g or, hath an evil eye.

h or, hath an evil eye.

i or, hath an evil eye.

j or, hath an evil eye.

k or, hath an evil eye.

l or, hath an evil eye.

m or, hath an evil eye.

n or, hath an evil eye.

o or, hath an evil eye.

p or, hath an evil eye.

q or, hath an evil eye.

r or, hath an evil eye.

s or, hath an evil eye.

t or, hath an evil eye.

u or, hath an evil eye.

v or, hath an evil eye.

w or, hath an evil eye.

x or, hath an evil eye.

y or, hath an evil eye.

z or, hath an evil eye.

12 When righteous men do rejoice, there is great glory: but when the wicked rise, a man is <sup>21</sup> hidden.

13 He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but <sup>22</sup> whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.

14 Happy is the man that feareth alway: but he <sup>23</sup> that hardeneth his heart shall fall into mischief.

15 As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear; so is a wicked ruler over the poor people.

16 The prince that wanteth understanding is also a great oppressor: but he that hateth covetousness shall prolong his days.

17 A man that doeth violence to the blood of any person shall flee to the pit; let no man stay him.

18 Whoso walketh uprightly <sup>24</sup> shall be saved: but he that is perverse in his ways shall fall at once.

19 He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread: but he that followeth after vain persons shall have poverty enough.

20 A faithful man shall abound with blessings: but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be <sup>25</sup> innocent.

21 To have respect of persons is not good: for, for a piece of bread that man will transgress.

22 He <sup>26</sup> that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him.

23 He that rebuketh a man afterwards shall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue.

24 Whoso robbeth his father or his mother, and saith, It is no transgression; the same is the companion of a <sup>27</sup> destroyer.

25 He that is of a proud heart stirreth up strife: but he that putteth his trust in the LORD shall be made fat.

26 He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool: but whoso walketh wisely, he shall be delivered.

27 He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse.

28 When the wicked rise, men hide them-men make a great ado with the public profession of their attachment, there is much reason to question their sincerity; and to consider it rather as a curse than as a blessing. And "a contentious woman" is like an ostentatious friend: who soever attempts to silence her, may as well hush the wind, or stop the spreading of perfume which he grasps within his hand. Yet many are the advantages of society; for "as iron sharpeneth iron," (two knives, for instance, whetted against each other,) "so doth the countenance of a man his friend." There are advantages in familiar and instructive conversation, even beyond the study of books themselves: it tends to sharpen the wits, and to brighten the countenance of both parties.

With this we are disposed to connect the 19th verse, which has been variously interpreted. Our translators render it, "As in water face (answereth) to face, so doth the heart of man to man." Le Clerc, Durell, and many others, understand this of a man's actions discovering his heart; but Boothroyd explains it thus; that "there are the same natural powers and affections in one man as in another; and the same depravity is alike found in the hearts of all." This also accords with the remark of Bishop Patrick, that "a man may see himself while he looks at other men, as well as know other men by considering his own feelings." Now it is by conversation and friendly communion with each other, that we find out that God hath fashioned our hearts alike, (Ps. xxxiii. 13.) and that sin has alike depraved them.

This chapter concludes with a strong recommendation to rear flocks, which, from the time of the patriarchs, formed the favourite occupation of the Hebrews. (Gen. xlvii. 3.)

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1—28. General observations on the advantages of the righteous over the wicked.—The wicked man is a coward, "he fleeth when no man pursueth;" and yet, like most cowards, when he gets into power, he is a tyrant, like "a roaring lion and a ranging bear;" yea, he is like "a sweeping rain," which destroys the fruits of the earth, and "leaveth no food." On the other hand, "the righteous is bold as a lion," but his boldness groweth not to impiety; "he confesseth and forsaketh his sin, and feareth alway" to offend his Maker.

A great part of this chapter may be considered as referring to Scripture politics; "For (or by) the transgression of a land," that is, of a people, they become divided into many petty states, under separate chiefs; "but by a man (or men) of understanding, the state may (notwithstanding) be prolonged."

When it is said, (ver. 14.) "Happy is the man that feareth alway," we must not consider it as a blessing either upon the timid or cowardly, but upon the prudent and cautious: unless we apply it to the fear of God, and then it means a reverential fear of offending the Almighty.

Henry has some excellent remarks upon the 21st verse: "To have respect of persons is not good;" from which we shall extract the outline only. 1. "It is a fundamental error (says he) in the administration of judgment, to consider the parties concerned more than the merits of the cause; so as to favour one because he is a gentleman, or my countryman, or my friend, &c. 2. Those that are partial will be paltry. Having broken through the bounds of equity, at first, perhaps, for some great sum, they will at length stoop to receive any paltry bribe, here called contemptuously 'a morsel of bread.'"

Ver. 25. The hay.—Boothroyd, "The grass shooteth," &c.
Ver. 27. Goats' milk.—is in some cases preferred to cows' milk.—Orient. Cust.
CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 3. Which leaveth no food.—i. e. which sweeps away all the crops.

Ver. 7. He that is a companion of.—"He that feedeth" riotous men: Heb. "Gluttons;" Hodgson, "Parasites."

Ver. 9. His prayer . . . . abomination.—See ch. xv. 8.; xxi. 27.

Ver. 12. A man is hidden.—Parkhurst and Boothroyd, "Strip;" Gesenius and Holden, "Concealed."

Ver. 21. Piece of bread.—Erasmus observes, that this expression probably originated from the circumstance of holding out a piece of bread to a dog, in order to soothe him.—Bagster.

Ver. 27. He that hideth his eyes.—That is, from the distress, or the petition of the afflicted.

selves: but when they perish, the righteous increase.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Observations of public government, 15 and of private. 22 Of anger, pride, thievery, cowardice, and corruption.

1 HE, that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly <sup>b</sup> be destroyed, and that without remedy.

2 When the righteous are <sup>c</sup> in authority, the people <sup>d</sup> rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule, the people <sup>e</sup> mourn.

3 Whoso <sup>f</sup> loveth wisdom rejoiceth his father: but he <sup>g</sup> that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his substance.

4 The king by judgment establisheth the land: but <sup>h</sup> he that receiveth gifts overthroweth it.

5 A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet.

6 In the transgression of an evil man there is a <sup>i</sup> snare: but the righteous doth sing and rejoice.

7 The righteous considereth the cause of the poor: but the wicked regardeth not to know it.

8 Scornful men <sup>j</sup> bring a city into a snare: but wise men turn away <sup>k</sup> wrath.

9 If a wise man contendeth with a foolish man, whether he rage or laugh, there is no rest.

10 <sup>l</sup> The blood-thirsty hate <sup>m</sup> the upright: but the just seek his soul.

11 A fool uttereth all his mind: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.

12 If a ruler hearken to lies, all his servants are wicked.

13 The poor and the <sup>n</sup> deceitful man meet together: the Lord <sup>o</sup> lighteneth both their eyes.

14 The king that faithfully judgeth the poor, his throne shall be established <sup>p</sup> for ever.

15 The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame.

16 When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall.

17 Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 1—27. Observations on government, and on certain virtues and vices.—Solomon often inculcates the importance of wisdom, integrity, and justice, in magistrates and rulers. The national happiness depends upon it, and the people rejoice when such men are elevated to distinction; whereas, "when the wicked bear rule, the people mourn." This is particularly the case as to the poor: for "the righteous considereth their cause," while "the wicked regard not to know it." Their object is, not to investigate the merits of the case before them, but to secure the presents, or bribes, by which judges are too generally influenced in arbitrary countries, where their will is the only law.

"Scornful men, haughty and angry in their temper, inflame a whole city, whereas wise men seek to preserve peace and avert wrath. But in contending in judgment with the perverse and obstinate, even a wise man stands little chance of success; for whether the former be in a vein of passion or of ridicule, he will not be pacified; and however the latter may have the advantage in argument, the fool will often carry his point by dint of violence and noise: it is useless to reason with a fool in power. When, however, the poor man and the oppressor shall meet together before their Maker, (chap. xlii. 2.) then the Lord will 'enlighten both their eyes;' and they

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 2. In authority.—The Hebrew may refer to their increase either in number or in power.

Ver. 4. He that receiveth gifts.—See margin. When causes were heard by the principal priests, it is probable they were sometimes bribed by the oblations offered at the tabernacle; and this term continued to be applied to bribes of the secular judges.

Ver. 8. Bring a city into a snare.—See margin. Bishop Loveth, "Inflame a city," i. e. the inhabitants, which appears to be the true sense.

Ver. 13. The deceitful.—See margin; i. e. the covetous lender, who is always an oppressor.

Ver. 18. The people perish.—See margin; i. e. are stripped of all religion and good morals, as we see the heathen are. They "apostatize;" so Parkhurst.

Ver. 19. A servant.—That is, a wicked servant; a Canaanitish slave, probably.

Ver. 20. In his words.—See margin; the Hebrew comprehends both words and things: a man always in a hurry, speaks and acts before he thinks a A man of reproach.

b 1 Sa. 2. 34
c or, increased
d Ea. 8. 15.
e Ea. 3. 15.
f c. 10. 1.
g Lu. 15. 13, 30.
h a man of oblations.
i Job 13. 8, 10.
j or, set a city on fire.
k Ec. 22. 30.
l Men of blood.
m 2Ch. 18. 7. 1 Jn. 3. 12, 13.
n or, usurer Mat. 9. 9. 1 Co. 6. 10.
o Ep. 2. 1.
p Ps. 59. 2.
q 1 Sa. 3. 1. Am. 8. 11. 13.
r or, is made naked.
s Ps. 119. 2.
t or, matters.
u Da. 5. 20, 21. Mat. 22. 12. Ac. 12. 23. Jn. 4. 10.
v Ge. 12. 12. 20. 11.
w Ec. 7. 18.
x set on high.
y face of a ruler.
z Ps. 62. 12. a Ps. 73. 22.
b know. c 1s. 53. 8.
d purified. Ps. 12. 6.
e Ps. 84. 11. 115. 9. 11.
f Ec. 22. 18, 19.

18 Where there is no <sup>a</sup> vision, the people <sup>b</sup> perish: but <sup>c</sup> he that keepeth the law, happy <sup>d</sup> is he.

19 A servant will not be corrected by words: for though he understand he will not answer.

20 Seest thou a man that is hasty in his words? there is more hope of a fool than of him.

21 He that delicately bringeth up his servant from a child shall have him become his son <sup>e</sup> to the length.

22 An angry man stirreth up strife, and a furious man aboundeth in transgression.

23 A <sup>f</sup> man's pride shall bring him low: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit.

24 Whoso is partner with a thief hateth his own soul: he heareth cursing, and bewrayeth it not.

25 The <sup>g</sup> fear of man bringeth a snare: but <sup>h</sup> whoso putteth his trust in the Lord shall be <sup>i</sup> safe.

26 Many seek the <sup>j</sup> ruler's favour; <sup>k</sup> but every man's judgment cometh from the Lord.

27 An unjust man is an abomination to the just: and he that is upright in the way is abomination to the wicked.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Agur's confession of his faith. 7 The two points of his prayer. 10 The meanest are not to be wronged. 11 Four wisest generations. 15 Four things insatiable. 17 Favours are not to be despised. 18 Four things hard to be known. 21 Four things impoible. 24 Four things exceeding wise. 29 Four things stately. 32 Wrath is to be prevented.

THE words of Agur the son of Jakeh, even the prophecy: the man spake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal,

2 Surely I am more brutish <sup>a</sup> than any man, and have not the understanding of a man.

3 I neither learned wisdom, nor <sup>b</sup> have the knowledge of the holy.

4 Who hath ascended up into heaven, or descended? who hath gathered the wind in his fists? who hath bound the waters in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth? what <sup>c</sup> is his name, and what <sup>d</sup> is his son's name, if thou canst tell?

5 <sup>e</sup> ¶ Every word of God is <sup>f</sup> pure: he is a shield <sup>g</sup> unto them that put their trust in him.

6 Add <sup>h</sup> thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

will see that there is 'a God that judgeth righteously,' and will reward them both according to their works."

With one important verse which we have passed over, (ver. 18.) we shall conclude our observations on this chapter: "Where there is no (prophetic) vision," no divine revelation, there the people become corrupt, and "perish." This we remark, not merely to recollect our own obligations to the word of God, but also to excite our zeal in communicating that word to others. Always, however, let us recollect, and press on others, this important maxim, that no religion is useful that is not practical: "He that keepeth the law, happy is he!" "If ye know these things, (said our Lord to his disciples,) happy are ye if ye do them!" (John xiii. 17.)

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 1—33. The proverbs (or prophecy) of Agur.—Who this Agur was, neither Scripture nor tradition give us any account. Some Rabbins, ambitious to be wise above what is written, will needs have Agur to be Solomon; and some Christians explain the names Ithiel and Ucal of Jesus Christ. As, however, we wish to avoid this mystical trifling with the Scriptures, which we think both irreverent and dangerous, we shall content ourselves with taking up the apothegms in this chapter, as the sayings of a writer unknown; but whose character is sufficiently authenticated by his pro-

Ver. 21. Become his son.—That is, act with authority. Ver. 24. He heareth cursing.—These banditti were bound together by oaths and imprecations.

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 1. Agur.—This name does not occur elsewhere; but we read of one Ithiel, in Neh. xi. 7. —The prophecy.—Hebrew, Mussa; literally, "the burden;" i. e. a weighty and important saying, or discourse, delivered by divine authority, and in the prophetic style; an oracle. So Bp. Lancelot.

Ver. 2. Brutish.—Like a dumb brute, unintelligent and untaught. See Ps. xlix. 10; xcii. 6; xciv. 8, &c.

Ver. 3. Nor have the knowledge of the holy.—Those educated for the sacred offices.

Ver. 4. Who hath ascended? &c.—[By these sublime interrogations we are taught the impossibility of comprehending the essence and attributes of that infinite Being who is equally present in all space; to whom the air, whether in the gentle breeze or the tornado, is equally subject; who hath bound the waters of the sea, within certain limits, which they cannot overpass; and who hath firmly established the earth in its orbit.]—Bagster.

Two things have I required of thee; & deny me them not before I die:

Remove far from me vanity and lies: give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food <sup>as</sup> convenient for me:

9 Lest I be full, and I deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.

10 ¶ Accuse not a servant unto his master, lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty.

11 ¶ There is a generation that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.

13 There is a generation, O how lofty are their eyes! and their eyelids are lifted up.

14 There is a generation, whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw teeth as knives, to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

15 ¶ The horseleech hath two daughters, crying, Give, give. There are three things that are never satisfied, yea, four things say not, It is enough:

16 The grave; and the barren womb; the earth that is not filled with water; and the fire that saith not, It is enough.

17 ¶ The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.

6 withhold not from me.

h of my almsgiving.

i Ne. 9. 25, 26.

j belie.

k Hurt not with thy tongue.

l La. 18. 11, &c.

m Am. 3. 4. Hab. 3. 14.

n wealth.

o Hab. 2. 5.

p Ge. 9. 22, 25. Le. 20. 9. &c. 30. 30.

q or, brook.

r heart.

s a. 7. 14.

t Kl. 8. 12.

u wise made vice.

v Job. 38. 1, &c.

w a. 6. 6, 7.

x gathered together.

y girl in the loins, or, a horse.

18 ¶ There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:

19 The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid.

20 Such is the way of an adulterous woman; she eateth, and wipeth her mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness.

21 For three things the earth is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear:

22 For a servant when he reigneth; and a fool when he is filled with meat;

23 For an odious woman when she is married; and a handmaid that is heir to her mistress.

24 ¶ There be four things which are little upon the earth, but they are exceeding wise:

25 The ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer;

26 The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks;

27 The locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them by bands;

28 The spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces.

29 ¶ There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going:

30 A lion which is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any;

31 A greyhound; a he-goat also; and a king, against whom there is no rising up.

verbs being placed in the sacred canon; and at the same time, probably, with the last five chapters of Solomon's. All we can ascertain of Agur is, that he was a teacher, (probably in the schools of the prophets,) and that Ithiel and Ucal were his disciples. (See note ver. 1.)

From the humiliating language in which this man speaks of himself, it has been supposed that, like Amos, he had no regular education; yet this deficiency can hardly be inferred from his own language, since it is well known that men of the least pretensions are often men of the most knowledge. So Socrates modestly affirmed, "This only I know, that I know nothing." Our translators, however, have used a term (brutish) which, in the language of the present day, implies not only ignorance, but the want of civilization, which the original could hardly intend, but the want of eloquence and of science; his sense of which deficiency led him to compare himself to a dumb animal, as being destitute alike of language and of learning. If we explain this, however, of his want of human instruction, the proverbs before us will show that he was divinely taught; for the very next verse, and indeed the whole of the chapter, discovers a depth of inquiry and a sublimity of ideas that would not have disgraced even Solomon himself.

He begins with speaking of the Deity as omnipotent and omnipresent; and the question, "What is his name, and his son's name?" seems to imply not only a deep sense of the mysterious nature of God, but some knowledge also of a plurality in the divine Being. It appears to us, that though Agur might not have gone through the regular studies of the prophetic schools, he was well read in the Holy Scriptures, for which he appears to have had the highest reverence; and therefore says, "Every word of God is pure. . . . Add not thou unto his words, lest he reprove thee," &c.

Agur then discourses on prayer, in a manner that shows a pious, devoted, and elevated mind. He prays against the temptations peculiar to both the higher and the lower classes of society; prefers the golden mean, and, as we are taught to pray, that he might receive his "daily bread." (See Matt. vi. 11.) His prayer shows a deep sense of his own frailty, and the usually shifting her haunts, and changing her stratagems, to avoid detection; and, as to her own consciousness, has no sense of either crime or shame.

Ver. 23. An odious woman.—Hateful and hated, of course disquiets her family by her temper; as well as a handmaid, a female slave or concubine, who "succeeds" or rather "supersedes," or supplants "her mistress."

Ver. 25. The ants.—[The ants may truly be called a people, as they have houses, towns, public roads, &c.; and show their wisdom and prudence by preparing their meat in due season.]—Bagster.

Ver. 26. The conies.—a feeble folk.—These have been by many taken for rabbits, but which, it seems, are scarcely known in Judea; nor is the Hebrew term so rendered by any of the ancient versions. Bochart explains it of the Jerboa, or jumping mouse, a very sagacious little animal, well answering to the description. Dr. Shaw explains it of the Damun Israel, another sagacious little animal, abounding in mount Lebanon, and not unlike a rabbit; but Bruce is confident that it must mean the Ashkoko, which abounds in the same region, and resembles a rat without a tail; it is never seen but in the rocks, or seated upon great stones. But the description would accommodate to either of these animals. See Dr. Harris's Nat. Hist. [The shophan, a creature like a rabbit, though but a feeble animal, and incapacitated by its soft, tender feet, from digging, yet by its sagacity and judgment, builds its house in the holes and clefts of the rock; far more inaccessible than the burrows of the rabbit.]—Bagster.

Ver. 27. The locusts.—go forth by bands.—[These surprising animals, though they have no leader, yet, when they take wing, go forth by troops, some miles in circumference, and so dense as to darken the sun. See notes on Ex. x. 4, 13.]—Bagster.

Ver. 28. The spider.—This is a very different word from what is used for the spider in Job vii. 14, and Isa. lix. 5. And this interpretation is objected to, since the spider has no hands, and builds rather in hovels than in palaces. [Senamith, does not appear to denote the spider, whose usual name is akka-vish, but a kind of lizard, or neot, as Bochart contends; so the LXX. kalabotes, and Vulgate stellio, a lizard having specks on its back like stars, probably the one furnished her with claws resembling hands, with which she clings to the walls of houses. Bellonius mentions a lizard called sammamaton by the Greeks, which creeps into the walls of houses, and catches flies; Pliny speaks of the stellio as being in doors, windows, and chambers; and Somnini says, that a number of little gray lizards are to be seen in the houses in Egypt.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. A greyhound.—See margin. The Hebrew Zirzir, which occurs only here, signifies "girl in the loins," and gives a very good description of the greyhound, which Bochart and most others, consider as the animal intended; but some apply it to the horse, harnessed, (or girl about.) See Zech. x. 4.

Ver. 15. The horse-leech.—A creature remarkable for its blood-thirsty nature. The original word, which occurs only here, Holden remarks, thus signifies in Arabic, Syriac, and Chaldean; and is generally so understood by commentators.—Say not it is enough.—[As the horse-leech has two daughters, cruelly and thirst for blood, so the oppressor of the poor has two dispositions, rapacity and avarice, which never say they have enough:]

And like a leech, voracious of its food. Quite not its cruel hold till gorged with blood.—Francis.]—E.

Ver. 16. The earth that is not filled—or saturated; which seems to refer particularly to the sandy soil of the desert.

Ver. 19. The way of a man with a maid.—It is evident that the point in which the first three objects agree is, that they leave no trace behind them. The air and sea close immediately as the eagle or the ship pass through them; nor does the serpent make any impression on the rock over which it winds; so is it with an adulteress; "she wipes her mouth," and says, with an affection of innocence and simplicity, "I have done no wickedness;" and if there was no witness of her guilt, how is she to be convicted? The fourth case, therefore, ought to be similar: but it cannot be said that the illicit connexion of "a man with a maid" leaves no proof of the connexion; and this, therefore, cannot have been Agur's meaning. Many expositors explain this transaction between the sexes, as referring to the season of courtship, which, is with us, often a time of cunning and sleight, as Bishop Patrick expresses it; but it is a much simpler business in the East. A young man having seen a young woman who takes his fancy, as was the case with Samson, (though sometimes this is scarcely allowed,) reports it to his parents; if all parties consent, they are betrothed, and at a certain time, the young man marries and brings her home; but no opportunity is allowed for forming an intimacy, as with us, previous to the marriage. So that this, also, cannot be the sense intended.

Some expositors have therefore proposed a different rendering, sanctioned by several ancient versions, and critics of the first eminence, (as Schultens, Parichurst, &c.) namely, "the way of a man in his youth." To countenance this it may be remarked, 1. That this preserves the strict meaning of the preposition, (Beth), which is rendered in, with reference both to the air and sea, in the same verse. 2. That the character of the young men of that age, as represented by Solomon, in the first chapter of this book, explains their youthful conduct in a manner which elucidates this expression. It seems that the bandite which attended Saul, and David too, (in his persecution,) used to harbour in the caverns of that country, (some of which were very large,) and they were particularly careful to avoid being traced in their predatory adventures, 1 Sa. xxiii. 22, 23. 3. The term here used for man, (Geber), implies strength and vigour, and applies well to persons of this character, who were his hardy adventurers. 4. The whole of the passage thus explained, applies to an adulterous woman, who is so difficult to trace and so great in her crimes, as to be an eagle in the air, a ship in the sea, a serpent on the rock, or a hardy bandit in his adventures: for we are told, "her ways are moveable;" (chap. v. 6.) she is con-

32 ¶ If thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thyself, or if thou hast thought evil, lay <sup>2</sup> thy hand upon thy mouth.

33 Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood: so the <sup>a</sup> forcing of wrath bringeth forth strife.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Lemuel's lesson of chastity and temperance. 6 The afflicted are to be comforted and defended. 13 The praise and properties of a good wife.

THE words of king Lemuel, the prophecy that his mother <sup>a</sup> taught him.

2 What, my son? and what, the son of my womb? and what, the son of my vows?

3 Give not thy strength unto women, nor thy ways to that <sup>b</sup> which destroyeth kings.

4 It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink:

5 Lest <sup>c</sup> they drink, and forget the law, and <sup>d</sup> pervert the judgment of <sup>e</sup> any of the afflicted.

6 ¶ Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be <sup>f</sup> of heavy hearts.

7 Let him drink, and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more.

8 Open thy mouth <sup>g</sup> for the dumb in the cause of all <sup>h</sup> such as are appointed to destruction.

9 Open thy mouth, judge righteously, and plead the cause <sup>i</sup> of the poor and needy.

10 ¶ Who <sup>j</sup> can find a virtuous <sup>k</sup> woman? for her price <sup>l</sup> is far above rubies.

11 The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil.

12 She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life.

13 She seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands.

14 She is like the merchants' ships; she bringeth her food from afar.

<sup>z</sup> Job 40.4.
Ro. 3.19.

<sup>a</sup> c. 17.14.

<sup>a</sup> 2 Ti. 1.5.
3.15.

<sup>b</sup> Ho. 4.11.

<sup>c</sup> Hab. 2.5.

<sup>d</sup> alter.

<sup>e</sup> all the sons of affliction.

<sup>f</sup> bitter of
tongue.
1 Sa. 1.10.

<sup>g</sup> the sons
of.

<sup>h</sup> Job 29.15,
16.
Is. 1.17.
Je. 22.16.

<sup>i</sup> Ec. 7.28.

<sup>j</sup> c. 12.4.

<sup>k</sup> taketh.

<sup>l</sup> tasteth.

<sup>m</sup> spread-
eth.

<sup>n</sup> Ps. 41.1.
He. 13.16.

<sup>o</sup> or, double garments

<sup>p</sup> 1 Pe. 3.1-6

<sup>q</sup> or, gotten rickles.

<sup>r</sup> Ec. 7.13.
12.13.

<sup>a</sup> Mat. 7.16,
20.

15 She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens.

16 She considereth a field, and <sup>a</sup> buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.

17 She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms.

18 She <sup>b</sup> perceiveth that her merchandise <sup>c</sup> is good: <sup>d</sup> her candle goeth not out by night.

19 She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.

20 She <sup>e</sup> stretcheth out her hand to the <sup>f</sup> poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.

21 She is not afraid of the snow for her household: for all her household <sup>g</sup> are clothed with <sup>h</sup> scarlet.

22 She maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing <sup>i</sup> is silk and purple.

23 Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land.

24 She maketh fine linen, and selleth <sup>j</sup> it; and delivereth girdles unto the merchant.

25 Strength and honour <sup>k</sup> are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come.

26 She <sup>l</sup> openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue <sup>m</sup> is the law of kindness.

27 She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.

28 Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband <sup>n</sup> also, and he praiseth her.

29 Many daughters have <sup>o</sup> done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.

30 Favour <sup>p</sup> is deceitful, and beauty <sup>q</sup> is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall <sup>r</sup> be praised.

31 Give her <sup>s</sup> of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.

necessity of divine direction to preserve him both from sin and ruin.

He then divides his observations in threes and fours, as we may see instances in the patriarch Job, and the prophet Amos. (See Amos i. 6, 9, 11, 13.) He severely reprobates disobedient children, self-righteous hypocrites, the proud, and the slanderers. He next adverts to the horse-leech and her two daughters, to which he compares four insatiable things—the grave, the barren womb, the thirsty desert, and the devouring flame; neither of which ever say, "It is enough."

Four things are enumerated, which disturb the peace of mankind: "a servant" (or slave) when he assumes the reins of government, and a rich and pampered fool, who lives only to gratify his vulgar propensities. Also "an odious," ill-tempered woman, or an artful female slave, who supplants her mistress in the affections of her master; either of which is sure to tyrannize over all who are subjected to her control.

Four creatures are then brought forward, insignificant in size, but remarkable for sagacity; the ant, the cony, the locust, and the spider, or perhaps lizard; and four others, remarkable for strength and dignity of carriage. It is somewhat singular that a king should be made the last of these animals, and is only to be accounted for from an idea that the several virtues of these creatures all go to form the character of a great and wise prince; as, for instance, the industry of the ants, the ingenuity of the conies, the associated power of the locusts, the domestic character of the spider, or lizard; the strength of the lion, the activity of the greyhound, and the portly dignity of the he-goat, which, in the prophet Daniel, (chap. viii.) is considered to be an emblem of Alexander the Great, against whom there was indeed "no rising up."

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 1—31. The instructions of a mother to her royal son.—From the principle of monopolizing to their own nation the wisdom of all others, some Rabbinical writers have attributed these two last chapters to Solomon, under the names of Agur and Lemuel, but we conceive without the least authority. Of Agur we have already professed our ignorance, and Lemuel is to us equally unknown. All we can ascertain is, that his mother was a virtuous and intelligent woman, and that her son was a king, though at this time, probably, a minor. The words here delivered, are not pretended to be his own, though written down by him; but those which his mother taught him. The address begins with an animated apostrophe, "What, my son," &c. meaning, "What shall I say?" "What important instruction shall I now address to thee?" She then cautions him against intemperance, in either women or wine, as liable to make him forget the law, or pervert equity in giving judgment. The great use of wine, she tells him, is medicinal; to support the strength of those who were sinking under their afflictions, or to cheer the heart of those who were overwhelmed with grief. She next admonishes him to open his mouth, and plead the cause of the oppressed, who were unable to defend themselves.

What follows is a beautiful portrait of the virtuous woman and the faithful wife. We may reasonably infer, that in this she unintentionally portrayed her own character. To dilate it by an exposition, would only weaken its effect; and it needs no comment; "her own words, as well as works, shall praise her."

Ver. 13. She seeketh wool, &c.—It is certain that women of rank, not only among the Hebrews, but also among the Greeks and Romans, were thus laudably employed. See Orient. Cust. No. 1035—1037.

Ver. 19. Hands to the spindle.—[She takes the spindle in her right hand, by twisting which she twists the thread: while she holds the distaff, on which the wool or flax is rolled, in the guard of the left arm, and draws down the thread with the fingers of the left hand.]—Bagster.

Ver. 22. Silk.—Holden. "Fine linen." He supposes silk then unknown.

Ver. 23. Known in the gates—that is, he is a magistrate.

Ver. 29. Many daughters (i. e. of Israel) have done virtuously, &c.—This, and perhaps the following verses, may be considered as the commendation of her husband.

Ver. 31. Praise her in the gates—that is, her husband, who is well known in the gates, being clothed by her industry, this excites the commendation of his associates of the higher classes

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 1. The words of king Lemuel.—This line is so perplexing, that some learned men have concluded there must be some error in the text; and Dr. Boothroyd, by a change of one letter only, reads, "The words of his mother to the king." But then we have Lemuel again, verse 4, and those who reject the name in the first line, are obliged to make another conjectural emendation, to which we feel ourselves very averse. Who this Lemuel was, however, can only be conjectured. Most suppose it to have been Solomon, and the address given him by his mother, Bathsheba. But this also is mere supposition. Where we know nothing, it seems wisest to be silent.—The prophecy.—Not a prediction, but an oracle, expressing some weighty and important truth. See note on ver. 1, of the chapter preceding.

Ver. 10. Who can find? &c.—[This is the commencement of an alphabetical poem, each verse beginning consecutively with a letter of the Hebrew alphabet; in which we are presented with an admirable picture of a good wife, according to the primitive manners of the East.]—Bagster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF PROVERBS.

[THE wisdom of all ages, from the highest antiquity, has chosen to compress and communicate its lessons in short, pithy sentences, and in poetic language, which were readily conceived and easily retained, and circulated in society as useful principles, to be unfolded as occasion required. Indeed, such short maxims, comprehending much instruction in a few words, and carrying their own evidence with them, are admirably adapted to direct the conduct, without overburdening the memory, or perplexing the mind with abstract reasonings; and hence there are, in all countries, and in all languages, old proverbs, or common sayings, which have great authority and influence on the opinions and actions of mankind. Such maxims, however, want their proper basis,—the sanction of a divine original; and, being generally the mere result of worldly prudence, are often calculated to impose on the judgment, and to mislead those who are directed by them. But the proverbs in this book not only are far more ancient than any others extant in the world, and infinitely surpass all the ethical sayings of the ancient sages; but have also received a Divine imprimatur, and are infallible rules to direct our conduct in every circumstance of human life. They are so justly founded on the principles of human nature, and so adapted to the permanent interests of man, that they agree with the manners of every age; and are adapted to every period, condition, or rank in life, however varied in its complexion, or diversified by circumstances. Kings and subjects, rich and poor, wise and foolish, old and young, fathers and mothers, husbands and wives, sons and daughters, masters and servants, may here learn their respective duties, and read lessons of instruction for the regulation of their conduct in their various circumstances; while the most powerful motives, derived from honour, interest, love, fear, natural affection, and piety, are exhibited, to inspire an ardent love of wisdom and virtue, and the greatest detestation of ignorance and vice. These maxims are laid down so clearly, copiously, impressively, and in such variety, that every man who wishes to be instructed in his religious and moral duties, and among multitudes, those which he likes best. "He is wise," says St. Basil, "not only who hath arrived at a complete habit of wisdom, but who hath made some progress towards it; nay, who doth as yet but love it, or desire it, and listen to it. Such as these, by reading this book, shall be made wiser; for they shall be instructed in much divine, and in no less human learning. . . . It bridles the injurious tongue; corrects the wanton eye; and ties the unjust hand, in chains. It persecutes sloth; chastises all absurd desires; teaches prudence; raises man's courage; and represents temperance and chastity after such a fashion, that one cannot but have them in veneration."—Bagster.

ECCLESIASTES; OR, THE PREACHER.

[THE title of this Book is derived from the Septuagint, in which it is entitled ECCLESIASTES, which signifies a preacher; nearly corresponding to its name in the original, kohaleth, which may either mean the person assembling the people, or he who addresses them when convened. This book is generally ascribed to Solomon, and the Jews and Jerome hold that it was written by him in the decline of life, when brought to deep repentance for the idolatries into which he had been seduced. That Solomon was its author appears almost certain from several passages in the work itself, (see chap. I. 12, 16, II. 4—10, VII. 25—28, XII. 9, 10;) and the occurrence of foreign words and idioms, which has induced some to refer it to a later period, may be accounted for by the extended commerce of Solomon, and the circumstance of his connexion "with strange women," whose languages he probably acquired. It is evidently an inquiry into the CHIEF GOOD, or what can render a man happy; in discussing which Solomon first shows what is not happiness, and then what it is. Accordingly, the book has been very properly divided into two parts; in the former of which he shows, from his own experience, the vanity of all terrestrial objects and pursuits, of wisdom and knowledge, (apart from true religion,) of mirth and pleasure, of riches, magnificence, power, and wealth, interspersed with many counsels how the vanity or vexation of each may be abated, and frequent intimations that true wisdom is far preferable to all other acquisitions, and that a cheerful use of providential blessings is much better than covetousness, (chap. I. 2—VI. 9;) and in the latter part, he shows that true happiness is only to be found in a religious and virtuous life, which constitutes the truest wisdom, (chap. VI. 10—XII.). Here, indeed, the royal Preacher sometimes pauses to show the vanity of things incidentally mentioned; yet this part is chiefly occupied in teaching us where and how to seek present comfort and final happiness; inculcating a cheerful, liberal, and charitable use of temporal blessings, without expecting to derive from them any permanent or satisfactory delight; to be patient under unadvised evils; not to aim at perilous, arduous, and impracticable changes; to fill up the station allotted us, in a peaceable, equitable, and prudent manner; to be humble, contented, and affectionate; and to do good abundantly, and persevere in so doing, for the pleasure arising from it, and from the expectation of a gracious reward.]—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

1 The preacher sheweth that all human courses are vain: 4 because the creatures are restless in their courses, 9 they bring forth nothing new, and all old things are forgotten, 12 and because he hath found it so in the studies of wisdom.

THE words of the <sup>a</sup> Preacher, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; <sup>b</sup> all <sup>c</sup> is vanity.

3 What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

4 ¶ One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever.

5 The sun <sup>e</sup> also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and <sup>d</sup> hasteth to his place where he arose.

6 The wind <sup>e</sup> goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits.

7 All <sup>f</sup> the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea

A. M. 3027.
B. C. 977.

a c. 12. 8, 10.

b Ps. 39. 5, 6.
144. 4.
Mar. 8. 36, 37.

c Ps. 19. 5, 6.

d psalt.

e Jn. 3. 8.

f Ps. 104. 8, 9.

g to go.

h Pr. 27. 20.

i c. 7. 10.

j I Ki. 4. 1, &c.

is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return <sup>g</sup> again.

8 All things are full of labour; man cannot utter <sup>h</sup> it: the eye <sup>i</sup> is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.

9 ¶ The thing that hath been, it <sup>j</sup> is that which shall be; and that which is done <sup>j</sup> is that which shall be done: and <sup>j</sup> there is no new <sup>i</sup> thing under the sun.

10 Is there <sup>j</sup> any thing whereof it may be said, See, this <sup>j</sup> is new? it hath been already of old time, which was before us.

11 There is no remembrance of former things; neither shall there be <sup>j</sup> any remembrance of things that are to come with those that shall come after.

12 ¶ I the Preacher was king <sup>j</sup> over Israel in Jerusalem.

13 And I gave my heart to seek and search

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—18. The vanity of all earthly things, and the transitory nature of human life.—It is difficult to understand exactly the import of the term Preacher, as applied to Solomon, who was certainly not an Ecclesiastic; as we read, however, that there "came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all the kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom;" (1 Kings iv. 34.) and as when the Queen of Sheba came, it was with "a very great train." (chap. x. 2.) it should seem that he must have collected large audiences around him, whenever he delivered his oracular discourses; and from this circumstance, probably, he derived the name of Preacher.

Solomon had said, "In all labour there is profit;" that is, it turneth to some present temporal use, in opposition to vain and empty talk; (Prov. xiv. 23.) yet when we consider the transient nature of all human enjoyments, and of human life itself, we may well ask, Of what profit is it? and what doth it avail? "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity!" The daily and annual courses of the sun, the perpetual shiftings of the wind, and the running and returning of the rivers to and from the sea, all represent the changes to which man and his concerns are continually exposed; and all admonish him to look for another state of things, to which, whether he is sensible of it or not, he is as surely hastening, as the sun, the wind, or the rivers in their course.

On this ground it is that we say, "there is nothing new under the sun." It may be new to us; but "we are of yesterday, and know nothing." (Job vii. 9.) What strikes us as a novelty, may have been familiar to ages before the flood, though we have no record of it; and many things known to us, when they shall recur again, may appear equally new and strange to our posterity.

south, and turning about unto the north. The wind whirleth about continually, &c. Allowing, in the former part, to the apparent daily motion of the sun from east to west, and to his annual course through the signs of the Zodiac.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Is not full—Hodgson, "Doth not overflow."

Ver. 9. The thing that hath, &c.—[Every thing in the economy of nature has its revolutions: day and night, summer and winter, heat and cold, rain and drought, seed time and autumn, with the whole system of corruption and generation, alternately succeed each other; so that "whatever hath been is that which shall be," and there is really, physically, and philosophically nothing absolutely new "under the sun."—Bagster.

Ver. 11. No remembrance.—[In order to obviate the objection to the position laid down in the last verse, the royal preacher observes, that there is no remembrance of many events in former times, and that the same oblivion will extend to things in future. Many ancient transactions have been lost because not recorded; and of many that have been recorded the records are lost.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. I . . . was—or "have been" king. Hodgson, "I whereign."

out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven: this sore travail hath<sup>k</sup> God given to the sons of man to be exercised therewith.

14 I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

15 That<sup>m</sup> which is crooked cannot be made straight: and<sup>n</sup> that which is wanting<sup>o</sup> cannot be numbered.

16 I communed with mine own heart, saying, Lo, I am come to great estate, and have gotten more<sup>p</sup> wisdom than all they that have been before me in Jerusalem: yea, my heart had<sup>q</sup> great experience of wisdom and knowledge.

17 And<sup>r</sup> I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit.

18 For<sup>s</sup> in much wisdom is much grief: and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

CHAPTER II.

1 The vanity of human courses in the works of pleasure. 12 Though the wise be better than the fool, yet both have one event. 18 The vanity of human labour, in leaving it they know not to whom. 24 Nothing better than joy in our labour; but that is God's gift.

I SAID<sup>a</sup> in my heart, Go to now, I will prove thee with<sup>b</sup> mirth, therefore enjoy<sup>c</sup> pleasure: and, behold, this also is vanity.

2 I said of<sup>d</sup> laughter, It is mad: and of mirth, What doeth it?

3 I sought in my heart to<sup>e</sup> give myself unto wine, yet acquainting my heart with wisdom; and to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven<sup>f</sup> all the days of their life.

4 I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards:

5 I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits:

Solomon then adverts to his own experience. He had been many years "king over Israel," and in his early life, he had devoted himself to study and inquiry: but alas! what he gained in knowledge, he lost in humility and virtue. His heart was "lifted up" within him, and he said, "Lo, I am come to great estate, and have more wisdom than all they that were before me in Jerusalem;" and then his knowledge degenerated into speculation; and speculations, applied to no good practical purpose, are nearly allied to "madness and folly," because they are a waste of time and talents. "O how many years have I wasted," said the learned Grotius, "in laboriously doing nothing!"

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—26. The vanity of carnal pleasure, and of wealth, and of setting the heart upon them.—In the detail of his life and experience, Solomon now informs us, that he turned his mind to every kind of luxury. He began first with conviviality; a temptation to which studious men, wearied with the pursuit of knowledge, are not unfrequently enticed. A little experience, however, convinced him that this also is vanity. Excessive levity borders on insanity; and what good

Ver. 15. That which is crooked.—(That is, no human power, sagacity, or industry, can rectify that which is naturally perverse in human nature; or supply, or even number up, the wants and deficiencies of man, or those things which are wanting to felicity.)—Bagster.

Ver. 17. And to know madness and folly.—The original, separately considered, may certainly admit a much milder version; so Dathe renders the two last words, "matters splendid and profound," and Boothroyd, "excellence and prudence;" but Holden prefers the common version, as agreeing best with the context, and the use of the same words in other chapters; as chap. ii. 12.—vii. 25.—ix. 3.—x. 13.

Ver. 18. Much grief.—[The pursuit, or even possession of wisdom, or knowledge, by which a man is enabled to distinguish good from evil, avails nothing to solid happiness, but even serves to embitter life; as nothing can be more afflicting to a rational and feeling mind, than to see, and yet not be able to reform, the vices and disorders of his fellow-creatures.]—Bagster.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Go to now.—Boothroyd, "Come now."

Ver. 2. It is mad.—This phrase, having no verb in the original, may be differently rendered. Hodgson and Boothroyd read it interrogatively, "Art thou mad?" [Solomon is not speaking here of a sober enjoyment of the things of the world, but of intemperate pleasure, whose two attendants, laughter and mirth, are introduced by a beautiful prosopopoeia, as two persons, whom he treats with the utmost contempt.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. I sought in my heart.—Boothroyd, "I examined my heart, whether to give," &c.—To give myself unto wine.—See margin. This seems to be a Bacchanalian phrase, meaning, "to fill my skin with wine," and alludes to the ancient custom of keeping wine, &c. in skins.

Ver. 6. Pools of water.—These are said still to exist, and Messrs. Buckingham and Joliffe, two of the latest travellers in Palestine, describe them to be three, in a direct line above one another, as the locks of a canal and flowing k Ge. 3.19.

l or, afflict them.
m c. 7.13.
n defect.
o Job. 11.6.
p 1 Ki. 4.29.
q seen much.
r c. 7.23, 25.
s 1 Th. 5.21.
t c. 12.12.
u Lu. 12.19, 20.
v c. 8.15.
w Tit. 3.3.
x Pr. 14.13.
y draw my flesh with.
z Pr. 20.1.
a the number of the days of.
b sons of my.
c 1 Ki. 9.28.
d 10.10, &c.
e instrument and instruments.
f 2 Ch. 9.11.
g c. 3.22.
h 1 Jn. 2.16, 17.
i n. c. 11.8.
j o 1 Ti. 6.6.
p c. 7.25.
q or, in those things which have.
r there is an excellency in wisdom more than in.
s c. 7.12.
t Mal. 3.18.
u 4.1, 2.
v Pr. 17.24.
w Ps. 49.10.
x to me, even to me.
y Ex. 16.8.

6 I made me pools of water, to water there with the wood that bringeth forth trees:

7 I got me servants and maidens, and had<sup>a</sup> servants born in my house; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me:

8 I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces: I gat me men-singers and women-singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as musical instruments, and that of all<sup>b</sup> sorts.

9 So I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem: also my wisdom remained with me.

10 And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour: and<sup>c</sup> this was my portion of all my labour.

11 Then<sup>d</sup> I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all<sup>e</sup> was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit<sup>f</sup> under the sun.

12 ¶ And I turned myself to behold wisdom, and<sup>g</sup> madness, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king? even<sup>h</sup> that which hath been already done.

13 Then I saw that<sup>i</sup> wisdom<sup>j</sup> excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.

14 The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also that<sup>k</sup> one event happeneth to them all.

15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it happeneth<sup>l</sup> even to me; and why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart, that this also is vanity.

16 For there is no remembrance<sup>m</sup> of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is in the days to come shall all be is derived from mere merriment? Thus he was disappointed in his expectations from mirth and wine, though still he did not give up the pursuits of knowledge.

Solomon next applied himself to building palaces, planting gardens, and forming pools of water. To his pleasure grounds was added an extensive agricultural establishment, and he became a feeder of cattle and of flocks. He collected also prodigious riches, and "the peculiar treasure of the kings and provinces," by which we may probably understand, works of peculiar art and curiosity, which subjects could not purchase: among these might be included, idols of gold and silver, worshipped in all the countries around him, and which afterwards proved to him a deadly snare. He formed also a splendid establishment of slaves and servants, with singing men and singing women, and "the delights of the sons of men;" so that he withheld not from his eyes, or from his heart, any thing that could yield him gratification.

What is meant by "the delights of the sons of men," appears difficult to decide, as may be seen in our notes. Two reasons incline us to consider the expression as referring to the into each other. They are said to be severally 3, 4, and 500 feet in length; all about 200 feet wide, lined with stone, and supplied by two springs at a small distance. The wood that bringeth forth trees.—Bishop Loath, "The grove flourishing with trees."

Ver. 7. I got me.—Hodgson, "I bought." The Hebrew term (kaniati) is applied to the purchasing of slaves, Lev. xxv. 50.—Servants born, &c.—i. e. the children of slaves were slaves also.—Great and small cattle—Hodgson, "Herds and flocks."

Ver. 8. The peculiar treasure of kings; and of the provinces.—See 1 Kings iv. 21.—2 Chron. ix. 9, 10.—The delights of the sons of men.—"Musical instruments," &c. Hol. Siddah and Siddah; but what these terms mean, is a matter of great uncertainty: we shall give the opinions of the most able critics. 1. Bishop Patrick and Dr. Boothroyd adhere nearly to our popular translation; the latter rendering it, "the sweetest instruments of music," chiefly on the ground of its according best with the context, which speaks of singers; otherwise the words themselves seem to have no such meaning. 2. Desvoignes and others (deriving from a root which signifies to enslave) understand it to mean female captives; but these are included in ver. 7. 3. Calmes's gloss, is "fields, cultivated and uncultivated;" but these also seem included in the preceding context. 4. Parishurst (guided by the LXX.) explains it of cup-bearers, male and female; but these are emphatically, "the delights of the sons of men?" 5. Gesenius (after Aben Ezra) understands it of ladies for his Harem; viz. "a wife and wives," including concubines of every description. It may seem strange to a mere English reader, that these words should admit of such various interpretations; but the fact is, that they occur only in this place, and their derivation is very doubtful. We prefer the latter, and our reasons will be found in the exposition.

Ver. 16. No remembrance . . . for ever.—Boothroyd, "No perpetual memorial." So Holden.

forgotten. And how dieth <sup>a</sup> the wise man? as the fool.

17 Therefore I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

18 ¶ Yea, I hated all my labour which I had <sup>a</sup> taken under the sun: because I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me.

19 And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet <sup>a</sup> shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have showed myself wise under the sun. This is also vanity.

20 Therefore I went about to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun.

21 For there is a man whose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledge, and in equity; yet to a man that hath not laboured therein shall he <sup>a</sup> leave it for his portion. This also is vanity and a great evil.

22 For what <sup>b</sup> hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?

23 For all his days are <sup>c</sup> sorrows, and his travail grief; yea, his heart taketh not rest <sup>d</sup> in the night. This is also vanity.

24 ¶ There is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he <sup>e</sup> should make his soul enjoy good in his labour. This also I saw, that it <sup>f</sup> was from the hand of God.

25 For who can eat, or who else can hasten hereunto, more than I?

26 For God giveth to a man that is good <sup>g</sup> in his sight, wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather and to heap up, <sup>h</sup> that he may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

CHAPTER III.

1 By the necessary change of times, vanity is added to human travail. 11 There is an excellency in God's works. 16 But as for man, God shall judge his works there, and here he shall be like a beast.

TO every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

2 A time to <sup>a</sup> be born, and a time to <sup>b</sup> die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

3 A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up;

4 A time <sup>c</sup> to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to <sup>d</sup> dance;

5 A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; a time to <sup>e</sup> embrace, and a time to <sup>f</sup> refrain <sup>g</sup> from embracing;

6 A time to <sup>h</sup> get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

7 A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to keep <sup>i</sup> silence, and a time to <sup>j</sup> speak;

8 A time to love, and a time to <sup>k</sup> hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

9 What profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboureth?

10 I have seen the travail, which God hath given to the sons of men to be exercised in it.

11 ¶ He hath made every thing beautiful in his time: also he hath set the world in their heart, so that no man can find <sup>l</sup> out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end.

12 ¶ I know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, and to do <sup>m</sup> good in his life.

x He.9.27.
y laboured.
z 1 Kl.12.8, &c.
a give.
b Mat.16.26
c Job 5.7. 14.1. Ac.14.22. d Pa.127.2. c.8.16.
e or, de-light his senses.
f c.5.18,19.
g before him.
h Gn.7.1. Lu.1.6.
i Job 27.16, Pr.13.22. 28.8.
a bear.
b He.9.27.
c Ro.12.15.
d Pa.150.4.
e Co.7.3.
f be far from.
g Ex.19.15. Joel 2.16.
h or, seek:
i Am.5.13.
j Job 32.4, &c.
k Pa.139.21. Lu.14.26. Re.2.2.
l Job 11.7,8. Ro.11.33.
m Pa.37.3.

females of Solomon's Harem. 1. We know of no other luxury so universal, or so natural to "the sons of men," as their attachment to the female sex. 2. As to "musical instruments," of which it is difficult to make the text speak, they were seldom or never used at this early period, (except drums and trumpets,) but as the accompaniments of the human voice, and being played by the singers themselves, are therefore implied in the preceding clause. 3. Unless we take the expression as referring to his Harem, we have, in all his confessions, no allusion to this extraordinary establishment, the chief monument of his folly, and the cause of his declension from true religion. This will be altogether unaccountable, if we consider this book as the evidence of his repentance, and intended to guard others against the same errors.

After making these confessions, the wise man very naturally looks back, and laments his folly in seeking happiness in these terrestrial enjoyments, which all end in disappointment, in "vanity and vexation of spirit." They cannot, as Dr. Boothroyd remarks, "quiet a guilty conscience, comfort a drooping spirit, ease a dying body, or save an immortal soul."

In balancing his reflections, and reviewing the present state of things in connexion with the designs of Heaven, the wise man concludes, that it is good for a man to enjoy the fruits of his labour, and the gifts of providence, within the limits of his word, for so far "to enjoy, is to obey;" avoiding, on the one hand, the excess of luxury, and on the other, idle speculations, and immoderate cares. To the good man, God giveth all the wisdom, and knowledge, and joy, suited to his present state; while to the sinner accrues only disappointment, in not being suffered to enjoy the fruit of his anxiety. "This also is vanity and vexation of spirit."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—22. A time for all things.—There are no natural actions but may be proper at certain times, and under certain circumstances! so far as these are under our control, our duty and business is to time them; not to plant, for instance, when we should pluck up; nor to pluck up when we should plant, and so forth; for "every thing is beautiful in its season;" "and there is a time for every purpose under heaven."

The works here alluded to are placed in pairs, by way of contrast; and thus placed, may serve to illustrate one another. Thus there is a time for being born, and a time to die, both of which are equally foreign to our control; and, generally speaking, we have no more election in one than in the other; which applies to other animals, as well as man. So as to man, there is a time to express his passions and feelings, in harmony with the circumstances around him; to weep and lament in certain cases of affliction; and in the day of festivity to smile, or laugh, or even to leap and dance for joy.

In the 11th verse we are told, in our translation, that God hath "set the world in man's heart." That men have set their heart upon the world is, indeed, clear enough; but that God himself hath placed it there, is not so easy to explain. Lord Bacon considers the mind of man as a mirror, in which the images of all terrestrial things are received and reflected, and Dr. Boothroyd seems to have a similar idea; but the rendering given by Peters, Desvoeux, and Hales, seems both more intelligible and consistent. God has placed in the heart of man, yea, of all men, some anticipation of a future state, or a "for ever," an eternity. This gives a scope and magnitude to the proceedings of providence, which at once raises our admiration, and confounds our speculations. "I know," says the wise man, "that whatever God doth, it shall be for ever;" it needs none of our improvements, or repairs.

Ver. 7. A time to rend—namely, to destroy old, worn-out garments, and to make new ones.

Ver. 9. What profit, &c.—That is, how vain are all our labours and anxieties, seeing we are subject to so great a variety of changes and disappointments! See chap. 1. 3.

Ver. 11. He hath set the world in their heart.—The word Olam, here rendered world, is the same that, in ver. 14, and in many other passages, is rendered "for ever;" and the sense here given it by the Rabbins, is relinquished by the best modern critics, though they are not agreed in adopting a substitute. The word is sometimes used for something secret, (as Psalm xc. 8, and elsewhere.) Parkhurst therefore renders it "obscurity," (and is followed by Holden.) and Dr. Hodgson, "darkness." We confess, however, that we are inclined to prefer the more common and established rendering of this word, as relating to eternity," which is ably justified by Causset and Peters, and employed by Desvoeux, in his translation; though we should rather adopt the words "for ever," as the original term is rendered, in five or six other places of this book; "He hath set for ever in their heart;" i. e. a sense of a future and eternal state. (See chap. 4. ii.—16.—iii. 14.—ix. 6, &c.) So Dr. Hales, "He hath set futurity in their heart." Dr. Boothroyd has preserved the term "world" and given to the clause a new and ingenious turn: "He hath put it in their hearts"

Ver. 17. I hated life—Hodgson and Boothroyd, "I was disgusted with life;" Holden, "I was weary of life." So in the verse following.

Ver. 24. There is nothing better, &c.—This is another passage of great difficulty. Dr. Hodgson renders it interrogatively, "Is it not then good for man to eat and drink; and amidst all his toil, to give his soul recreation?" Holden, "There is no good in the man who eats and drinks;" &c. i. e.; "he has no perfect enjoyment." See exposition.

Ver. 25. Who can eat, or who else can hasten?—That is, who can seek with more eagerness than I have done, either laborious study, or luxurious pleasure; yet all terminates in vanity and vexation.—More than I.—Several MSS. and versions read, (by a slight alteration,) "without him;" meaning, that no man can enjoy even the common blessings of Providence, but as they come from the hand of God. But we consider this alteration as doubtful and unnecessary.

CHAP. III. Ver. 2. A time to be born.—See margin. But this is not adopted by any modern translator of repute.

Ver. 3. A time to kill—that is, judicially, as in the case of murderers; but Bishop Patrick understands it of disease, a time for sickness and for health.

Ver. 5. To cast away stones—that is, out of our vineyards and gardens; and again a time to gather them together, to form roads, or fences. Bishop Patrick.

13 And also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it <sup>is</sup> the gift of God.

14 I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be <sup>for ever</sup>: nothing <sup>can</sup> be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him.

15 That which hath been is <sup>now</sup>; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is <sup>past</sup>.

16 ¶ And moreover I saw <sup>under the sun</sup> the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there.

17 I said in my heart, God shall judge <sup>the</sup> righteous and the wicked: for there is a time there for every purpose and for every work.

18 ¶ I said in my heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that <sup>God</sup> might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are <sup>beasts</sup>.

19 For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast: for all <sup>is</sup> vanity.

20 All go unto one place; and all <sup>are</sup> of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

21 ¶ Who knoweth the spirit of <sup>man</sup> that goeth <sup>upward</sup>, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?

22 ¶ Wherefore <sup>I</sup> perceived that there is nothing better, than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that <sup>is</sup> his portion: for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

CHAPTER IV.

1 Vanity is increased unto men by oppression, 4 by envy, 5 by idleness, 7 by covetousness, 9 by selfishness, 13 by selfishness.

SO I returned, and considered all the oppressions that are done under the sun: and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the <sup>side</sup> u c.2.24.

o Ja.1.17.
p Pr.30.6.
q c.1.9.
r driven away.
s c.5.8.
Je.5.1,2.
t Mat.25.32.
Ro.2.6,8.
2 Co.5.10.
2 Th.1.6,10.
u or, they might clear God and see.
Ps.51.4.
v Ps.49.12, 73.22.
w Ge.3.19.
x of the sons of man.
y his ascending.
z c.12.7.
a c.2.24.
a hand.

b Job 3.11, &c.
c.6.3.
c all the righteousness of.
d this is the envy of a man from.
e Ge.37.4, 11.
f Pr.6.10.
g Pr.15.16, 17.
h Pr.27.20, 1 Jn.2.16.
i Ps.39.6.
j knoweth not to be.

of their oppressors there was power; but they had no comforter.

2 Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead, more than the living which are yet alive.

3 <sup>Yea</sup>, better <sup>is</sup> he than both they, which hath not yet been, who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun.

4 ¶ Again, I considered all travail, and <sup>every</sup> right work, that <sup>for</sup> this a man is envied <sup>of</sup> his neighbour. This <sup>is</sup> also vanity and vexation of spirit.

5 ¶ The fool foldeth <sup>his</sup> hands together, and eateth his own flesh.

6 ¶ Better <sup>is</sup> a handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.

7 ¶ Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun.

8 There is one <sup>alone</sup>, and there <sup>is</sup> not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet <sup>is</sup> there no end of all his labour; neither <sup>is</sup> his eye satisfied with riches; neither saith he, For <sup>whom</sup> do I labour, and bereave my soul of good? This <sup>is</sup> also vanity, yea, it <sup>is</sup> a sore travail.

9 ¶ Two <sup>are</sup> better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour.

10 For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but wo to him that <sup>is</sup> alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.

11 Again, if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm <sup>alone</sup>?

12 And if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

13 ¶ Better <sup>is</sup> a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king, who <sup>will</sup> no more be admonished.

14 For out of prison he cometh to reign whereas also he <sup>that</sup> is born in his kingdom becometh poor.

In the course of this chapter we have farther references to a future and a final judgment; when all things crooked shall be made straight, and when (but not before) the plan of Providence will be seen complete. In the mean time it is important that man should know his rank and place in the scale of being: that, as to his body, he is a mere animal, endowed with the same powers and sensibility as other animals; but not with the same instinct, which in man seems very inferior to that of brutes; but, on the other hand, he is endued with a rational and immortal soul, which is denied to them, but gives to him a decided superiority over all the animal creation. In its present state, the soul of man is always aspiring to "a something unpossessed;" and at death, its destiny is far different from that of brutes: for "the spirit of a man goeth upward," and "returneth to God who gave it;" while the spirit of a mere animal "goeth downward," and becomes extinct. (See Gen. i. 24.—ii. 7. Eccles. xii. 7.)

As to man's present circumstances, however, considering him merely as an animal, "all things happen alike to all;—as one dieth, so dieth the other. All go to one place;" so that man, as an animal, "hath no pre-eminence above a beast for all is vanity."

The preacher now returns to his former position, that "nothing is better," as regards the present life, than that a man should "rejoice in his own labours;" that he should receive all the blessings bestowed upon him with gratitude, and humbly imitate the divine bounty, by contributing to others, according to his means, and their necessities. "I know (says he) that there is nothing better than for a man (as Dr. Boothroyd renders it) to rejoice and do good in his life." This, by the bye, may suggest another useful hint, that men should do good in their lifetime, and not ridiculously make a merit of giving away at death, what they no longer can retain.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1.—16. The evils of oppression, envy, idleness, covetousness, &c.—On viewing the character and situation of mankind, the first circumstance likely to strike us, as it did Solomon, is the forlorn state of the poorer classes. "Behold the tears of the oppressed, and they had no comforter!" We should not, however, forget the doctrine of the preceding chapter, that "God shall judge the righteous and the wicked;"

(to survey) the world."—So that—rather, "without which;" i.e. without the doctrine of a future state, the providence of God is wholly unintelligible. Job viii. 11.

Ver. 15. God requireth that which is past.—See margin. Dr. Hodgson, "God causeth all things to revolve;" Dr. Boothroyd, "God bringeth again what is past."

Ver. 16. Place of righteousness—rather, of justice, as corresponding to judgment.

Ver. 18. That God might manifest them.—See margin. But we prefer the following, as a more correct and perspicuous version: "I said in my heart, concerning the affairs of the sons of men, that God's design is to prove them, and to show them that they are" no better than the beasts. To this effect Hodgson and Boothroyd.

Ver. 19. One thing befalleth them.—[Animal life is the same both in man and beast: they respire in the same way; and when they cease to respire, life becomes extinct, and they return to the dust whence they were taken; so that in these things, "man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity." But, as none can fully comprehend, so, alas! few properly consider, the difference between the rational and immortal soul of man, which, after the death of the body, ascends to God who gave it, and the spirit or life of the beast, which is extinct with the body when it returns to the earth.—Baxter.

Ver. 21. Who knoweth?—Some versions make this a query, "Who knoweth whether?" &c. but chap. xii. 7. decides this: "The spirit of man returneth unto God."

Ver. 22. His own works—his various labours.—Who shall bring him?—that is, bring him back from the grave, to see what comes of his labours when he is dead.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. So I returned and considered—that is, I considered again.—On the side of their oppressors there was power; but they (i.e. the oppressed) had no comforter.

Ver. 4. All travail—That is, labour.—And every right work—every thing that is ingenious, successful, or praiseworthy; for this (or such) a man is envied, or is the envy of, &c.

Ver. 5. Eateth his own flesh.—[i.e. with envy, (see ver. 4.) though too idle to follow his neighbour's example. So in some lines attributed to Virgil, it is said of envy, that "She drinks up the whole blood, while devouring the members."—Baxter. So we say, proverbially, "Devoured with laziness," and with its natural consequence, hunger.

Ver. 8. There is one alone—Hodgson, "A man single, and without companion."

Ver. 12. Threefold cord.—[This is well illustrated by the fable of the dying father, who, to show his sons the advantages of union, gave them a bundle of twigs, which could not be broken when bound together, but were easily snapped asunder one by one.—Baxter.

Ver. 13. Who will no more be admonished.—See margin. Of this we have seen some striking instances, in which reverses of fortune have made men only more perverse.

Ver. 14. Whereas also—Boothroyd, "Yet in his own kingdom he was born poor." [This is probably an allusion to some fact with which we are unacquainted. History furnishes many instances of mean persons raised to sovereign authority; and of kings being reduced to the meanest offices, and to a morsel. Agrippa mounted the throne of Israel after having been long in prison, (Josephus,) and similar instances are not wanting in modern times.—Baxter]

15 I considered all the living which walk under the sun, with the second child that shall stand up in his stead.

16 There is no end of all the people, even of all that have been before them: they also that come after shall not rejoice in him. Surely this also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

CHAPTER V.

1 Vanities in divine service, 8 in murmuring against oppression, 9 and in riches. 13 Joy in riches is the gift of God.

KEEP <sup>a</sup>thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear, than to give the sacrifice <sup>b</sup> of fools: for they consider not that they do evil.

2 Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thy heart be hasty to utter any <sup>c</sup> thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be <sup>d</sup> few.

3 For a dream cometh through the multitude of business; and a fool's voice is known by multitude of words.

4 When thou vowest a vow <sup>e</sup> unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure <sup>f</sup> in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed.

5 Better <sup>g</sup> is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.

6 Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou before the angel, <sup>h</sup> that it was an error: wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thy hands?

7 For in the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities: but fear <sup>i</sup> thou God.

8 <sup>j</sup> If <sup>k</sup> thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the <sup>l</sup> matter: for he <sup>m</sup> that is higher than the highest regardeth; and there be <sup>n</sup> higher than they.

otherwise we shall give into the language of despondency, and prefer death to life, and the unborn to both, as was the case with Job, and with the Preacher in the passage now before us. (Compare Job iii. throughout.)

After the oppressor, the writer no less reprobates the envious and malignant person, who cannot see the success or prosperity of a neighbour, but with an envious eye. The slothful fool is next placed before us, with folded hands and a vacant countenance. And the verse following is supposed to be his language, declaring that a small quantity of food, without fatigue or bustle, is better than twice as much earned by labour and vexation.

The next portrait is "one alone," and we do not recollect a companion to it in any part of Scripture. It is that of a bachelor, not only without a child, but without a brother, or a kinsman, either to participate or succeed to his wealth. Yet is he not satisfied with his riches, nor does he properly reflect, "For whom do I labour, and bereave my soul of good? This also is vanity!"

We are next called upon to consider the advantages of society, in opposition to the solitary and unhappy being just noticed. "Two are better than one;" and by the same rule, three better than two, for a threefold cord is not quickly broken. Many also are the comforts and advantages to be derived from associating in societies and families. "A married life," said Dr. S. Johnson, "has most trials; but a single life hath no comforts."

The concluding verses refer to some of those political revolutions frequent in arbitrary countries, but from which we are happily exempted, by having a constitution around which we can rally, and in which are happily blended the principles of religious and civil liberty, with those of social order, and an established government: for this we are bound both to praise

9 ¶ Moreover the profit of the earth is for all: the king himself is served by the field.

10 He ¶ that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity.

11 When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?

12 The sleep of a labouring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

13 There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their ¶ hurt.

14 But those riches perish by evil travail: and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

15 As ¶ he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

16 And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and what profit hath he that hath laboured for the ¶ wind?

17 All his days also he eateth in darkness, and he hath much sorrow and wrath ¶ with his sickness.

18 ¶ Behold that which I have seen: ¶ it is good and comely for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the sun all ¶ the days of his life, which God giveth ¶ him: for it is his portion.

19 Every man ¶ also to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice in his labour; this is the gift of God.

and pray: "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces!"

CHAP. V. Ver. 1-20.—Cautions as to religious worship.—Enter cautiously and reverently. Though we do not practise the prostration used in the East, our deportment ought never to savour of trifling or indifference. "If an angel had appointed to meet me," says good Baxter, "I should be full of awe; how much more, when I am about to meet with God!" Yet how often do we see gay young persons entering the house of God with as much levity, and with less decency, than they would enter into a ball room.—"If angels tremble, 'tis at such a sight!"

To this caution it is added, "Be more ready to hear than to give the sacrifice of fools;" and what is that, but a religious rite without devotion? Under the Jewish law, the people brought their sacrifices to the priests, and waited in the outer court to offer prayers, that should ascend to heaven with the smoke and incense of their offerings. We are favoured to enter the inner court. Our great High Priest is waiting to intercede for us; and shall we turn our backs, or withdraw our attention (which is the same thing) from our Saviour and our God?—God forbid!

"Be not rash . . . to utter a word before God." He is in heaven, and thou art on earth; He sitteth on the throne of glory, thou liest, as a suppliant at his footstool; "therefore let thy words be few. For (as) a dream cometh through the multitude of business, (so) is a fool's voice known by the multitude of (his) words." (See Matt. vi. 7, 8.)

Speaking of vows, the wise man remarks, that God "hath no pleasure in fools;" he is a fool, therefore, who vows and pays not. Such fools, also, are they who vow what is impracticable or unlawful: such vows, in the church of Rome, have occasioned abundance of sin. Such fools also are they who

Ver. 15. I considered all the living.—Dr. Boothroyd renders this perplexed passage thus: "All the living who walk under the sun, I saw attending a second youth, who is about to stand up in his stead. There is no end to all the people; to all to whom he becomes a leader. But they that come after shall not rejoice in him. Surely this also is vanity." &c.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Keep thy foot.—This seems to allude to the ancient custom of pulling off the shoes in the presence of God. Exod. iii. 5. Josh. v. 15, &c. Ver. 3. For a dream cometh.—Holden observes, this is evidently a comparison, though the particle of similitude be dropped, as often in the Hebrew. With him agree Desvoeux, Hodgson, Boothroyd, and others.

Ver. 6. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin.—Bishop Patrick applies this to vows inconsistent with the present state of human nature, as vows of celibacy, &c.—Before the angel or messenger—meaning the Jewish priest, who is called the messenger, or angel of God. Mal. ii. 7. and compare Levit. v. 4, 5.

Ver. 7. For in the multitude of dreams, &c.—Boothroyd, "For as in many dreams is great vanity, so also in many words; hence (or therefore) fear God."

Ver. 8. Marvel not at the matter.—See margin. Or rather, "decree," the declaration of such will, or purpose, of evil judges; for so doth God permit, and will eventually overrule it.—"For he that is higher than the highest" ("the high and lofty one, Isa. lvii. 15.) regardeth—rather, "keeps guard," or watches over them; and high as these earthly gods may be, there be higher than they; namely, the three divine persons of the Godhead. But Bishop Patrick would render the former clause, "He that is high from on high observeth," &c.

Ver. 9. The king is served by the field.—Dr. Boothroyd renders this verse thus: "The produce of the earth is for (the use of) all: and the king himself is supplied from the field,"—which furnishes an argument in favour of the poor agriculturist, ver. 8.

Ver. 10. Not be satisfied.—[The more he gets, the more he would get; for "The love of money increases, in proportion as money itself increases." ]—B.

Ver. 14. Perish by evil travail, &c.—Or, "through misfortune, and he having a son, hath nothing to leave him." Hodgson.

Ver. 19. Given him power.—Hodgson, "Liberty;" Boothroyd, "Right."

20 * For he shall not much remember the days of his life; because God answereth him in the joy of his heart.

CHAPTER VI.

The vanity of riches without use. 3 Of children, 6 and old age without riches. 9 The vanity of sight and wandering desires. 11 The conclusion of vanities.

THERE is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men:

2 A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, so that <sup>a</sup> he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet <sup>b</sup> God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil disease.

3 ¶ If a man beget a hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and also that he have no <sup>c</sup> burial; I say, that an untimely birth is better than he.

4 For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.

5 Moreover he hath not seen <sup>d</sup> the sun, nor known any thing: this hath more rest than the other.

6 Yea, though he live a thousand years twice told, yet hath he seen no good: do not all go to one place?

7 ¶ All <sup>e</sup> the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the <sup>f</sup> appetite is not filled.

8 For what hath the wise more than the fool? what hath the poor, that knoweth to walk before the living?

9 Better is the sight of the eyes than the or, though he give not much, yet he remembereth.

a Job 21.10, &c. Ps. 73.7.

b Lu. 12.20.

c 2 Ki. 9.35. 37. Is. 14.19, 20. Je. 22.19.

d Ps. 53.8.

e Pr. 16.25.

f soul.

g walking of the soul

h Job 40.2. Is. 45.9.

i Ps. 73.6.

j Ps. 47.4.

k the number of the days of the life of his vanity.

l Ps. 102.11. Ja. 4.14.

a Pr. 22.1.

b or, anger.

c 2 Co. 7.10.

d Ps. 141.5.

e sound.

f De. 16.19.

& wandering of the desire: this is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

10 ¶ That which hath been is named already, and it is known that it is man; neither <sup>h</sup> may he contend with him that is mightier than he.

11 Seeing there be many things that increase vanity, what is man the better?

12 For who knoweth what is good for man in this life, <sup>k</sup> all the days of his vain life which he spendeth as a shadow? for who can tell a man what shall be after him under the sun?

CHAPTER VII.

1 Remedies against vanity are, a good name, 2 mortification, 7 patience, 11 wisdom. 23 The difficulty of wisdom.

A GOOD name is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

2 ¶ It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.

3 <sup>b</sup> Sorrow is better than laughter: for <sup>c</sup> by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning; but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

5 It is better to hear the <sup>d</sup> rebuke of the wise, than for a man to hear the song of fools.

6 For as the <sup>e</sup> crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool: this also is vanity.

7 ¶ Surely oppression maketh a wise man mad; and a gift <sup>f</sup> destroyeth the heart.

irreverently prate on any subject before the throne of grace. "Fear thou God?"

A few reflections here follow, on the criminality of oppressing the poor, and perverting judgment: on labouring to amass wealth, to leave to the disposal of another, whilst the wealthy wretch himself must return naked to the dust, from which he came, and not carry away any thing "in his hand;" and thank God he cannot! This would be a poor world indeed, if the rich could carry away their money with them.

The Preacher returns now to his favourite text—"Behold, it is good and comely." &c.; or, as he expresses it in a preceding chapter, (iii. 12.) "There is nothing better for a man than to rejoice and do good in his life."

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—12. The vanity of riches, and of all terrestrial enjoyments.—The character here exhibited, is neither obsolete nor singular: it is that of a man who possesses every thing he could desire on earth, except a heart capable of enjoyment. A covetous man not only grudges the enjoyments of others, but even his own; and after having miserably starved himself, leaves it to others, and perhaps to strangers, to riot on the property he dare not taste. Or such may live to old age, and have large families of children and grand children, yet if they have no enjoyment, either in their property or their family, and perhaps are not even honoured with a burial, what are they better than an untimely birth? On the contrary, they are worse. They have tasted the bitterness of life, and that only: the abortive has tasted neither.

Those who divide this book into two parts, make the division toward the end of this chapter. Holden concludes Part I. with the 9th verse, but Bp. Patrick with the 10th; though, as already hinted, in our Introduction, we much doubt whether Solomon designed any such division.

The sentiment of the last verse seems to be, since the world is full of vanity and disappointment, who can ascertain what is best, or the chief good for man, while he remains below?

Ver. 20. For he shall not much remember.—See margin. The meaning may be either, 1. He shall not much regret his labours, because, &c.; or, 2. Though God give him but little, that little he shall gratefully remember.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 2. Not power to eat thereof.—To eat, is here and frequently used for to enjoy; and this enjoyment may be prevented, either by the want of health or of heart. A sick man can enjoy nothing of this world's good; and if a man have health, yet if he have not a heart to use his riches, but leaves them to a stranger, this also is vanity.

Ver. 3. A hundred children.—That is, a great number.—And his soul be not filled with good.—That is, if he have no enjoyment of his family; and after all, when he comes to die, be cast out to rot upon the earth, without burial, (see Jer. xxii. 19.) an untimely birth is better than he. Compare chap. iv. 2.

Ver. 4. For he.—Some refer this to the abortive, and others to the miser. Rishop Patrick includes both.

Ver. 5. More rest than.—[That is, the abortion, or untimely birth, which seems to come into the world in vain, leaves it in obscurity and disgrace, has no name to be remembered, and has neither seen the sun, nor known any thing;—even "this hath more rest than the other,"—the miser, who, with his coffers filled, should have lived a thousand years, and had a hundred children, whose soul was not filled with good, who never could have enough, nor yet enjoy what he had. It had rest in the womb, and now rests in the grave: its pain was transient; its unhappiness a mere negation of "Thoughtful people," says Henry, "are careful to do every thing for the best, if they know it; but as it is an instance of our depravity, that we are apt to desire that as good for us which is really hurtful, (as children cry for knives, which would cut their fingers,) so it is an instance of the vanity of this world, that what seems to be for the best, often proves otherwise; such is our short-sightedness concerning the issues and events of things; and such broken reeds are all our creature confidences. We know not how to advise others for the best, nor how to act ourselves, because that which we apprehend likely to be for our welfare, may become a snare."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—29. Importance of character, of seriousness, of prudence, and of wisdom.—"A good name," a fair reputation, an honest fame, is "better than precious ointment;" more fragrant, and more diffusive. Death seals the character beyond revocation, and therefore is the day of a man's death better than that of his birth, or before his character is formed; and for forming this character, "the house of mourning" is a far better school than the house of festivity and joy. The latter is full of dissipation and folly; but the former, of reflection and consideration. "In the day of adversity" men "consider," and consideration is the first step to reformation and religion. A man's character is decided by his affections. "The heart of fools is in the house of mirth;" but that of the wise, in the house of mourning. In the latter they may meet with rebuke and a check to their sinful enjoyments; but "the rebuke of the wise" is better than "the song of fools," or the noisy mirth by which it is applauded. For "the laughter of fools" is momentary, like "the crackling of thorns" on fire, while the consideration of the wise leads to solid and permanent enjoyment.

Oppression may make a wise man rash and impetuous; or a bribe may blind the understanding; but better is the end of a thing than its beginning, and time and patience will cool the temper, and clear the judgment. Rulers, therefore, should not be hasty in their decisions; nor act under the influence of pas-pleasure; and it lived not, as the miser, to incur guilt and misery.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. For (Holden), "then," or therefore) what hath the wise?—That is, the worldly wise.—What hath the poor?—This expression seems elliptical, and the particle than should be repeated: What . . . (more than) the poor who knoweth how to walk; how to act, in all circumstances, before the living?

Ver. 9. Better is the sight.—That is, better is the enjoyment of what God has given, than a continual craving, and "the wandering of the desires," or as the Hebrew expresses it, "the walking of the soul," after what we have not.

Ver. 10. That which has been, &c.—This verse is exceedingly perplexed, and difficult to translate: after comparing several versions, we subjoin the following: Holden reads, "That which has been, has been named already, and it is known that it (is) man;" i. e. a weak, frail son of Adam. "Neither may he contend with him that is above him." Dr. Boothroyd's translation is, "Every one born hath long ago received a name, and it is known that it is Adam (of the earth). Let him not then dare to contend with him that is stronger than himself."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. A good name.—Compare Prov. xxii. 1, where the adjective "good" is supplied by the translators; and by "ointment," in the Scriptures, is always, as in this place, to be understood perfume.

Ver. 3. Sorrow.—See margin. "Anger," the word means both, but the first sense is here intended.

8 Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof: and the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

9 Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.

10 Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this.

11 ¶ Wisdom is good with an inheritance; and by it there is profit to them that see the sun.

12 For wisdom is a defence, and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.

13 Consider the work of God: for who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked?

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him.

15 All things have I seen in the days of my vanity: there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that longeth his life in his wickedness.

16 Be not righteous over much; neither make thyself over wise: why shouldest thou destroy thyself?

17 Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish: why shouldest thou die before thy time?

18 It is good that thou shouldest take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thy hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.

g Pr. 14. 29.
h out of wisdom.
i or, as good as an inheritance, yea, better too.
j shadow.
k Pr. 8. 35.
l Is. 14. 27.
m made.
n Jn. 16. 33.
o Ac. 14. 24.
o c. 8. 14.
p Is. 16. 2.
q Ac. 7. 59.
p Is. 65. 20.
q Ro. 10. 2.
r be desolate.
s c. 12. 12.
t Ps. 55. 23.
u not in.
v c. 8. 12. 13.
Mal. 4. 2.

w Eccl. 6. 36.
1 Jn. 1. 8.
x give not thy heart.
y Is. 29. 21.
z Ro. 1. 22.
1 Co. 1. 30.
a I and my heart compassed.
b Pr. 5. 3. 5.
c he that is good before.
d Pr. 22. 14.
e or, weighing one thing after another to find out thereupon.
f Ga. 1. 27.
g Ge. 3. 6, &c.
a Pr. 1. 5, 6.

19 Wisdom strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the city.

20 For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not.

21 Also take no heed unto all words that are spoken; lest thou hear thy servant curse thee:

22 For oftentimes also thine own heart knoweth that thou thyself likewise hast cursed others.

23 ¶ All this have I proved by wisdom: I said, I will be wise; but it was far from me.

24 That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out?

25 ¶ I applied my heart to know, and to search, and to seek out wisdom, and the reason of things, and to know the wickedness of folly, even of foolishness and madness:

26 And I find more bitter than death the woman, whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands: whoso pleaseth God shall escape from her; but the sinner shall be taken by her.

27 Behold, this have I found, saith the preacher, counting one by one, to find out the account:

28 Which yet my soul seeketh, but I find not: one man among a thousand have I found; but a woman among all those have I not found.

29 Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Kings are greatly to be respected. 6 The divine providence is to be observed. 12 It is better with the godly in adversity, than with the wicked in prosperity. 16 The work of God is unsearchable.

WHO is as the wise man? and a who knoweth the interpretation of a thing? a man's sion; for anger, though it may visit wise men, dwells only with fools. Neither should we be querulous, or murmuring, at the character of the present time, as worse than any preceding period; since human nature is in every age the same, and the same Providence rules the world. Though bad men are oftentimes suffered to gain the ascendancy, in this they are fulfilling the purposes of heaven; and however they may be suffered for a time, to tyrannize and oppress, they shall not finally prevail.

"Wisdom," true wisdom, "is as good as an inheritance, and even better (more profitable) to them that see the sun," that is, to all who are exposed to the heat of its beams, which are not only inconvenient, but dangerous, in hot countries. Wisdom is a shelter; literally, by its ingenious inventions, to afford a shade, and metaphorically, by the protection it affords against oppression. Money, it is true, affords protection also, in bribing the oppressor; but the preference of wisdom is, that it not only often preserves life, when money cannot; but even in the worst extremity, it is the gate to everlasting life, when "the spirit shall return to God who gave it." (Chap. xii. 7.)

It is our duty, therefore, in forming our estimate of human life, to balance circumstances, as God doth in the government of the world. What he hath left crooked, we cannot make straight; but we should set one thing against another in our own minds, as he hath done in nature and in providence. Thus, when we meet with prosperity, we should be thankful, and rejoice in it; and when this shall be succeeded by adversity, pause and consider how it may be best improved; without perplexing ourselves with inquiries into futurity, to which we have no certain clue.

The wise man here admits, that a just man may perish (as to this life) in his integrity, and a wicked man prolong his days by artful wickedness. Instances of this he had observed in his own experience, and therefore gives a caution on the subject, which, unhappily, has been sadly misunderstood. That any man, in the present life, can be either too wise or too good; too upright before men, or too holy before God, is both impossible and inconsistent with the Scriptures: but it is possible there may be imprudence, even in zeal for God, when it is not "according to knowledge;" and that by ostentation in their religion, or the affectation of superior wisdom, men may expose themselves to danger, where no valuable end is likely to be attained thereby. Therefore, when our Lord sent forth his disciples "as sheep among wolves," he cautions them to be "wise as serpents," as well as "harmless as doves." On the other hand, with respect to those who expect to prolong their lives by wickedness, let them also be cautious, lest, with all their cunning, they fall under the sentence of the law, and die before their time.

In the close of this chapter, Solomon again adverts to the character of a loose and artful woman; one wise and good man (that is, a few out of a great number) he had found, but among the women of his age, and those especially with whom he had been connected, he could find scarcely one, either wise or good. He gives us, however, in his last verse, the result of all his reasonings and calculations: "Lo, this only have I found, that God made man (i. e. mankind) upright; but they have sought out many inventions." So we read in the book of Genesis, "God made man in his own image; yet, in a few centuries, the wickedness of man became great in the earth," and every imagination, purpose, device, or desire, became corrupt, and wholly evil. (Compare Gen. i. 27. and Expos. of ch. vi. 1—7.) In this awful picture of human nature, depraved and fallen, one circumstance should always be borne in mind; whatever is good, comes from God; whatever is evil, springs from the imaginations and devices of a depraved heart.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—17.—Prudence and obedience to civil government enforced.—The first verse is, by Holden, connected with the last of this preceding chapter; but we see not with what propriety: and yet it seems to have little connexion with the following. "Who is like the wise man?" a man skilled in interpretations, and who, like Daniel, is "well favoured" in countenance, and fit to stand in the king's palace? (Dan. i. 4, 19.) To such, probably, the advice following was primarily directed, though much of it is of general concernment. Such he counsels to keep the king's commandment, and that particularly from a regard to the oath of God, that is, the oath of al-

Ver. 11. Wisdom is good with—See margin. Boothroyd, "Wisdom is better than an inheritance, and more useful to them," &c.

Ver. 12. A defence—Shade, or shelter; namely, from the sun-beams. "It giveth life." Compare Prov. iii. 18.

Ver. 14. Find nothing after him—Dr. Hodgson, "That man should be uncertain what next may befall him." So Boothroyd.

Ver. 16. Destroy thyself?—[This verse is probably the language of an ungodly man; to which Solomon answers, as in the following verse, "Do not multiply wickedness; do not add direct opposition to godliness to the rest of your crimes. Why should you provoke God to destroy you before your time?"]

—Bagster.—i. e. waste thy talents, strength, and even life, to no purpose.

Ver. 18. Take hold—i. e. notice this, and fear not.

Ver. 28. Far from me.—That is, inathomable, as in the next verse.

Ver. 26. Whose heart is snares and nets—That is, full of snares and nets; meaning, artifices to entice mankind.

Ver. 28. One man.—Boothroyd, "One wise man," supplying the word wise to both man and woman, in the same manner as "good," in Prov. xxii. 1.

—But a woman, &c.—[Solomon, instead of seeking one rational virtuous woman, had collected an immense multitude, of various countries and religions, for magnificence and indulgence; among whom, as might have been expected, he had not found one who was thoroughly faithful, upright, and pious. He here uses the language of a penitent, warning others of the errors into which he had been led; and not that of a waspish satirist, lashing indiscriminately one half of the human species.]—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Inventions—Hodgson and Boothroyd, "Corruptions;" Deveroux and Geentius, "Artifices, devices."

wisdom maketh his face to shine, and the boldness of his face shall be changed.

2 ¶ I counsel thee to keep the king's commandment, and that in regard of the oath of God.

3 Be not hasty to go out of his sight: stand not in an evil thing; for he doeth whatsoever pleaseth him.

4 Where the word of a king is, there is power: and who may say unto him, What doest thou?

5 Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing: and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment.

6 Because to every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon him.

7 For he knoweth not that which shall be: for who can tell him when it shall be?

8 ¶ There is no man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death: and there is no discharge in that war; neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.

9 All this have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the sun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.

10 And so I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and they were forgotten in the city where they had so done: this is also vanity.

11 ¶ Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.

12 ¶ Though a sinner do evil a hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely b strength.

c Ro.13.1.

6.

d e.10.4.

e Job 34.13.

Fr.30.31.

f know.

g Ps.119.6.

1 Pe.3.13.

h how.

i Ps.49.6.

j or, casting off weapons.

k Ps.73.18.

&c.

l Je.17.13.

He.10.33.

m Ps.10.6.

50.21.

2 Pe.3.3,4.

n Is.26.10.

o e.7.15.

p Ps.37.18.

19.

Is.3.10,11.

q Job 21.7.

&c.

Ps.73.14.

Mal.3.15.

r e.5.13; 9.7.

1 Ts.4.3,4.

6.27.

s Job 5.9.

Ps.40.5.

Ro.11.33.

a gave, or, set to.

b c.12.9,10.

c e.8.14.

d Mal.3.18.

I know that it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him:

13 But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God.

14 There is a vanity which is done upon the earth; that there be just men, unto whom it happeneth according to the work of the wicked; again, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous: I said that this also is vanity.

15 ¶ Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

16 ¶ When I applied my heart to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done upon the earth: (for also there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes:)

17 Then I beheld all the work of God, that a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun: because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea farther; though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Like things happen to good and bad. 4 There is a necessity of death unto men. Comfort is all their portion in this life. 11 God's providence ruleth over all. 13 Wisdom is better than strength.

FOR all this I considered in my heart even to declare all this, that the righteous and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God: no man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them.

2 All things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to legiance, by which they were bound to his service. Such he admonishes, not to leave the king's presence abruptly; that is, without leave, or without due ceremony; nor to persist in an evil thing; that is, what appears so in the ruler's sight, because his power is absolute, and must not be resisted; except, indeed, when his commands are unlawful, as clashing with duty to a higher power, even the King of kings. This obedience and respect to the sovereign, will procure his favour and protection, and a wise man will show his wisdom in attending to this advice; for "his heart discerneth both time and judgment." But though (as shown in the third chapter) there is a proper time for every work and purpose, yet the misery of man is great in this, that he cannot always ascertain it; and who can give him the knowledge of events, future and contingent?

There is a period approaching, however, when man must surrender both himself and his accounts before a higher tribunal; when "his spirit must return to God," the Judge of all. An hour is coming, when the wealth of all the east cannot procure an hour's respite; neither is there any means of obtaining a discharge from this last great conflict; or any possibility, by some new act of desperate wickedness to brave it out. Great men might, however, obtain a splendid funeral; and as they had been used to form a conspicuous figure in the religious processions to and from the temple, so now they might carry their pomp and splendour to the grave; but there it vanishes:—"This also is vanity!"

It is one of the most desperate evils of the human heart, that it abuses the divine mercy; and that, because God does not usually send his punishments like thunderbolts immediately from heaven, "therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil." "I am struck with horror," says the eloquent Saurin, in a sermon from this text, "When I consider this disposition in its true point of light. . . . Were we convinced that God had the formidable design of plunging us into the depths of hell on the first act of rebellion, who is he that would have the madness to be a rebel? Why then are we rebels? The wise man tells us, "because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—18. The Providence of God elucidated.—This chapter opens with this important doctrine, that "though all the concerns of good men are in the hands of God, yet neither can they, nor others, judge whether they are or not the subjects of his favour, by any of the outward circumstances of life." The reason of this is, that "one event happeneth to the righteous and the wicked;" that is, as stated in the preceding chapter, the wicked often prosper in the present world, while the righteous are persecuted and afflicted. This is "an evil" that admits of no remedy, a difficulty that admits of no solution, but in the doctrine of a future state into which the Preacher, in the close of the book, resolves it. "God will bring every work into judgment," &c.

When it is said, that "the dead know not any thing," it is not to be understood as denying the doctrine of a future state, which is all along supposed; but as it is here afterwards explained, (ver. 6,) that they have no more "portion for ever in any thing that is done beneath the sun."

The advice following, (ver. 7, &c.) appears to us not to im-may justly be considered as the greatest advantage which can be made of a below the sun: and as the changes, such a frame of mind, if the result of right principles, may and ought to be preserved; and it will be the recompense and solace of all our labours and toils.]—Bagster. See chap. ii. 24; iii. 22.

Ver. 16. Applied my heart.—[Solomon here records the result of his perplexing inquiries into the affairs of men, and the purposes, providence, and into the works of God, he found he could neither comprehend nor explain them; and was persuaded that no application or capacity would enable a man to fathom the depth of the Divine dispensations in this lower world. How vain, then, are all cavils against Divine Providence; when we can neither understand, nor comprehend it!]—Bagster.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. Righteous and wise.—[Though Solomon could not "find out the whole work of God," yet his inquiries led him to make many useful conclusions, which he declared for the benefit of others. And he was assured from what he had seen, and from the well known character of God, "that the righteous, and the wise, and their works," were all "in the hand of God," protected by his power, under his special care, and safe in his approbation; but that the events of human life were so intricately and mysteriously arranged that no one could decide from them who were the objects of God's love or displeasure.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. The boldness of his face.—That is, his stern, austere countenance, shall be softened to courtesy and kindness.
Ver. 6. Therefore.—Both Hodgson and Boothroyd, in this place, render the particle (K) "yet," as it unquestionably must be in several other places, which in great measure clears the sense.
Ver. 8. Over the spirit.—Dr. Boothroyd follows Despeux and others, in here rendering ruach, "wind," which it certainly often means; but we prefer the common version. Compare chap. iii. 21.—No discharge.—See Judges vii. 3—7. Marg. "No casting off weapons," as was common in their wars, when the defeated party often threw away their weapons to facilitate their escape. Drs. Hodgson and Boothroyd render it, "There is no escape in (or from) that conflict."

Ver. 9. To his own hurt.—The original is equivocal, and may apply either to the hurt of the ruler or his subjects: a tyrant, who is a curse to them, is himself accursed of God.

Ver. 10. From the place of the holy.—This we take to mean the temple, in the processions to and from which, princes often occupied the most conspicuous situations, as David was accustomed to do, and probably Solomon.

Ver. 15. Then I commended, &c.—[Some consider this as the cavil of an infidel objector, equivalent to the Epicurean maxim, "Eat, drink, and play; there is no pleasure after death." But it may be regarded as a recommendation of a moderate use of worldly things, with a cheerful and contented mind which the good, and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath.

3 This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all: yea, also the heart <sup>e</sup> of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead.

4 ¶ For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 For the living know that they shall die: but the dead <sup>f</sup> know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for <sup>g</sup> the memory of them is forgotten.

6 Also their love, <sup>h</sup> and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

7 ¶ Go thy way, eat <sup>i</sup> thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine <sup>j</sup> with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works.

8 Let thy garments <sup>k</sup> be always white; and let thy head <sup>l</sup> lack no ointment.

9 <sup>m</sup> Live joyfully with the wife <sup>n</sup> whom thou lovest all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: <sup>o</sup> for that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy <sup>p</sup> might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the <sup>q</sup> grave, whither thou goest.

11 ¶ I returned, and saw under the sun, that <sup>r</sup> the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor <sup>e</sup> Ge. 6.5.

Je. 17.9.
Mat. 15.19.
<sup>f</sup> Job 14.21.
Is. 63.16.
<sup>g</sup> Job 7.8.
10.
Is. 26.14.
<sup>h</sup> Ex. 1.8.
<sup>i</sup> Mat. 2.20.
<sup>j</sup> c. 8.15.
<sup>k</sup> c. 10.19.
<sup>l</sup> Re. 16.15.
<sup>m</sup> Mat. 6.17.
<sup>n</sup> see, or,
enjoy life.
<sup>o</sup> Pr. 5.13.
19.
<sup>p</sup> c. 5.18.
<sup>q</sup> Job 9.24.
26.
<sup>r</sup> Job 14.7.
12.
c. 11.3.
<sup>s</sup> Ps. 75.6, 7.
Je. 9.23.
Am. 2.14.
15.

<sup>t</sup> Lu. 21.34.
1 Th. 5.3.
<sup>u</sup> 2Sa. 20.16.
<sup>v</sup> Pr. 21.22.
24.5, 6.
<sup>w</sup> Ma. 6.2, 3.
<sup>x</sup> Pr. 28.23.
<sup>y</sup> Job. 7.1.
&c.
<sup>z</sup> a. flies of death.
<sup>aa</sup> Mat. 5.13.
<sup>ab</sup> c. heart.
<sup>ac</sup> Pr. 13.16.
<sup>ad</sup> c. 8.3.
<sup>ae</sup> 1 Sa. 25.24.
&c.

yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

12 For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared <sup>a</sup> in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them.

13 ¶ This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me:

14 There <sup>b</sup> was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it:

15 Now there was found in it a poor wiseman, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.

16 Then said I, wisdom is better <sup>c</sup> than strength: nevertheless <sup>d</sup> the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.

17 The words of wise men are heard in <sup>e</sup> quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

18 Wisdom is better than weapons of war: but one <sup>f</sup> sinner destroyeth much good.

CHAPTER X.

1 Observations of wisdom and folly. 16 Of riot, 18 slothfulness, 19 and money. 20 Men's thoughts of kings ought to be reverent.

DEAD <sup>a</sup> flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so <sup>b</sup> doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

2 A wise man's heart is at his right hand; but a fool's heart at his left.

3 Yea also, when he that is a fool walketh by the way, his <sup>c</sup> wisdom faileth him, and he saith <sup>d</sup> to every one that he is a fool.

4 If the spirit of the ruler rise up against thee, leave not <sup>e</sup> thy place; for <sup>f</sup> yielding pacifieth great offences.

ply either libertinism or infidelity, and is nothing more than a repetition, in varied language, of the advice before given, to enjoy with cheerfulness and gratitude the blessings of Providence; and whatever good our hands may find to do, (for it cannot refer to evil,) to do it with alacrity and cheerfulness, and trust in God's mercy to be accepted by him. To be good and to do good, are the great ends of life.

What is said of "time and chance" happening to all, is thus explained by Holden: "By time I understand the seasons of prosperous and adverse fortune; and by chance, events seemingly casual." This by no means excludes a "divine power and agency in human affairs," which "may seem casual and fortuitous," though "in reality ordered according to the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God."

Whether the incident mentioned, ver. 13—15, be considered as a fact or a parable, it is equally instructive, and we have many such examples on record. Luther mentions the fate of Themistocles, and it would be easy to name others in the history of every civilized country.

The following verses seem to state a case very distinct from the preceding. The words of wise men are heard in the calm and peaceful counsel, and their wisdom is adjudged "better than weapons of war;" but often, in the public assemblies, such words are disregarded; and a noisy demagogue, who is "a ruler among fools," gains the ascendancy, and defeats the wisdom of better men.

The concluding remark will apply to other subjects besides politics. How often have the counsels and labours of many wise and good men been disconcerted, by the wickedness of one bad man! And if we take the other translation, "error," instead of "sinner," (see note,) how often has one baneful error, introduced into a church, produced its ruin! So, in a theological system, one error may corrupt and disorganize the whole; just as a dead fly may spoil a pot of the choicest ointment. Such an error we conceive to be Antinomianism, by which we understand the principle, that Christians are released from moral obligation: an error that, by connecting itself with some of the choicest truths of Christianity, poisons the whole system, and gives it the most unsavoury odour.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—20. Miscellaneous observations on wisdom, folly, &c.—Bishop Patrick agrees with the suggestion just dropped, that the Preacher continues the subject with which the preceding chapter closed; namely, that "one sinner, or one sin, may destroy much good." In like manner he here remarks, that in a wise and good man, a little folly, a small error, compared with the faults of other men, may destroy the Ver. 3. This is an evil among all things—Hodgson and Boothroyd, "This evil is in all that is done," &c.—Yea, also.—Dr. Hodgson renders this, That thereby, or therefore, as the particle (gam) is rendered, 1 Sam. xii. 16. The meaning seems to be, because, in this world, "all things happen alike to all," and no man knoweth either the love or hatred of God from external circumstances, therefore the sons of men indulge themselves in madness and in folly, not expecting to be called to an account.

Ver. 4. But to him that is joined, &c.—The present Hebrew text reads, "Who (or what) shall be chosen? To all the living there is hope;" which affords a good sense: but all the ancient versions, the Keri, and many MSS., read as our translation, in which the sense differs not materially.—A living dog.—This is a proverbial phrase, implying, that the most insignificant person living has more influence than the greatest when dead: "a living dog" is stronger "than a dead lion."

Ver. 5. Let thy garments be always white.—White cotton is the dress of the Asiatics, and they pride themselves on it being always clean.

Ver. 9. Live joyfully.—Those only, in our view, enjoy life, who are duly sensible whence their enjoyments come, and who improve them to a proper end.

Ver. 12. Man knoweth not his time—Either of affliction or of death, by which he is often taken as suddenly as the fishes in the fisher's net.

Ver. 14. Little city, &c.—This passage receives a fine illustration from the case of Archimedes, who defended the city of Syracuse from all the Roman forces which besieged it by sea and land. He destroyed their ships by his burning-glasses; lifted up their galleys out of the water by his machines, dashing some to pieces, and sinking others. Yet was not this wise man remembered; but was slain by a Roman soldier, while deeply engaged in demonstrating a problem.—Baxter.

Ver. 15. His words are not heard.—To hear, regard, and to obey, are, in Scripture, often terms synonymous. That his advice was heard and regarded at the time, is evident from the effect—the city was delivered: but the sense seems to be, that afterwards, his words and his deeds were alike forgotten and disregarded.

Ver. 18. One sinner destroyeth much good.—If this be connected with the preceding verse, the sense will be, that when such noisy declaimers prevail they often defeat the wisest counsels; but some critics (as Desvoeux) translate error, instead of sinner; and it is equally true, that one error often counteracts and ruins the best concerted plans.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Dead flies.—See margin; by which Bishop Patrick and others understand "deadly flies," poisonous insects with deadly stings, as most of the flies of the East are. ("In all insects," says Scheuchzer, "there is an acrid volatile salt, better, mixed with sweet, or even alkaline substances, incites them to a brisk intestine motion, disposes them to fermentation, and to putrescence itself; by which the more volatile principles fly off, leaving the grosser behind; at the same time the taste and odour are changed, the agreeable to fetid, the sweet to insipid." Thus, as a fly, though a diminutive creature, can taint and corrupt much precious perfume; so a small mixture of folly and indiscretion will tarnish the reputation of one who is in other respects wise and respectable.)—Baxter.

Ver. 3. His wisdom faileth him.—That is, in the common affairs of life he is so perplexed and embarrassed, as to discover to every one that he is a fool. See ver. 15.

Ver. 4. Leave not thy place.—Lord Bacon, like a true courtier, explains this to mean, "resign not office;" but we suppose the simple meaning to be, discover no resentment, of which, rising up and leaving the council chamber would be a plain indication.

5 There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, as an error which proceedeth from the ruler :

6 Folly <sup>h</sup> is set in great <sup>i</sup> dignity, and the rich sit in low place.

7 I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking as servants upon the earth.

8 He <sup>k</sup> that diggeth a pit shall fall into it; and whoso breaketh a hedge, a serpent shall bite him.

9 Whoso removeth stones shall be hurt therewith; and he that cleaveth wood shall be endangered thereby.

10 If the iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then must he put to more strength: but wisdom is profitable to direct.

11 Surely the serpent will bite without enchantment; and <sup>m</sup> a babbler is no better.

12 The <sup>n</sup> words of a wise man's mouth are <sup>o</sup> gracious; but <sup>p</sup> the lips of a fool will swallow up himself.

13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness: and the end of his <sup>q</sup> talk is mischievous madness.

14 A fool also <sup>r</sup> is full of words: a man cannot tell what shall be; and what shall be after him, who can tell him?

15 The labour of the foolish wearieth every one of them, because he knoweth not how to go to the city.

16 ¶ Wo to thee, O land, when thy king is <sup>s</sup> a child, and thy princes eat in the morning!

17 Blessed art thou, O land, when thy king is the son of nobles, and thy princes eat in due season, for strength, and not for drunkenness!

18 ¶ By much slothfulness the building de-

§ from before.
h Ea.3.1.
i heights.
j Pr.30.22.
k Pa.7.15.
l 1Ch.12.32.
m the master of the tongue.
n Pr.15.2.

o grace. Col.4.6. p Pr.18.7.
q mouth.
r multiplicity.
s Is.34.12.
t Ps.104.15.
u glad the life.
v Ex.22.28. Ac.23.5.
w or, conscience.
x Lu.19.40.
y Is.32.20.
z upon the face of.
a De.15.10.
b Ps.41.1,2. Pr.17.25.
c Is.32.2.
d Mat.10.42.
e 2 Co.9.8.
f He.6.10, 11.
g Mt.5.5.
h Jn.3.8.
i Ps.139.15.
j 1 Co.3.7.
k be right.

cayeth; and through idleness of the hands the house droppeth through.

19 ¶ A feast is made for laughter, and wine maketh <sup>u</sup> merry: but money answereth all things.

20 ¶ Curse <sup>v</sup> not the king, no, not in thy <sup>w</sup> thought; and curse not the rich in thy bed-chamber: for <sup>x</sup> a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Directions for charity. 7 Death in life, 9 and the day of judgment in the days of youth, are to be thought on.

CAST <sup>a</sup> thy bread <sup>b</sup> upon the waters: <sup>c</sup> for thou shalt find it after many days.

2 Give a portion to <sup>d</sup> seven, and also to eight; for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth.

3 If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themselves upon the earth: and if the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be.

4 He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap.

5 As <sup>e</sup> thou knowest not what is the way of the spirit, nor how the <sup>f</sup> bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child: even so thou knowest not the works of God who maketh all.

6 In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand: for thou <sup>g</sup> knowest not whether shall <sup>h</sup> prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good.

7 ¶ Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun:

8 But if a man live many years, and rejoice fragrant savour of their character, in like manner as the poisonous remains of noxious insects may destroy the odour of a rich perfume.

The remark, that "a wise man's heart is at his right hand," cannot be taken literally, for wisdom does not change the internal structure of the frame. The Chaldee paraphrase has an ingenious gloss on this: "The heart of the wise inclines to the law, which was given from God's right hand; the fool, to silver and gold, which are the gifts of the left." So the Pythagoreans taught that the way to virtue and happiness was on the right hand; to vice and misery on the left; but the simple meaning probably is, that the wise man has his knowledge always handy (if we may so say) ready for use, while a fool has to seek it, and seeks altogether in vain.

Here follow several detached apothegms, which are elucidated in our Notes, and on which we shall only here offer two or three general observations. 1. Princes are rebuked for elevating to situations of rank and power persons of the lower classes, as being the more convenient tools for them to employ, while others of birth and suitable education, and therefore better qualified, are left unnoticed and unpromoted. 2. Persons are warned against doing injury to others, lest it should fall upon themselves. He that diggeth a pit to entrap others, may expect to be entrapped himself. He that breaketh down his neighbour's fence, removeth his landmark, or cutteth down his timber, may expect some judgment to overtake him. A serpent from the wall may sting him, or his own axe may lame him. 3. A wo is denounced against the land whose king is a child—not in years, so much as in capacity, and whose nobles are given to folly and intemperance.

4. A caution is given against secret treason and sedition. "Curse not the king, not even in thy thought, nor the rich in thy bed-chamber;" and that, not only for conscience's sake, but from interest; for in most courts there are spies, more active to report it than a bird. Christians should bless, and curse not, in any case, much less "the powers that be ordained of God." (Rom. xiii. 1.)

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1-10. Exhortations to charity, and to prepare for another world.—The first verse evidently recommends diffusive benevolence, by the image of scattering seed where it was most likely to vegetate. "He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he repay him again," and that with good interest. (See Deut. xv. 10; Prov. xix. 17.) The second apothegm is to the same effect—Give liberally, not to three or four only, but to "seven or eight," for thou knowest not how soon thou mayest be deprived of the means of giving. A pious merchant, remarkable for his liberality, having met with some very heavy losses in the war, directed his confidential steward to give freely, and to all deserving applicants: "for (said he) if the money continues to go so fast, we shall soon have none to give." He gave, and Providence speedily refunded all his losses.

A good man, while he is doing good, is like the showers corn on the face of the waters;" in plain terms, sow without any hope of a harvest—do good even to them on whom your benefactions seem thrown away. Dr. Jubb has well illustrated it by the following passages:

"Vain are the favours done to vicious men,
Not vainer this to sow the foaming deep;
The deep no pleasant harvest shall afford,
Nor will the wicked ever make return."
"To befriending the wicked is like sowing in the sea." These, indeed, invert this precept; nor is it extraordinary that they should.

"The one, frail human power alone produced,
The other, God."—Baxter.
Ver. 4. He that observeth the wind.—Though it is certainly proper to appropriate the works of husbandry to their proper seasons, yet it is possible for persons to be so timorous as to injure themselves by losing the opportunity, either to sow or to reap; and we suspect that there was also some superstitious regard paid by the ignorant and vulgar, both to the wind and clouds, and was notoriously the case with the heathen.

Ver. 5. As thou knowest not, &c.—It is difficult to connect this verse with the preceding. Some render ruach wind, instead of spirit, for the purpose of this connexion, (so Desvoeux.) but then, how does wind connect with the formation of a future? We should rather consider this verse as a parenthesis, and connect verses 5 and 7, which is easy and natural. The import of the parenthesis we take to be, that all the works of God are full of mystery. How the human spirit enters the human frame, or how that frame acquires solidity, with muscles, bones, &c., is indeed utterly inscrutable; nor is it less mysterious how Providence directs the seasons, and the works of nature: indeed all the works of God are full of mystery. Our duty is, to embrace every opportunity of doing good, and leave events to God.

Ver. 6. In great dignity—i. e. on the highest seats, above the more wealthy and respected citizens.

Ver. 7. Servants upon horses.—This is no strange thing with us; but in Solomon's time it was a mark of rank and wealth.—Harnier.

Ver. 8. Breaketh a hedge.—Or wall of stones, rather, (such as may be seen in some parts of our own country.) See Num. xxi. 24. In these, serpents might be easily concealed. The general meaning is, that persons who do wrong and foolish things, may expect to be punished by their own folly.

Ver. 11. Surely a serpent will bite without enchantment.—That is, without he be charmed. See Psalm lviii. 5, and note. So Boothroyd and others, who render the latter clause, "Then there will be no profit to the enchanter;" i. e. he will not be paid for charming. Dr. Hodge and others render it, "A serpent will bite without hissing;" i. e. without giving warning. To either of these, a babbler, a talkative fool, may be compared. The Hebrew calls him "a lord of the tongue," and we read of some fools who said, "With our tongue will we prevail; our lips are our own; who is lord over us?" Ps. xii. 4. Now these fools will often sting without warning; i. e. under the guise of friendship, and it is not easy to charm them into silence.

Ver. 12. Art gracious.—That is, kind and condescending, or "graceful;" sensible, and becoming.—But the lips of a fool will swallow up himself.—That is, will become his own ruin.

Ver. 16. When thy princes eat in the morning.—By eating, is evidently here meant, feasting, carousing. See Isa. v. 11.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. Cast thy bread (that is, bread, or seed corn) upon the face of the waters.—This evidently alludes to the irrigating, or flooding of grounds, in very hot and dry countries, before they are sown. The Egyptians used to sow after the overflowing of the Nile, and before the waters were all drained off. Rice is always sown in water. (Or, says Bishop Lowth, "Sow thy seed or in them all; yet let him remember the days of darkness; for they shall be many. All that cometh is vanity.

¶ Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment.

10 Therefore remove sorrow from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh: for childhood and youth are vanity.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The Creator is to be remembered in due time. 8 The preacher's care to edify. 13 The fear of God is the chief antidote of vanity.

REMEMBER now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them;

2 While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain:

3 In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened,

4 And the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall be brought low;

5 Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and the dispensing rain; but when he falls in death, he is like the felled tree, which can yield no more fruit. And he resembles it in another respect; death fixes his state for ever. As the tree falls toward the south, or toward the north, it will remain till it is removed: so when man dies, his doom is fixed: as death leaves him, judgment finds him.

The following proverb intimates that we must not be too nice in waiting for opportunities to do our duty; for they who observe the wind too particularly, or watch the clouds too minutely, will be afraid either to sow or reap, for fear of storms. On the other hand, the Preacher advises to embrace every possible opportunity: "in the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand."

The concluding paragraph of this chapter is one of the finest specimens of benevolent irony we know; for though the satire in the former part of it is very keen and poignant, the close is full of benevolence and kindness. (On the use of irony in Scripture, see Expos. Gen. iii. 20—24.) The tendency of this warning is, not to make young persons melancholy and wretched, but comfortable and happy. It is to put away sorrow, or rather passion, from the heart; and evil (the evil arising from criminal indulgences) from the flesh: and who can calculate how much evil and sorrow those escape, who, by the grace of God, are enabled to mortify the lusts of the flesh, and the evil passions of the heart!

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—14. Youth warned against deferring repentance to the time of old age.—This chapter contains a portrait of old age, which is considered as the winter of human life, in which all its enjoyments wither, and hasten to de-

Ver. 8. Remember the days of darkness.—That is, as the sun sets at night, so the pleasures of life set at death, and leave man in the darkness of the grave, and an unknown world.

Ver. 10. Sorrow.—Marg. "Anger." the word seems to include all the bitter and malignant passions; so evil from the flesh may comprehend all the lascivious passions which entail sufferings of body.—Childhood, as distinguished from youth, is "literally the dawn of life," and of intellect.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Remember thy Creator.—The Hebrew is here unquestionably plural, but should not be so rendered, as it cannot be intended to imply a plurality of Creators; but a plurality of persons in that Divine Being who said, "Let us make man in our image," Gen. i. 26. But it must be acknowledged, that the ancient versions and some MSS. have the word singular.—In the days of thy youth.—Heb. "In thy choice days."

Ver. 2. While the sun, or, &c.—We prefer rendering the pause in this verse "and," instead of "or;" so it is done by Boothroyd, and other modern translators, and the verse may then read, "While the sun and the light, and the moon and the stars, be not darkened."

Ver. 3. Keepers of the house.—The human body is, in Scripture, compared to a house, and the hands are represented as its defenders. See Job iv. 19. Ge. xlix. 24. [The hands become paralytic, as is usual in old age.—Strong men.—The legs become feeble, and unable to support the body.—Grinders.—The teeth decayed and mostly lost; and the few that remain, are incapable of masticating hard substance.—Windows.—The optic nerves become darkened, in consequence of the humours becoming thick, flat, and opaque.]—Bosster.

Ver. 4. The doors.—Of the mouth are the lips. See Ps. cxli. 3. [The teeth being lost, the lips are shut to prevent the food dropping out.—Daughters, &c.—The voice and ear, those daughters of music, are incapable of performing their offices.]—Bosster.

Ver. 5. The almond tree.—According to Hasselquist, this tree bears white blossoms, or nearly so, and bears them in January.—Shall be a burden.—

Ver. 12, 35.

Job 14. 10.

k Nu. 15. 39.

De. 29. 19,

20.

l c. 12, 14.

He. 9. 27.

m or, anger.

n 2 Ti. 2. 22.

o 1a. 26, 8.

b 2Sa. 19. 35.

c or, fail because they grind little.

d Ge. 3. 19.

Ps. 146. 4.

e Is. 57. 16.

f or, the more wise

the preacher

was.

g words of delight.

h or, reading.

i or, the end of the matter,

even all that hath been heard, is.

j De. 10. 12.

k Ac. 17. 30.

l 2 Co. 5. 10.

almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets:

6 Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern.

7 Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

8 ¶ Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher; all is vanity.

9 And moreover, because the preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge; yea, he gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.

10 The preacher sought to find out acceptable words: and that which was written was upright, even words of truth.

11 The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies which are given from one shepherd.

12 And further, by these, my son, be admonished: of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh.

13 ¶ Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.

14 For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

cay. Several of the images here employed, as the clouds, darkness, and rain, the cessation of agricultural labours, the closing of doors, mark the season to be winter.

In this allegory, according to Bishop Louth, old age is "admirably depicted. The inconveniences of increasing years, the debility of mind and body, the torpor of the senses, are expressed most learnedly and elegantly indeed; but with some degree of obscurity, by different images, derived from nature and common life: for by this enigmatical composition, Solomon, after the manner of the Oriental sages, meant to put to trial the acuteness of his readers. It has, on this account, afforded much exercise to the ingenuity of the learned, many of whom have, differently, it is true, but with much learning and sagacity, explained the passage." (Lect. x.)

The second verse, which speaks of the darkness of winter, is referred, by our great medical expositors, Dr. John Smith and Dr. Rd. Mead, to the dulness of the mental faculties in an infirm old age; and the return of the clouds after the rain may, at the same time, represent the gloomy apprehensions of such persons, when trouble follows trouble, as cloud succeeds cloud in the wintry season.

The same expositors allegorically explain "the keepers of the house," of the arms and hands, which are the proper protectors of the body; but which, in old age, become weak and tremulous; the legs are understood by "the strong men," which have been accustomed to carry the human frame for many years: but at length the knees bend under their burden, and can no longer bear it about, as they were accustomed. In the same series of allegory, "the grinders" may properly

That is, "to itself," the Hebrew verb being in Hithpaal, which strictly implies, action upon itself, though it is not always so used. Dr. John Smith thinks the writer meant to compare the old man himself to the grasshopper, or locust, whose shape is imagined to resemble this creature: "The dry, shrunk, shrivelled, crumpling, craggy old man, his back-bone sticking out, his knees projecting forwards, his arms backwards, his head downwards, and the apophyses, or bunching parts of the bones in general enlarged, is very aptly described by that insect."

Ver. 6. Silver cord.—[By the silver cord is meant the spinal marrow, so called from its form and colour; by the golden bowl, the brain; by the pitcher, the vena cava, which brings back the blood into the right auricle of the heart, called the fountain; and by the wheel, the great aorta, which receives the blood from the cistern, the left ventricle of the heart.]—Bagster.

The golden bowl.—Golden may only imply excellence, as containing the brain; but anatomists have observed, that the external coat of the brain is nearly of this colour. It may be remarked, too, that it is common among some barbarous nations, particularly the Indians, to make drinking vessels from the skulls of their enemies.

Ver. 10. Upright, even words of truth.—Or, "Right words of truth." Dr. Boothroyd. "The writing of uprightness, and the words of truth." Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 11. Goads—used in driving oxen, see 1 Sam. xlii. 21.—Nails fastened.—Heb. "Implanted, infixed." The nails, or pins, of the ancients, were firmly fixed in the walls in building.—By the masters of assemblies.—From the various translations of this difficult line, we select that of Dr. Boothroyd; "The collectors (namely, of the aphorisms here collected) are appointed by one Shepherd." But see the exposition.

Ver. 12. Of making many books.—We must recollect, that in these early ages, all books were in MS., and, instead of our convenient volumes, were on rolls of cloth, or parchment, and all copies were taken in the same way; so that book-making and book-reading were both laborious exercises.

represent the teeth, which become few and feeble; and "those that look out at the windows," the eyes, which by age become not only "darkened," but sometimes totally dark. "The doors" of the mouth often fall in through the want of teeth; and "the sound of the grinding becomes low" through the incapacity of chewing solid food. Watchfulness, or the inability to sleep, makes the old man "rise at the voice of the bird;" i. e. in the early dawn, whilst his own vocal powers, elegantly called "the daughters of music, are brought low" indeed.

The timidity of elderly people is next noticed, who are afraid to contemplate any elevated object, and meet with frequent alarms, even as they walk upon the level ground—"Fears are in the way." The white head of an old man is beautifully compared to the "almond tree" in blossom, and which blossoms even in winter. If our version be right, that "the grasshopper" becomes "a burden," it implies extreme weakness, and we often find that very aged people complain of their necessary clothing, as a burden almost intolerable: but Dr. Johr. Smith (above referred to) considers the form of the grasshopper, or locust, as representing the bent body, and crouching knees of a decrepit old man. So Luther compares an old man to a locust, because his bones stick out, and his body is shrunk up. From this circumstance, it is supposed, originated the fable of Tithonus being turned into a grasshopper; and on the same account Homer compared old king Priam, and his aged counsellors, to the same insect.

In this situation all the natural appetites and senses fail, as was the case with old Barzilai, who had lost his sight, his taste, and his hearing, and could have no more enjoyment of the present life. (2 Sam. xix. 35.) Death is daily expected, and the mourners usually hired in the East to lament over the dead, are waiting in the streets, expecting to be called. (See Jer. ix. 17, 18.)

The next verse (6) is generally explained anatomically; yet it is not necessary to suppose, with Bishop Horsley, that Solomon had anticipated the modern discoveries of anatomy. "The silver cord" may beautifully represent the spinal marrow, which runs through the back bone as a vein of silver through the mine, and from decay or injury of which, the back becomes curved and crooked. "The golden bowl" no less properly represents the human skull, with its curious and invaluable contents; and its being cracked, or broken, may intend its being no longer adapted to its proper functions. The rest of the verse, probably, alludes to the circulation of the blood to and from the heart, though the precise nature of that circulation might be very imperfectly understood. It is certain that the Hebrews used to draw water from their wells by means of a wheel, and to this the description evidently alludes, though it may be difficult to ascertain the exact import of the particulars in the description. The heart might very naturally be considered as the fountain, well, or cistern, from which the blood originated, and the wonderful machinery attached to it, as the wheel by which it was, in some mysterious manner, distributed through the frame. By the pitcher and the wheel being broken, must be meant, that the heart and lungs were no longer able to perform their functions. When these cease, then must the whole frame be returned to the dust, and "the spirit unto God who gave it." This text we consider as a clear and decided testimony to the doctrine of a future state, repeatedly before hinted, and farther confirmed in the concluding verse. But before we proceed, we must remark, that the great and avowed object of this comment on the infirmities of age, is to excite the young to a proper recollection of their duty to their Creator in their early days, before these evil days should come.

We come now to the conclusion, which is, perhaps, more obscure than any other part of this abstruse and mysterious book, which, from its many difficulties, has drawn out our remarks much beyond their due proportion. This conclusion informs us, that as the Preacher increased in knowledge, he studied the more zealously to inform his people; a very proper model to all public teachers! And as, in his early days, he delivered many proverbs extempore, (as we understand it,) so, in his latter days, he had honestly laboured to collect and arrange many of them into this discourse; and here he gives us the happiest definition of a true proverbial saying, which is, that it should "prick sharply and hold firmly;" the first idea being suggested by the image of a goad that would pierce an ox-hide, and the other by a nail so firmly fixed in a wall, that it could not be eradicated without injuring the wall itself. Now these wise sayings, which pierce and infix themselves in the mind, he tells us are all "from one Shepherd;" i. e. from God, "the Shepherd, the Rock of Israel." (See Gen. xlix. 24. and note.) The meaning of which we take to be, that all true wisdom, however distributed by preachers, "the masters of assemblies," or by writers, "the masters of collections," (as some translate it,) comes ultimately from God himself.

The whole then concludes with a summary of man's duty, which is, to "fear God, and keep his commandments," and the awful account which must be given of our actions, and even thoughts, ("every secret thing,") before his judgment bar.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES.

[THOUGH nothing can be more important, interesting, and excellent, than the subjects and instructions to be found in this inestimable book, yet such has been the ignorance, inattention, or depravity of some persons, that it would be hard to find an instance of any thing which has been so grossly misrepresented. How often has a handle been taken from certain passages, ill understood, and worse applied, to patronise libertinism, by such as pretend to judge of the whole from a single sentence, independent of the rest, without paying the least regard to the general scope or design! According to which rule, the most pious discourse that was ever written may be perverted to Atheism. Some fanatics have fallen into the contrary extreme; for, on reading that all here below is vanity, they have been so wrong-headed, as to condemn every thing as evil in itself. This world, according to them, cannot be too bitterly inveighed against; and man has nothing else to do with it, but to spend his days in sighing and mourning. But it is evident that nothing could be farther from the Preacher's intention: for, though he speaks so feelingly of the instability and unsatisfactory nature of all sublunary things, and the vanity of human cares, schemes, and contrivances, yet, lest any one should mistake his meaning, he advises every man, at the same time, to reap the fruit of his honest labours, and take the comfort of what he possesses with a sober freedom and cheerful spirit. There is nothing in the whole body of Pagan philosophy so elevated and magnificent as what some have written on the important subject of this poem; but their opinions are so various and contradictory, and the most plausible so blended with errors, that their sublimest sentiments on the sovereign good, or ultimate happiness of man, when compared with those of the Royal Preacher, not only appear cold and languid, but always leave the mind unsatisfied and restless. We are lost in a pompous flow of words; and dazzled, but not illuminated. One sect, by confining happiness to sensual pleasures, so greatly slackened the cord, as to render it wholly useless; another, by their too austere and rigid maxims, stretched it so tight, that it snapped asunder; though the experience of all ages has evinced, that these latter imposed both on themselves and the world, when they taught that virtue, however afflicted here, was its own reward, and sufficient of itself to render man completely happy. Even in the brazen lull of Parriculus, truth will cry out from the rack, against such fallacious teachers, and prove them liars. The extravagant figments, therefore, of the stoical apathy, no less than those of the voluptuous Epicurean, both equally vanish at the splendour of the Divine truth delivered by Solomon. He alone decides the great question in such a manner, that the soul is instantly convinced: it need seek no further.]—B.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON.

IN the First Book of Kings, (chap. iv. 32.) we find Solomon's Songs recorded at "one thousand and five," some of which are probably preserved in the Book of Psalms, and others included in the book now before us, which is called "the Song of Songs," as the most esteemed and considerable, and probably including several of them. Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, divided the poem into seven parts, answering to the seven days of the Jewish weddings; and Dr. Percy, (afterwards Bishop of Dromore,) who adopted the same notion, divides it into seven eclogues; but Dr. Mason Good into twelve distinct idyls.

Not only is this poem attributed to Solomon in the title, and by general tradition; but there are several points in the imagery which direct us to the age and circumstances of this celebrated king. The towers of David and of Lebanon, the fishpools of Heshbon, the vineyards of Engedi, the chariot and horses of Pharaoh, &c. would hardly have been thus referred to in a much later age.

Should it be asked, in what period of Solomon's life it was composed, the style and imagery employed, by no means agree with an advanced stage of life: the references to his marriage certainly incline us to attribute it, with Dr. Lightfoot, to a period not long after his accession to the throne, and it has generally been referred to the occasion of his marriage with Pharaoh's daughter—his only marriage particularly noticed in the Scriptures; and who is distinguished from the strange women that turned away his heart to idols. See 1 Kings xi. 1. Some passages have been indeed objected to, as inconsistent with this idea, notwithstanding all objections, however, we still think it the most probable hypothesis.

That this book belongs to the sacred canon, we cannot doubt; indeed the late Dr. Priestley (who was not ready to believe, too much) says, "There can be no doubt but that the canon of the Old Testament was the same in the time of our Saviour as it is now." It has been objected, that Josephus does not name this in his catalogue of the Sacred Books; but though he is not so express as might be wished, there is no reason to think he meant to exclude it. It is well known that the Jews reckoned their inspired books 22, (equal to the number of letters in their alphabet,) and he divides them thus; five books of Moses, thirteen of the prophets, early and later, and "four more, containing hymns to God, and admonitions to men;" which, though he does not distinctly name them, are generally and reasonably reckoned to be, the Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon. In the Christian church, we find this book in the catalogue of Melito, about A. D. 170; in Origen, about 230; in Athanasius, about 326, and in every succeeding age.

"The Song of Songs" (for so it is entitled, either on account of the excellence of the subject, or of the composition, as an Ephthalium or nuptial dialogue; or rather, if we may be allowed to give it a title more agreeable to the genius of the Hebrew, a Song of Loves. It is expressive of the utmost fervour, as well as of the utmost delicacy of passion; it is instinct, with all the spirit and all the sweetness of affection. The principal characters are Solomon himself and his bride, who are represented speaking both in dialogue and in soliloquy, when accidentally separated. Virgins, also, the companions of the bride, are introduced, who seem to be constantly upon the stage, and bear a part in the dialogue; mention, too, is made of young men, friends of the bridegroom, but they are mute persons. This is exactly conformable to the manners of the Hebrews, who had always a number of companions to the bridegroom, thirty of whom were present in honour of Samson, at his nuptial feast.—Louth.

Still it may be questioned, whether it is to be considered as a secular or a sacred poem. Michaelis, who considers it perfectly chaste in its language, looks upon it as written in honour of marriage; but others consider it as a sacred allegory; and the very learned and elegant critic just quoted, says, "By several reasons, by the general authority and consent of both the Jewish and Christian churches; and still more by the nature and analogy of the parabolic style, I feel irresistibly inclined to that side of the question which considers this poem as an entire allegory. Those, indeed, who have considered it in a different light, and who have objected against the inconsistency and meanness of the imagery, seem to be but little acquainted with the genius of the parabolic diction."

Sir Wm. Jones, Dr. Mason Good, and others, have shown that this also is according to the general style of eastern poetry, and have given a great number of similar examples from the Persian poets, and even from the Greek and Roman classics : but it is of much more importance to us, that we have similar instances of sacred allegory in other parts of the Old Testament. See Isaiah v. l. xxvii. 2 ; Hos. 5, 6 ; Lxx. 4, 5 ; Ezek. xvi. 10-14. Hos. ii. 19, 20.

The poem is a sacred allegory. In this light it was certainly considered by the ancient Rabbins : though, like Christian expositors, they differ in their modes of exposition. An old mystical writer says, that "God was transformed into love before he made the world. And because God created all things in love, he embraces all things with the same love : and the sum of all that he exacts of us is, 'that, being knit together by mutual love, we may, in conclusion, be united with him in love ; that so all things may be one, as they were from the beginning.'"

The generality of Jewish expositors consider the allegory as relating to the God of Israel and the Jewish church, but the most eminent Christian divines (especially Protestants) refer it to the pure and spiritual love subsisting between Messiah and the Christian Church, which, in New Testament language, he "purchased" with his blood.

"God is represented as the spouse of the church, and the church as the betrothed of God. Thus also the piety of the people, their impiety, their idolatry, and rejection, stand in the same relation to the sacred covenant as chastity, immodesty, adultery, and divorce, with respect to the marriage contract. And this notion is so familiar in Scripture, that the word adultery (or whoredom) is commonly used to denote idolatrous worship ; and so appropriate does it appear to this metaphorical purpose, that it very seldom occurs in its proper and literal sense." Leach.

As the God of Israel was considered as the Husband of the Jewish church, so is Jesus Christ represented in the same relation to the Christian. 2 Cor. xi. 2. Ephes. v. 23. And, consequently, not only is idolatry considered as adultery, but even heresy, by which we mean some fundamental error, such as "turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ;" ( Jude 4 ) and such heretics are threatened to be punished as spiritual adulterers. Rev. ii. 19-22.

But admitting the conjugal relation of Christ and the New Testament Church, it is proper to inquire who are intended mystically by the virgins, the daughters of Jerusalem, and the Companions of the Bridegroom? Commentators seem divided on this subject : but we have a happy clue to our inquiry, from an infallible expositor. When the dispute was agitated between the disciples of John and those of Jesus, why the former fasted and not the others, Jesus calls his own disciples "children of the bride-chamber," which seems of the like import with Companions of the Bridegroom ; and even John the Baptist himself claims that character. ( See Matt. ix. 15. John iii. 29.)

Christ then is the Bridegroom, and the Christian Church the bride, the Lamb's wife. ( Rev. xxi. 9.) Those who may not be formally members of this church, in any of its ecclesiastical divisions, but love the Bridegroom, and rejoice to hear his voice, may be properly considered as either the friends of the Bridegroom, or the virgin companions of the bride.

But who compose the Christian Church? Most certainly we are not authorized to confine this to the members of any national or congregational church ; but we include in it the members of every Christian society who hold Christ "the head," and honour him as such. ( Col. ii. 18.) This is the church universal, and we consider as bridal virgins and companions of the Bridegroom, all who desire to unite with her, or delight to hear his voice.

Further, as that which is true of the whole Christian church must be generally true of all its members, so we think ourselves authorized to apply to each and every one of them all the precepts and all the consolations of this sacred book, with due regard to their peculiar circumstances. And as the language of the Old Testament Church to Messiah was, "Make haste, my Beloved," as in the close of this book : so the Book of Revelation closes with a like devout aspiration for his second coming—"Even so, come Lord Jesus!"—Says the excellent T. Scott in his introduction to this book : "In short, this Song is a divine allegory in the form of a pastoral, which represents the reciprocal love between Christ and his church, under figures taken from the relation and affection, which subsist between a bridegroom and his espoused bride ; an emblem continually employed in Scripture. It has some reference to the state of the Jewish church, as waiting for the coming of the promised Messiah ; but it likewise accords to the reciprocal love between Christ and true believers in every age, and the communion which arises from it. In order properly to understand it, we must consider the Redeemer as a loving and beloved of his church. The marriage contract is already ratified, but the completion of this blessed union is reserved for the heavenly state. Here on earth the believer loves and rejoices in an unseen Saviour, and seeks his happiness from his spiritual presence : Christ 'manifests himself to him as he doth not unto the world ;' and these visits are earnest and foretastes of heavenly joy. But they are interrupted, suspended, or varied, on many accounts ; they are often lost by negligence or sin, and can only be recovered by humble repentance and renewed diligence : yet the love on both sides remains unchanged, as to its principle, though varied in the expression of it. These things are represented in a sort of dialogue, in which the church speaks of Christ, or to him ; and he answers, and addresses the church : and the daughters of Jerusalem, (who may represent such as are inquiring after this salvation,) are frequently addressed, and reply : thus the varying experiences and correspondent duties of the believer are delineated in a very animating and edifying manner." In the notes we shall freely give the views of this truly evangelical commentator.

The following are the divisions of this poem, according to

BOSSUET.

JAHN.

Dr. GOOD.

- Day 1. ch. I.—II. 6.
— 2. ch. II. 7-17.
— 3. ch. III.—V. 1.
— 4. ch. V. 2.—VI. 9.
— 5. ch. VI. 10.—VII. 11.
— 6. ch. VII. 12.—VIII. 3.
— 7. ch. VIII. 4-14.

- Song 1. ch. I. 1.—II. 7.
— 2. ch. II. 8.—III. 5.
— 3. ch. III. 6.—V. 1.
— 4. ch. V. 2.—VI. 9.
— 5. ch. VI. 10.—VIII. 3.
— 6. ch. VIII. 4-7.
— 7. ch. VIII. 8-12.
— 8. ch. VIII. 13, 14.

- Idyl 1. ch. I. 1-8.
— 2. ch. I. 9.—II. 7.
— 3. ch. II. 8-17.
— 4. ch. III. 1-6.
— 5. ch. III. 6.—IV. 7.
— 6. ch. IV. 8.—V. 1.
— 7. ch. V. 2.—VI. 10.
— 8. ch. VI. 11-13.
— 9. ch. VI. 14-17.
— 10. ch. VII. 10.—VIII. 4.
— 11. ch. VIII. 5-7.
— 12. ch. VIII. 8-14.

CHAPTER I.

The church's love unto Christ. 5 She confesseth her deformity, 7 and prayeth to be directed to his flock. 8 Christ directeth her to the shepherds' tents : 9 and showing his love to her, 11 giveth her gracious promises. 12 The church and Christ congratulate one another.

THE a song of songs, which is Solomon's.
2 Let him kiss b me with the kisses of his mouth : for thy c love is better than wine.

3 Because of the savour of thy good d ointments thy name e is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee.

4 Draw f me, we will run after thee : the king hath brought me into his g chambers : we

A. M. 2390.
B. C. 1014.

a 1 Ki. 4. 32
b Ps. 2. 12
c 1 Cor. 13. 1
d Ps. 45. 17.
e 119. 55.
f Job. 8. 44.
g Ep. 2. 6.

h they love thee rightly.
i Mat. 10. 22
— 25.

will be glad and rejoice in thee, we will remember thy love more than wine : b the up-right love thee.

5 ¶ I a am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

6 Look not upon me, because I a am black, because the sun hath looked upon me : my mother's children were angry i with me ; they made me keeper of the vineyards ; but mine own vineyard have I not kept.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-17. The mutual love between Christ and his Church.—The scene before us is evidently the Harem, or the apartments devoted to the women in one of the royal palaces, probably the House of the Forest of Lebanon : and there appears to us somewhat peculiarly beautiful in the abrupt manner in which the bride, here newly introduced, speaks of the bridegroom, before he enters the apartments, without any reference either to his name or rank. "Let him kiss me!" It intimates that he was the chief subject of her thoughts ; and, applying this to the church, it implies a spiritual state of mind, similar to that of Mary Magdalen, in addressing the supposed gardener, "Sir, if thou hast borne him hence, tell me," ( John xx. 15.) as not thinking it necessary to name the object of her inquiry. But before we proceed, let us here write, as the heathen upon their temples, "Far hence be the profane!" God forbid that any of us should make a jest of that love that astonishes angels, and absorbs the affections of saints in glory!

"Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth!" This is not a mere pleonasm.

Subjects and servants might, on some occasions, kiss the CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Which is Solomon's.—That is, composed by Solomon. See note on Ps. lxxii. title.—Solomon wrote many songs, all of which were doubtless finished in the most poetical manner ; but this sacred allegory has been preserved, and inserted in holy writ ; while most of the others have been lost. The preposition, which here assigns this Song to Solomon, is the same used in the Psalms referred to, and in many others, as showing who composed them.—Scott.

Ver. 2. Thy love is.—Heb. "Thy loves (are)." In this language the plural is often used for singular, as implying excellence.

Ver. 3. Ointments.—That is, perfumes ; so throughout this book in every instance. See Eccles. vii. 1.—The glorious excellences of the Redeemer's person and character ; the union of the Holy Spirit without measure ; the condescension and love of his undertaking in behalf of sinners ; the subtleties and preciousness of his counsels, atonement, and mediation, and of all the offices which he sustains for our benefit : render his name more pleasant to the believer's heart, than the most costly unguent or perfume could be to his senses.—Scott.

Ver. 4. We will remember.—"We will cause thy loves to be remembered feet, or even the hands of their sovereign, but to receive the "kisses of his mouth," was the prerogative of the bride, and implied a complete reconciliation, whatever previous offence might be supposed. Growing bolder in her affection, she now apostrophizes her beloved Lord as if present : "Thy love is better than wine!" that is, more delightful and exhilarating. So the apostle prays for those to whom he wrote, that they might know "the love of Christ that passeth knowledge!" ( Ephes. iii. 19.)

In the next verse, the odour of this love, the report of its labours and effects, is described as most attractive. Yes! He who died for sinners, promised, that when he arose again, and ascended up on high, he would "draw all men unto him." ( John xii. 32.) Thousands have been drawn in every successive age, and thousands shall still be drawn in every future age, until the number of his elect shall be accomplished, and gathered around his throne in glory.

It is universally agreed that this poem is in dialogue, but we have not, in all cases, a certain criterion to guide us in marking the speakers, and therefore have not presumed to attempt it in our text : in the exposition, however, we shall endeavour more than wine;" by attending on the memorials of thy love ; by our profession, worship, and instructing our children ; we will do what we can to cause thy love to be remembered by others, both while we live and after our decease.—Scott.—The upright love thee.—See margin. Boothroyd, "justly ; i. e. thou art every way lovely. See ch. v. 16.

Ver. 5. Daughters of Jerusalem.—The daughters of Jerusalem, "may here mean such persons as associate with believers, and favour the cause of the gospel, but are not yet established or experienced in the faith : though some consider them as part of the professed church of Israel : and others as "foreign congregations," which is not at all probable. The spouse, however, aims to prevent them from being stumbled by what they witnessed of her circumstances or appearance. In some respects, she was blackish, as the weather-beaten tents of the Arabian shepherds ; but in others, shew as comely as the magnificent curtains in the palaces of Solomon. The original word for "black" signifies dark as the early dawn.—Scott.

Ver. 6. Look not.—Gaze not, stare not.—Because I am black.—The Hebrew word here is more emphatic than in the preceding verse.—Angry.—Boothroyd, "Severe."

7 ¶ Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon : for why should I be as one that <sup>is</sup> turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions ?

8 ¶ If thou know not, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps <sup>1</sup> of the flock, and feed thy kids beside the shepherds' tents.

9 ¶ I have compared thee, O my love, to a company of horses in Pharaoh's char-riots.

10 Thy cheeks are comely with rows of <sup>n</sup>jewels, thy neck with chains of gold.

11 ¶ We will make thee borders of gold with studs of silver.

j Ps.23.2,3.
k or, is welled.
l He.6.12.
m 2Ch.1.16, 17. n Eze.16.11
..13.
o 1Pe.3.3,4.

o or, *cypress
c.4.13.*
p or, companion.
q or, galleries.
a Jn.15.1.

12 ¶ While the king sitteth at his table, my spikenard sendeth forth the smell thereof.

13 A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me: he shall lie all night betwixt my breasts.

14 My beloved is unto me as a cluster of ° camphire in the vineyards of En-gedi.

15 Behold, thou art fair, my <sup>p</sup> love; behold, thou art fair, thou hast doves' eyes.

16 Behold, thou art fair, my beloved, yea, pleasant: also our bed is green.

17 The beams of our house are cedar, and our <sup>a</sup> rafters of fir.

CHAPTER II.

I<sup>a</sup> AM the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys.

to mark the changes of person, so far as circumstances may direct us. The second and third verses are undoubtedly the language of the bride; but the fourth appears to be only partly hers. The words "Draw me," are an apostrophe of the bride to the bridegroom, still absent, implying that her affections were fixed on him by the report of his excellence, figuratively called the savour (or odour) of his perfumes: but the following words (being plural) must be attributed to the virgins, her companions, who express their readiness to follow her into the presence of her beloved, and the great pleasure they should take in waiting on her. "The king (saith she) hath brought me into his apartments;" "We will celebrate thy love (reply they) more than wine: the upright love thee," and they love thee justly, for thy virtues and thy charms.

In verses 5 to 7, the bride apologizes for the defects of her complexion, as not only a native of Egypt, (as we are disposed to understand it), and therefore naturally dark in her complexion; but the more dark as having been unnecessarily exposed to the beams of the sun, through the envy of her sisters, (probably her elder sisters,) to whose care she had been intrusted. When we read, however, of her having been made keeper of the vineyards, we need not interpret it of any servile occupation. Under the name vineyard, the Hebrews included every kind of plantation; and the probability seems to be, that her envious sisters, noticing the remarkable beauty of her features, had wantonly exposed her complexion to the sun beams, whereby she became the more dark. This she considered as a set-off against her natural beauty, on which she was complimented by the virgins, her companions. Thus she says, that though in her features and dress she might resemble the curtains of Solomon's pavilion, in her complexion she approached the dark brown tents of the Kedar Arabs. To keep the vineyard of others, and neglect her own, may probably mean, that she carefully performed the duties assigned to her, while she neglected her own person: an image which in its application to the Christian Church, may suggest a useful hint to those engaged in superintending the spiritual concerns of others, not to neglect their own.

Applying this allegorically, the language has been supposed to refer to the various declensions into which the church has fallen, and the persecutions and captivities to which she has been exposed. The pastoral images in verses 7 and 8, naturally lead us to contemplate the God of Israel as the Shepherd of his church under the Old Testament; and under the New, his beloved Son, "the Good Shepherd, who laid down his life for the sheep." (Psalm lxxx. 1. John x. 11.)

The comparison of a royal bride to a chariot horse, may seem to us coarse and mean, but this objection is effectually repelled by the fact, that Theocritus so compared a Grecian queen. The horse is an animal of great personal beauty, and those of royal persons were very richly dressed. The beauty of the church, and of all true Christians, lies in their moral virtues and Christian graces; qualities which, though undervalued by the world, are highly estimable in the sight of God, of angels, and of "the spirits of just men made perfect." The reciprocal affection between Christ and his church, is expressed on her part by comparing him to a casket of perfume, and to a nosegay of fragrant blossoms: on his part, by commending her general beauty, (for fairness does not here refer to her complexion,) and particularly her eyes. Apply this to the eyes of the understanding, and the allusion is easy to be understood; and bearing in mind the close connexion between the understanding and affections, (for what we approve we love,) we may refer this imagery to both. The two last verses we feel inclined, with Bishop Patrick and Dr. Boothroyd, to apply to the bride, who expresses therein her admiration of her beloved Lord, and of the preparations he had made for her accommodation, both in the verdant carpet of the lawn, and in the roof and galleries of the palace: or, if the idea we have already suggested be founded in fact, that the house of the forest of Lebanon was made to imitate rural scenery, both the carpet and the roof may refer to the same building. (See note on ver. 16.)

NOTE ON VER. 16.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—17. Spiritual intercourse between Christ and his Church.—Commentators are now generally agreed in ascribing the first verse of this chapter to the bride, partly because the original terms for rose and lily are feminine; and partly because it introduces better the reply of the bridegroom in the following verse. It also agrees better with the modesty of a new bride. After all the compliments she had received, she still considers herself as “a rose-bud of the field, a lily,” which grew wild among “the valleys.” Modesty is a Christian grace, equally becoming churches and individuals; and to be humble in our own eyes, is the way to be exalted by him who “resisteth the proud, but giveth more grace to the humble.” (James iv. 6, 10.) Accordingly the bridegroom, in his reply, though he admits his fair one to be a “lily,” intimates that she was as much superior to others, as a lily to the thorns that sometimes grow around it.

The bride, in return, (ver. 3.) compares her beloved to a citron tree, and prefers him to all others, as the citron tree, with its precious fruit, is preferred to all the trees of the forest.

Ver. 7. As one that turneth aside.—See margin. But we prefer the textual rendering, as agreeing better with the pastoral imagery.

Ver. 8. If thou know not.—It is evidently absurd to suppose this verse to be the language of the attendant virgins, or unestablished converts; for how should they be able to instruct the spouse in her perplexity, and even to answer the request which she had addressed to her Beloved. No doubt the Bridegroom is here introduced, as counselling his faithful spouse, with an encouraging commendation of her spiritual beauty, as compared with the rest of the world, and as promising her, if she persevered, that she should at last obtain some company of hypocrites or heretics for his chosen people; she could not do better, than to consider the examples of the most approved believers in the successive ages of the church, as recorded in the word of God, with the doctrines which they maintained; to follow their steps, without regarding those who pretended to new discoveries, and taught opinions, either unknown in other ages, or condemned as heresy; to mark such pastors, as simply kept the beaten track, the good old way, to attend to their ministry, with her children, and to be ready to receive them as they came, as she was ready to receive them to their example. The literal meaning of this, as applied to Pharaoh's daughter, is not especially affected by those who adhere to that mode of interpretation.—Scott.

Ver. 9. To a company of horses.—Dr. Good, "One of the steeds;" Dr. Percival, "My mare;" Williams, "The horse," using the word as plural, like calvary. Egypt produced the finest horses in the world, and the best horses of Egypt were sent to the king of Assyria, and were conveyed to be used by him. The word company is used to be conveyed is probably corruption, which, in the East, is a mark of beauty.

Ver. 10. Thy cheeks, &c.—The spiritual gifts and graces, which Christ bestows on his people, and which are the ornaments of the church, and are to be here described by the external ornaments then in use; and not without reference to the ornaments used in the harnesses of horses, especially in the

Ver. 11. Borders of gold with studs of silver.—That is, ornaments of jewelry, in which there may be an allusion to the dress and furniture of Pharaoh's horses. This verse is generally supposed to be the reply of the attendant virgins, who thus engaged to prepare for the spouse the ornaments with which she was about to be decorated: but, as the increase and perfection of the church's spiritual adorning is the gift and work of God; it may be doubted.

whether this language should not be considered, in respect of the new creation, as in some respects similar to the remarkable words of the Creator, when about to form our first parents.—Scott.

Ver. 13. A bundle of myrrh.—Myrrh is a gum, and must therefore have been inclosed in a casket, in which form it was commonly worn in the bosom of females of the higher class. So Harmer.

Ver. 14. Camphire.—See margin. Dr. Shaw and Sir W. Jones explain this of the Henna, an elegant and odoriferous plant, which Sonnini says was worn by ladies as a nosegay.

Ver. 15. Fair.—Here means beautiful, without any particular reference to the skin.—My love.—See margin. Williams, "Consort."—Here Christ again speaks, commending his beloved, as fair; especially, as having eyes like the dove, which are gentle, loving, and pure. This may imply her spiritual discernment and watchfulness, the purity and simplicity of her affection for him, and her mild and harmless conduct in the world.—Scott

Ver. 16. Our bed is green.—Williams, "Verdant is our carpet." Drs. Percy, Good, Boothroyd, and others, consider the present scene as a shady grove but if "the house of the forest of Lebanon" was, as some think, built to resemble a forest, that may be the scene here intended. See exposition 1 Ki vii

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. I am the rose . . . the lily.—The Rabbin applied this to the bride, as also Ainsworth, Brightman, Cocceus, and most of the moderns.—Aquila renders it the rose bud, (Hebrew, "the shaded rose.") and so Parishurst. "A rose of the field," LXX.; so also Percy, Good, Taylor, Boothroyd, &c. Sharon was famous for its pasturage. See Isa. lxx. 10.

Not the lily of the vleys.—That is, a wild lily, such as grew among the corn. Not the small flower so vulgarly denominated among us.—It is most obvious to suppose that the Bridegroom here speaks, and declares his own preciousness to his bride, and the excellence of his love, by the comparison of himself with the lily. It is probable that Sharon was eminent for roses of beautiful hue, and peculiar fragrance. Thus Christ, in his person, character, and mediation, combine every excellency in the highest degree; and is most delightful some and refreshing to all. And he will be a lily.—That is, he will be a lily of the vleys, as a pattern of his humiliation in assuming our nature, and his love to the world; of his dwelling and communing with the “poor of this world,” and the “poor in spirit,” in this vale of sin and sorrow; and likewise of his spotless life, and his freedom from all the “thorns.” They that believe in Christ partake of his excellencies. —Scott.

2 As the lily among <sup>b</sup> thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

3 As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I <sup>c</sup> sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit <sup>d</sup> was sweet to my <sup>e</sup> taste.

4 He brought me to the <sup>f</sup> banquetting house, and his banner over me was <sup>g</sup> love.

5 Stay me with flagons, <sup>h</sup> comfort me with apples: for I am sick of love.

6 His <sup>i</sup> left hand <sup>j</sup> is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me.

7 I <sup>k</sup> charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roses, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, till he please.

8 ¶ The voice of my beloved! behold, he cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills.

9 My beloved is like a roe or a young hart: behold, he standeth behind our wall, he look-

b Mat. 10.16
Ph. 2.15.

c I delighted to sit and down.

d Re. 22.1,2.

e palate.

f house of wine.

g Jn. 15.9.
15.

h etreco me.

i c. 8.3,5.

j adjure.

k flourishing.

l Lu. 24.35.

m Ep. 5.8.

n Pr. 15.8.
Re. 5.3.

o Ecce. 12.4.

eth forth at the windows, <sup>k</sup> showing <sup>l</sup> himself through the lattice.

10 ¶ My beloved spake, and said unto me, Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.

11 For, lo, the winter is <sup>m</sup> past, the rain is over and gone;

12 The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land,

13 The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away.

14 ¶ O my dove, that art in the clefts of the rock, in the secret places of the stairs, let me see thy countenance, let me hear thy voice; for sweet <sup>n</sup> is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely.

15 Take us the foxes, the little <sup>o</sup> foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes.

"Under his shade (saith she) I delighted and sat down." She then relates the happiness she had enjoyed whilst sitting within the wine-cave (probably) in the garden, surrounded with fruit and confectionaries, there enjoying those chaste embraces to which her marriage relation had entitled her, she strongly deprecates the idea of being deprived of them. The charge here given, is in the form of adjuration, which it is very difficult to reconcile with the Mosaic law, which forbade swearing by the creatures: it was, however, common, in making a covenant, to call even dumb creatures to bear witness to it. So Abraham, in his covenant with Abimelech, "set apart seven ewe lambs" for that purpose. (Gen. xxi. 30.) And it appears, by Bruce's Travels, that a similar custom is preserved in the East to the present day.

In applying the privileges and enjoyments of a married state to the spiritual communion between God and his church, or between Christ and believers, great prudence and caution should be observed; but in the application itself, we are certainly warranted by many passages, both in the Old and New Testaments. The house of God (or, indeed, any place where in he manifests his presence) is his banquetting house, where he makes a feast of wine, and of the richest provisions: that

Ver. 3. As the apple.—The Chaldee says "citron," which we have no doubt is the tree intended. So all the modern critics. Apples in Judea, according to Harmer, are very indifferent.—A traveller, scorched by the noonday sun, would gladly shelter himself under the branches of a spreading apple tree, or citron tree, and refresh himself with its fruit. Thus the believer remembers many seasons, when remote of conscience, and fear of deserved wrath, with the temptations of Satan, and the injuries of the world, dismayed or distressed him, and left him without any conceivable refuge, except that revealed in Christ Jesus. To this he fled with earnest desires, and under it he sat down, or sheltered himself; while the pardon and peace, which it afforded him, were delightful to his heart; and the consolations of the Spirit of adoption, as fruits from this Tree of life, were sweet to his taste, in proportion to his former terror, humiliation, and affliction, and to the degree in which he was weaned from earthly objects.—Scott.

Ver. 4. Banquetting house.—See margin. The best modern critics render this verse in the optative (as a request) like the following. Thus Dr. Percy, "O bring me into the house of festivity; spread the banner of love over me!" But if we adhere to our authorized version, as we still feel inclined, ver. 5 must be considered as addressed to the bridegroom.

Ver. 5. Stay me with flagons.—The word rendered flagons, is of very doubtful interpretation: in his former work on Canticles, the Editor gave more than a dozen versions, and could now add as many more. Good, Fry, and Boothroyd use "cordials," but Gesenius explains it of "a cake, or hardened syrup, made of grapes." In this doubtful case we may as well, perhaps, retain the general term "refreshments."—Comfort me with apples.—Williams, "Strew (or spread) citrons round me." See note on ver. 3.

Ver. 6. His left hand.—This is a representation of the tenderest affection of a husband for his wife, when he sees her in danger to faint; and, being applied to Christ and his church, sets forth his readiness to succour us in all our needs, by the power of his spirit.—Patrick. Christ, though absent as to sight and full fruition, is present to the faith of his people; and the spouse here thankfully acknowledges, that he graciously comforted her, when ready to faint with earnest longings after him, or when under troubles and temptations.—Scott.

Ver. 7. By the roses.—Williams, "Before the roses;" so Beth is rendered, Gen. xxiii. 18.—According to our translation, these are the words of the spouse, concerning her Beloved, who "rested in his love" as one asleep, while employed in supporting and comforting her. In this sense the verse implies, that she, afraid of terminating his gracious visit by any disturbance, charges the daughters of Jerusalem not to awake him. We grieve the Spirit of God by wrong tempers; and others the lattice.—The roses and hinds of the field are gentle and pleasant creatures, but exceedingly timorous; and so are introduced as witnesses to the charge here given; which is indeed a solemn adjuration, not by them, but as in their presence.—Scott.

Ver. 9. A roe, or a young hart.—Buffon, Dr. Shaw, Sir Wm. Jones, and others, understand this of the antelope, or gazelle, the most beautiful animal of the forest.—Shawing.—See margin: alluding to the sportive playfulness of a young hart.—Through the lattice.—The latticed window of an arched boundary, probably of the pleasure garden, separated from the park by a light fence.

Ver. 12. Of the singing.—Louth, "Of the song."—This most poetical description of the approach of spring, in which the spouse speaks of Christ, as inviting her to walk abroad with him, may be variously applied. "The flowers" may denote the opening blossoms of holy affections and desires; "the time of the singing of birds," may mean his first grateful songs of praise; "the voice of the turtle," then first heard in the land, may signify the first comforts of the witnessing, sealing Spirit of God; "the green figs, and tender grapes" or buds, which are pleasant to the smell, represent the first mature fruits of righteousness, which promise a future valuable increase; and all these encouraging tokens and evidences of divine favour, are employed as motives to the soul, to follow Christ more entirely. The passage may also be accommodated to the believer's renewed comforts, after a season of temptation and discouragement; to the renewed peace of the church, after sore persecutions and to the completion of the happiness of all true believers in heaven.—Scott.

In the next scene (ver. 8, &c.) the voice of the beloved is heard as at a great distance, and the bride anticipates that he is hastening to her company, as "a roe or a young hart scription of the approach of spring, in which the spouse speaks of Christ, as inviting her to walk abroad with him, may be variously applied. "The flowers" may denote the opening blossoms of holy affections and desires; "the time of the singing of birds," may mean his first grateful songs of praise; "the voice of the turtle," then first heard in the land, may signify the first comforts of the witnessing, sealing Spirit of God; "the green figs, and tender grapes" or buds, which are pleasant to the smell, represent the first mature fruits of righteousness, which promise a future valuable increase; and all these encouraging tokens and evidences of divine favour, are employed as motives to the soul, to follow Christ more entirely. The passage may also be accommodated to the believer's renewed comforts, after a season of temptation and discouragement; to the renewed peace of the church, after sore persecutions and to the completion of the happiness of all true believers in heaven.—Scott.

Ver. 13. The fig tree putteth forth.—Green, "Sweeteneth;" i. e. ripeneth. Ver. 14. In the secret places of the stairs.—Williams, "In the secret fissures of the cliffs." Good, "In the fastnesses of the precipices."—Christ is still the speaker. The spouse, conscious of her unworthiness, and ashamed of her former sins, her remaining depravity, and the imperfection of her present services, had hidden herself "in the clefts of the rock," or in some retired place, as declining his gracious invitation. "Thou that art ashamed of thy sins, come and show thyself unto me." In this is represented a mixture of humility and unbelief, common in the experience of true but unestablished believers. Some, however, understand the verse, of the church, or believers, fleeing from persecution, into the most retired places; (as the dove flees into the recesses of the rock from the birds of prey;) yet there encouraged to present her worship, as assured of the tender affection and gracious acceptance of her beloved, though despised and hated by the world. The faithful and loving dove is an apt emblem of the true church, as espoused to Christ; and by her conformity to him, through the sanctification of the Spirit, she is well pleasing in his sight.—Scott.

Ver. 15. The foxes.—Foxes are very fond of grapes; whether "the little foxes" in this sense, may be doubtful. Hasselquist calls the jack-the little eastern fox." Harrie's Nat. Hist. By these foxes, &c. commentators generally understand heretics; that is, persons who propagate dangerous and fundamental errors.—Perhaps, in general, it is a caution against every thing, however plausible, or considered as a small matter, which tends to hinder the prosperity of the church and the fruitfulness of believers, and against heresy in particular. Whatever wastes time, squanders money, or engrosses a large share of attention, and tends to the neglect of the means of grace, is of this kind; and even when the pursuit, or study, (such as of music, painting, and various other things of the same nature,) is not directly criminal in itself; it spoils the vine, and mars its tender grapes, with the unsuspected subtlety of the fox. The first rising of sinful thoughts and desires, and the beginnings of those trifling pursuits, are like "the little foxes," which, if not taken, will spoil the vines. Trifling visits, which waste much time, incur expense, put the mind out of frame for devotion, and intrude on the hours that should be employed in meditation, self-examination, searching the Scripture, and secret prayer, are peculiarly injurious in this respect; and no good can arise from such unnecessary intercourse with worldly people; or with superficial professors of the gospel, whose company is still more prejudicial. Specious deviations from the truth, which make a little allowance for the pride, avarice, vanity, or indolence of our hearts, and those who are ever asking, What harm is there in this, or in that? or. What need of this or that measure of diligence? are little foxes, which spoil the vines: and which must be taken and removed out of the way, by private Christians and public teachers, who desire to be, or to see their people fruitful branches of the living Vine.—Scott.

16 ¶ My beloved is mine, and I am his: he feedeth among the lilies.

17 Until the day break, and the shadows flee away, turn, my beloved, and be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bethel.

CHAPTER III.

1 The church's fight and victory in temptation. 6 The church glorieth in Christ.

BY night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

2 I will rise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

3 The watchmen that go about the city found me: to whom I said, Saw ye him whom my soul loveth?

4 It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found him whom my soul loveth: I held him, and would not let him go, until I had brought him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me.

5 I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, till he please.

6 ¶ Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke, perfumed with

P Ps. 63.1.
q 1 Co. 3.23.
r 2 Pe. 1.19.
s c. 8.14.
t or, division.
a 1a. 26.9.
b Job 23.8,9.
c c. 5.7.
Eze. 3.17.
d c. 6.12.
e Is. 45.19.
Je. 29.12, 13.
f Re. 3.11,12.
g c. 2.7.
8.4,5.
h Mi. 4.8.
i De. 8.2.
Is. 43.19.
j Ph. 4.18.
Re. 5.8.

k 2 Ki. 6.17.
He. 1.14.
l Pa. 45.3.
m 1a. 27.3.
n or, bed.
o Re. 1.7.
p He. 2.9.
q Ja. 3.29.
Re. 21.9, 10.
r Is. 62.5.
s Eze. 16.14.
t or, eat of.

myrrh and frankincense, with all powders of the merchant?

7 Behold his bed, which is Solomon's; three-score valiant men are about it, of the valiant of Israel.

8 They all hold swords, being expert in war: every man hath his sword upon his thigh because of fear in the night.

9 King Solomon made himself a chariot of the wood of Lebanon.

10 He made the pillars thereof of silver, the bottom thereof of gold, the covering of it of purple, the midst thereof being paved with love, for the daughters of Jerusalem.

11 Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold king Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals, and in the day of the gladness of his heart.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Christ setteth forth the graces of the church. 8 He sheweth his love to her. 16 The church prayeth to be made fit for his presence.

BEHOLD, thou art fair, my love; behold, thou art fair; thou hast doves' eyes without thy locks: thy hair is as a flock of goats, that appear from mount Gilead.

2 Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing; whereof every one bear twins, and none is barren among them.

bounding over the mountains." She then sees his near approach, and hears his invitation to accompany him in the sweet enjoyments of rural scenery, and the opening spring. If we consider these words as addressed to the Jewish church, we must understand it with reference to the approaching gospel dispensation, which, after the Mosaic economy, may be compared to the advances of spring and summer, after a dreary winter. It is a dispensation of light and life—of joy and singing. And the approach of Messiah was hailed at a less and less distance, in every succeeding age. In the mean time, much of his beauty and glory might be discerned through the lattice-work (as it were) of Jewish types and ceremonies, until the day should breathe, and with the refreshing breeze should arise "the Sun of righteousness," with healing beneath his wings. (Mal. iv. 2.)

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—11. The relation of a dream on the preceding night: Solomon's approach in a state carriage.—That this is the relation of a dream is the opinion of many modern commentators, and we know no other principle on which it can be explained. This is also the more natural, as in those early ages, dreams were made the vehicle of divine revelation, as was particularly the case with Solomon. (1 Kings iii. 5.) We need not allegorize all the circumstances of this dream: the object of relating it is, to show that her divine spouse occupied her thoughts by day and night: that when she obtained his presence, she was most unwilling to part from him: (Hos. xii. 4.) that the highest enjoyments known on earth, even those of a spiritual nature, are, when past, "as a dream when

Ver. 17. Until the day break.—Hebrew, "Breathe," or blow fresh, Drs. Gill and Percy.—This may refer to the shadows of the Mosaic dispensation, which were dispelled by the breaking of the gospel day, and the rising of "the Sun of Righteousness," or to the darkness and shadows of our state on earth, which will shortly be changed for heavenly light and substantial felicity.—Scott.
Of Bethel.—See margin; i. e. craggy mountains. [Bethel was probably the betar of the Antonine Itinerary, between Caesarea and Diopolis, or Lydda, eighteen miles from the former and twenty-two from the latter; and the Bethel of the Rabbins, which they place four miles from the sea.]—Bagster.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. By night on my bed.—This seems to imply, that the marriage had been consummated, after which, it appears, the bride and bridegroom passed the other nights of the feast separately. Percy's New Trans. Leviticus. Heb. Antio.—Some interpreters suppose, that the spouse seeking her Beloved, "by night on her bed," denotes a season of darkness and drowsiness, of dim apprehensions, languid affections, and heartless services. Others accommodate it to a season of affliction. "The church, by night, that is, in troubles, seeketh to Christ, but is not incontinently" (immediately) "heard." But perhaps solitude and retired meditation are principally intended; as David remembered God on his bed, and meditated on him in the night-watches, which showed the fervency of his love.—Scott.

Ver. 2. I will rise now.—So she said to herself, in sleep,—"The streets, and broad ways of the city," seem rather to imply earnestness in all the means of grace, in which sweet communion with the Lord should be sought; than to mark the distinction between public, social, and private duties. Thus the spouse is represented as seeking her Beloved in every part of the city.—Scott.

Ver. 3. The watchmen.—That is, the patrol which guarded the royal palace.

Ver. 4. Into my mother's house.—Some have argued from this, that the bride could not be Pharaoh's daughter; but they forget that this is the relation of a dream.—The church at large may be called the mother of believers; the public ordinances are the chambers, in which they are born of God: and the spouse, bringing her Beloved into this house and these chambers, may signify the believer's open profession of his faith, and joining himself to the Lord and his people; with a declaration, expressed or implied, of his intention to walk with them in love and holy obedience.—Scott.

Ver. 6. Who.—Most of the modern translations read "What," which we think much better.

Ver. 7. His bed.—The term here used may signify a litter, or travelling bed.

one awaketh." "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream." (Ps. cxxvi. 1 &c.)

The next scene which opens, (ver. 6.) is probably an early morning scene; and by the guard attending, we may suppose the carriage had been travelling all night. On waking, and going abroad, the bride discovers a cloud of smoke, which she attributes to the burning perfumes in silver or golden censers, and which she compares, for value, to the powders of the merchant, of which gold dust was a principal article.

The palanquin here described, is of the most costly materials, and elegant construction: considering it as emblematical of the gospel dispensation, we might remark its magnificence: it displays the glory and majesty of the King of Zion—its comfort; it is lined with the expressions of divine love and mercy—its security; it is safely guarded; and "are not all the angels ministering spirits," or guardian angels, "sent forth to minister unto them that shall be heirs of salvation." Lastly, when the nuptial crown of Solomon is alluded to, it may direct our attention to Him who, when he shall come again in glory, will have "on his head many crowns." (Rev. xix. 12.) The most important consideration for us is, to prepare to meet him—"Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!"

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—16. The love of Christ, and the beauty of the Church.—The bridegroom may here be supposed to have alighted from his palanquin, to converse with the bride, when he commends the beauty of her countenance, and the symmetry of her features. This description may not, indeed, exactly suit European ideas; but the images are certainly in which great personages were carried by bearers; a palanquin, as explained in verse 9.—Threescore, &c.—[These were the guards about the pavilion of the bridegroom; which were required both for the security and state of the prince.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. A chariot.—Heb. Apireon. The word is found only in this place, and Gesenius explains it "a sedan, a litter, a portable couch," the same as the bed above-mentioned, and which is described as it approaches nearer.

Ver. 10. The bottom—Woolens. "Its carpet of gold." (i. e. cloth of gold; see Esther i. 6.) its seat (or cushion) purple, &c.—Paved with love—Wittams. "Lined;" Boothroyd, "Spread."—For the daughters.—The clause rendered "for the daughters of Jerusalem," may mean "by or from, the daughters of Jerusalem." Solomon's chariot was adorned by their needlework, and the figures, whatever they were, wrought by them, are no unapt allusions, of the Christians adorning the doctrine of God their Saviour in all things.—Scott.

Lady M. W. Montague informs us, that the Turkish coaches are painted on the inside with baskets of flowers, &c. intermixed with poetical mottoes. This carriage was perhaps lined with ornamental needlework, for which the Jewish ladies were famous. See Jud. v. 30. Prov. xxxi. 22, &c.

Ver. 11. The crown, &c.—This was probably the nuptial crown which Bathsheba might place upon his head.—This verse contains the most express allusion to the marriage of Solomon, of any in the whole book: but it is not said whether to Naamah the Ammonitess, his first wife as far as we know, or to Pharaoh's daughter, or to some other of his wives. It seems that it was customary in ancient times, for the bridegroom, or bride, or both, to wear a nuptial crown; and it may be supposed that Solomon's on such a joyful occasion, would be very magnificent. It was put on his head by his mother Bathsheba.—"O ye daughters of Zion, . . . look upon king Solomon, as he sits solemnly crowned in the day of his greatest royalty and triumph; and compare his highest pomp with the divine magnificence of my Saviour, in that day when his blessed marriage shall be fully perfected above to the eternal rejoicing of himself and his church, and see whether there be any proportion between them." Bishop Hall.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Doves' eyes.—See note on chap. v. 12.—Thy hair—As goats; i. e. as the hair of goats, clean, and fine, and soft.—*That appear—*See margin, or, that brows on, Hodgson, Louth, &c.

Ver. 2. Thy teeth are like a flock.—That is, white, uniform, and none wanting.

3 Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet, and thy speech <sup>is</sup> comely: thy temples are like a piece of a pomegranate within thy locks.

4 Thy neck <sup>is</sup> like the tower of David builded for an armoury, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men.

5 Thy two <sup>a</sup> breasts are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies.

6 Until <sup>e</sup> the day <sup>f</sup> break, and the shadows flee away, I will get me to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense.

7 Thou <sup>art</sup> all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee.

8 ¶ Come with me from Lebanon, my <sup>h</sup> spouse, with me from Lebanon: look from the top of Amana, from the top of <sup>i</sup> Shenir and Hermon, from the lions' dens, from the mountains of the leopards.

9 Thou hast <sup>i</sup> ravished my heart, my sister, my spouse; thou hast ravished my heart with one of thine eyes, with one chain of thy neck.

10 How fair is thy love, my sister, my spouse! now much better is thy love than wine! and the smell of thine ointments than all spices!

11 Thy lips, O my spouse, drop as the honeycomb: <sup>h</sup> honey and milk are under thy tongue; and the smell of thy garments is like the smell <sup>i</sup> of Lebanon.

12 A garden <sup>m</sup> inclosed is my sister, my spouse; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed.

13 Thy plants are an orchard of pomegranates, with pleasant fruits; <sup>n</sup> camphire, with spikenard,

14 Spikenard and saffron; calamus and cin-

o Pr. 31. 36.
Col. 4. 6.
d Pr. 5. 19.
c. 7. 3.
e c. 2. 17.
f breathe.
g Ep. 5. 27.
h Is. 54. 5.
Ho. 2. 19.
20.
i De. 3. 9.

j or, taken away.
k Pr. 24. 13.
14.
c. 5. 1.
l Ge. 27. 27.
Ho. 14. 6, 7.
m barred.
n or, cypress c. 1. 14.

o c. 5. 1.
p Jn. 4. 10.
14; 7. 38.
a c. 4. 11, 16.
b Is. 55. 1, 2.
c Jn. 3. 29.
15. 13. 15.

d or, and be drunken with love.
e Re. 22. 17.
f Re. 3. 20.
g or, (as some read) in me.
h passing, or, running about.
i c. 3. 13.

namon, with all trees of frankincense; myrrh <sup>o</sup> and aloes, with all the chief spices:

15 A fountain of gardens, a well of living <sup>p</sup> waters, and streams from Lebanon.

16 ¶ Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south, blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits.

CHAPTER V.

1 Christ awaketh the church with his calling. 2 The church having a taste of Christ's love is sick of love. 3 A description of Christ by his graces.

I AM come <sup>a</sup> into my garden, my sister, my spouse: I have gathered my myrrh with my spice; I have eaten my honeycomb with my honey; I have drunk my wine with my milk: <sup>b</sup> eat, O <sup>c</sup> friends; drink, <sup>d</sup> yea, drink <sup>e</sup> abundantly, O beloved.

2 ¶ I sleep, but my heart waketh: it is the voice of my beloved that <sup>f</sup> knocketh, saying, Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night.

3 I have put off my coat; how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them?

4 My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door, and my bowels were moved <sup>g</sup> for him.

5 I rose up to open to my beloved; and my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers with <sup>h</sup> sweet-smelling myrrh, upon the handles of the lock.

6 I opened to my beloved; but my beloved had withdrawn himself, and was gone: my soul failed when he spake: I sought <sup>i</sup> him, but in accordance with the taste of the East, and such as are employed by their chastest poets; and that, too, in reference to moral and religious subjects, as is most satisfactorily proved in the writings of Sir William Jones, Bishop Lowth, and other eminent eastern scholars. We think ourselves fully justified in our application of these images to the moral and spiritual beauty of the church, and her divine Redeemer's love, by many similar images which occur in other parts of the sacred volume. Thus (in Ps. xlv. 11.) it is said to her, "The King doubtless King Messiah) shall greatly desire thy beauty: for ne is thy Lord, (thy spiritual husband,) and worship thou him." So St. Paul tells us, that Christ and the church are "one flesh," even as man and wife. "This is a great mystery, (he adds,) but I speak concerning Christ and the church." (Ephes. v. 31, 2. See also the Scriptures referred to in the Introduction to this book, at the commencement of page 729.

The supreme authority which instituted marriage, has pronounced it not only innocent, but "honourable." (Heb. xiii. 4.) And experience shows, that when men began to consider it in the opposite light, and affected monachism for greater purity, they sunk into crimes the most unnatural and detestable. Let us beware, therefore, of attempting to refine upon the divine law, or aiming to be purer than God's commands. That which God has pronounced holy, let us not dare to call "unclean." But to return from this digression: When the bride is described as "all fair," and "without spot," is not this the very character of the Christian church, and of the true believer, as she appears before her Lord? He who purchased her by his own blood, sanctifies her by his word and Spirit, "that he may present her to himself, a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing;—that it, (or she) should be holy, and without blemish," in which the very passage before us seems referred to. (Comp. Ephes. v. 25—28.)

When the church is here required to come from Lebanon and Hermon, from the dens of the lions, and the mountains of the leopards; what can it mean but for her to forsake the world, and cast herself upon the protection of her celestial husband? And when she is compared to "a garden enclosed, and a spring sealed," what can it import, but a devotion to her Lord, and to him alone. Then does she produce the sweetest plants, and the most pleasant fruits, which are not to be considered as the wild productions of nature, but must be attributed to the living waters and the heavenly gales, by which alone fertility can be produced.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—16. Another dream, which introduces a description of the Messiah, as the beloved of the Church.—In 'he close of the preceding chapter, the bride, that is, the church, had been wishing and praying for the influences of the Holy Spirit, to awaken her energies, and warm and invigorate her piety, that her Beloved, coming into his garden, might show his approbation, or, as it is metaphorically expressed, "eat his pleasant fruits." The verse which opens this chapter, which certainly ought not to have been separated from the preceding, is the answer of the bridegroom, expressing his delight in her conduct and conversation. "I am come into my garden;" i. e. the church; (see chap. iv. 12.) "I have gathered my spices;" (ch. iv. 13, 14.) "I have eaten my honey," (from the comb) meaning, listened to her conversation; (ch. iv. 11.) "I have drunk my wine," I have received the utmost pleasure in the evidence of thy love and attachment; and then he turns round to his companions, and invites them to partake with him the pleasures of her conversation. "Eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved."—The marriage feast, we must recollect, was kept open during all the seven days appropriated to its celebration.

The following verses relate another dream, more evidently so than that in chap. iii. for it is not easy to describe a dream in language more correct and beautiful than this: "I slept, but my heart waked." Indeed, upon that hypothesis, all the circumstances are natural and easy; but upon any other, utterly inexplicable. The object of this dream is evidently to introduce a portrait of the Beloved, who is described as fair and beautiful, tall and majestic, and clothed in royal apparel. In applying this allegorically, there is no doubt but it must refer to the Messiah, the same illustrious person who is described in the 45th Psalm, as "fairer than the children of

Ver. 3. Thy lips like a thread of scarlet, (or crimson).—That is, thin and red.—Thy temples, —Percy, Good, &c. "Cheeks."—Like a piece.—Patrick and others render it, "the flower of the pomegranate."

Ver. 4. Tower of David.—That is, long, erect, slender, according to the nicest proportions, and decorated with gold, gems, and large pearls; like one of the turrets of the citadel of Zion, remarkable for its elegance, and for the trophies with which it was adorned.—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Thy two breasts.—Bochart and others think the nipples on a white bosom, are compared to twin roes, feeding among white lilies. It may be objected that chap. i. 5. 6. she speaks of herself as dark complexioned; but this may be intended of the face only, and must be taken with some abatement, (see note there,) as is evident from what is said of the cheeks.

Ver. 6. Mountain of myrrh, &c.—The bride is here compared to a hill of fragrant plants. Compare ver. 13, 14.

Ver. 9. Thou hast ravished.—See margin; rather, "captivated."—With one of thine eyes.—With a side view, perhaps; but in some parts of the East, ladies in conversation, raise one side of their veil. Dr. Percy. "With one (glance) of thine eyes, with one turn of thy neck." This is quite in the style of the oriental poets.

Ver. 11. Thy lips.—That is, conversation.

Ver. 13. Camphire.—See margin. The various aromatic plants here named remind us of Psalm xlv. 8.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Drink abundantly.—See margin. On the mystical devotion of the Persians, and other Asiatics, see the Author's "New Translation," Preliminary Essay. In reference to true religion, it can mean nothing but that rapture or fervour of devotion, sometimes experienced by eminently pious persons, which should not be considered as essential to its reality.

Ver. 3. I have washed my feet.—A Hindoo, (who never wears shoes within doors,) wipes or washes his feet before he retires to rest; and if called up in the night, will often plead, that he shall daub his feet.—Ward's Hindoos.

Ver. 4. By the hole of the door.—This refers to the locks or latches of the ancients, somewhat like those in our own country villages.

Ver. 5. Dropped with myrrh.—That is, with liquid perfume.

Ver. 6. Fainted.—William, "fainted;" as we should say, ready to drop.

I could not find him; I called him, but he gave me no answer.

7 The watchmen that went about the city found me, they smote me, they wounded me; the keepers of the walls took away my veil from me.

8 I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if ye find my beloved, that ye tell him, that I am sick of love.

9 ¶ What is thy beloved more than another beloved, O thou fairest among women? what is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou dost so charge us?

10 My beloved is white and ruddy, the chiefest among ten thousand.

11 His head is as the most fine gold, his locks are bushy, and black as a raven.

12 His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters, washed with milk, and fitly set.

13 His cheeks are as a bed of spices, as sweet flowers: his lips like lilies, dropping sweet-smelling myrrh.

14 His hands are as gold rings set with the beryl: his belly is as bright ivory overlaid with sapphires.

15 His legs are as pillars of marble, set upon sockets of fine gold: his countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars.

16 His mouth is most sweet: yea, he is altogether lovely. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The church professeth her faith in Christ. 4 Christ sheweth the graces of the church, 10 and his love towards her.

WHITHER is thy beloved gone, O thou fairest among women? whither is thy beloved turned aside? that we may seek him with thee.

2 My beloved is gone down into his garden, to the beds of spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies.

men," as having "grace poured into his lips;" as being "clothed in glory and majesty;" his garments richly perfumed, and his hand wielding the sceptre of the church and of the world. (Compare that Psalm throughout.)

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—13. The church, in the absence of her heavenly spouse, anticipates his speedy return: he returns, and repeats and amplifies his commendations of her.—The commendations of her beloved by the spouse, excite others to seek him with her, to whom she gives a farther description of his beauty and glory. At the same time she expresses herself confident that he was not far off; that he was only in the gardens; and as he had signified his love to her, and accepted her vows of love to him, she doubted not but that he would soon return to her. While she expresses her confidence in this, he suddenly re-appears, and again expresses his admiration and attachment to her person, partly in the same language as he had before employed, and partly in other terms, no less affectionate and beautiful. She is compared to Tirzah and Jerusalem, the two most beautiful cities of Judea, and to their bannered turrets; or perhaps to an army in military array, with all its banners gleaming to the sun. He then confesses himself enamoured with her charms, and declares that, though he had seen "threescore queens, and fourscore concubines, and virgins without number," she remained unrivalled in his affections and

Ver. 7. The watchmen.—That is, the guards of the palace. See chapter iii. 3.—Took away my veil.—That is, drew it on one side, to see who it was.

Ver. 8. That ye tell him.—Hebrew, "What should ye tell him? That I am sick with love."—Williams. Compare ch. ii. 5.

Ver. 10. White and ruddy.—So David is described. 1 Sam. xvi. 12.—The chiefest.—See margin. The tallest and most comely youth were doubtless appointed to this office.

Ver. 11. His head as the most fine gold.—Most refer this to his splendid crown, but perhaps it may refer to the internal value; so Solomon calls the skull "the golden bowl." (Ec. xii. 6).—Locks are bushy.—As the branches of the palm tree.—Michaëlis.

Ver. 12. White and ruddy.—(Rather, "His eyes are as doves")—the deep blue pigeon, the common dove in the East, whose brilliant plumage vibrates around his neck every sparkling hue, every dazzling flash of colour. And this pigeon standing amid "the torrents of water," or the foam of a waterfall, would be a blue centre with a bright space, like the iris of the eye, surrounded by the white. This idea has not escaped the poets of Hindostan; for the following passage is found in the Gita Govinda: "The glances of her eyes played like a pair of water birds of azure plumage, that sport near a full-blown lotus in a pool, in the season of dew."—Bagster.—Fitly set.—See margin. Percy renders it, "sitting at the full streams."

Ver. 13. As sweet flowers.—See margin; referring doubtless to the beard

J Ps 141.5. k Ho 6.5.
l what.
m Ps 45.13.
c.1.8.
n a standard and bencher.
o or, curled.
p c.1.1.
q sitting in fulness;
i. e. fitly placed,
and set as a precious stone in the fold of myrring.
r or, towers of perfumes.
s Re. 1.14.
16.
t palate.
u Je 14.8.
b Mat 18.20

e c.2.16.
7.10.
d ver.10.
e or, puffed
me up.
f c.4.1.3.
g Mat 21.19
25.30.
h Ps 45.14.
i Re.7.9.
j Re.21.10, 11.
k Ps 14.5.
ver 4.
l Jn 15.16.
m c.7.12.
n I knew not.
o or, set me on the chariots
of the willow people.
p Ps 110.3.
q or, Maha-naim
Ge 32.2. s Ep 6.15.
b Ps 45.10,
13.

3 I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine: he feedeth among the lilies.

4 ¶ Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, comely as Jerusalem, terrible as an army with banners.

5 Turn away thine eyes from me, for they have overcome me: thy hair is as a flock of goats that appear from Gilead.

6 Thy teeth are as a flock of sheep which go up from the washing, whereof every one beareth twins, and there is not one barren among them.

7 As a piece of a pomegranate are thy temples within thy locks.

8 There are threescore queens, and fourscore concubines, and virgins without number.

9 My dove, my undefiled is but one; she is the only one of her mother, she is the choice one of her that bare her. The daughters saw her, and blessed her: yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praised her.

10 ¶ Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?

11 I went down into the garden of nuts to see the fruits of the valley, and to see whether the vine flourished, and the pomegranates budded.

12 Or ever I was aware, my soul made me like the chariots of Ammi-nadib.

13 Return, return, O Shulamite; return, return, that we may look upon thee. What will ye see in the Shulamite? As it were the company of two armies.

CHAPTER VII.

1 A farther description of the church's graces. 10 The church professeth her faith and desire.

HOW beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter! the joints of thy thighs are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman.

esteem. But shall it be said that the All-beautiful and Infinitely-pure, can delight himself in sinful mortals? What saith the prophet Zephaniah, in his name, to the Jewish church? "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love; he will joy over thee with singing." (Zep. iii. 17; compare Isa. lxii. 5.)

In the latter verses of this chapter, the bride (the Lamb's wife) is compared, for her opening virtues, to the rising dawn; and her beauty to the moon for softness, and to the sun for splendour—and to what else? "An army with banners," say our translators; but the original says nothing of an "army," and the banners, or streamers, here intended, should seem to be celestial, and related to the sky; but whether they relate to the eccentric path of a comet, the coruscations of the Northern lights, or some other splendid meteor, we presume not to decide. All the real beauty and glory which the church possesses, or its individual members, is certainly of celestial origin. Whatever moral dress she wears, or whatever spiritual beauty she exhibits, it is "the comeliness" which the Lord hath "put upon" her; (Ezek. xvi. 14.) and as to her splendour and glory, we know that it arises solely from being "clothed with the Sun," even the Sun of righteousness. (Mal. iv. 2. Rev. xii. 1.)

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—13. This chapter we think very unhappily translated, and by many improperly expounded. It has and whiskers, no inconsiderable feature of masculine beauty, in the East. —His lips like lilies.—The beautiful red Syrian lilies. Compare ch. iv. 3.

Ver. 24. As gold rings set with the beryl.—Hebrew, tarshish, which the Rabbins say, was sea-green. This is supposed to mean the fingers being covered with rings.—His belly.—This word certainly includes the whole trunk of the body, which, being compared to ivory, overlaid with sapphires, may the body itself, covered with a blue robe.

Ver. 15. Upon sockets.—Williams.—"pedestals."—Countenance as Lebanon.—That is, his figure tall and majestic.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 4. Tirzah—signifies "delectable," and is supposed to have received its name from the beauty of its situation.—Boothroyd.

Ver. 12. Like the chariots of Ammi-nadib.—See margin. This has been generally taken as a proper name, but it may be applied to the mind being carried away with joy or transport.

Ver. 13. Shulamite.—Williams.—"Solima."—"Bride of Solomon." Goss. Boothroyd, and others.—The company of two armies.—Perhaps meteors in the sky; compare ver. 10. But it may be applied to a chorus of musicians, or dancers.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Thy feet with shoes.—Rather, "Sandals;" those of Judith ravished the eyes of Holofernes. Judith xvi. 9.—Joins of thy thighs.—Williams.—"Cincture of thy loins." On the most mature reflection, we conceive this refers to the female drawers. Lady M. W. Montague, describing 2 Thy navel is like a round goblet, which wanteth not liquor: thy belly is like a heap of wheat set about with lilies.

3 Thy <sup>a</sup> breasts are like two young roes that are twins.

4 Thy neck is as a tower of ivory; thine eyes like the fish-pools in Heshbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim: thy nose is as the tower of Lebanon which looketh toward Damascus.

5 Thy head upon thee is like <sup>e</sup> Carmel, and the hair of thy head like purple; the king is <sup>h</sup> held in the <sup>b</sup> galleries.

6 How fair and how pleasant art thou, O love, for delights!

7 This thy stature <sup>i</sup> is like to a palm tree, and thy breasts to clusters of grapes.

8 I said, I will go up to the palm tree, I will take hold of the boughs thereof: now also thy breasts shall be as clusters of the vine, and the smell of thy nose like apples;

9 And the roof of thy mouth like the best wine for my beloved, that goeth down <sup>j</sup> sweetly, causing the lips of <sup>k</sup> those that are asleep to speak.

c mixture.
d c. 4.5.
e crimson.
f Is. 35.2.
Mi. 7.14.
g bound.
h Ps. 68.24.
i Ep. 4.13.
j straightly
k or, the ancient.
l c. 2.16.
6.3.
m Ps. 45.11.
n open.
o Ex. 25.22.
Ps. 122.5.
He. 4.16.
p 1 Co. 2.9.
a He. 2.11.
12.
b they should not despise me.
c Pr. 9.2,5.

10 ¶ I am <sup>m</sup> my beloved's, and his <sup>n</sup> desire is toward me.

11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field; let us lodge in the villages.

12 Let us get up early to the vineyards; let us see if the vine flourish, whether the tender grape <sup>a</sup> appear, and the pomegranates bud forth: there <sup>o</sup> will I give thee my loves.

13 The mandrakes give a smell, and at our gates are all manner of pleasant fruits, new and old, which I have laid up <sup>p</sup> for thee, O my beloved.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The love of the church to Christ. 6 The vehemency of love. 8 The calling of the Gentiles. 14 The church prayeth for Christ's coming.

THAT thou wert as my <sup>a</sup> brother, that sucked the breasts of my mother! when I should find thee without, I would kiss thee; yea, <sup>b</sup> I should not be despised.

2 I would lead thee, and bring thee into my mother's house, who would instruct me: I would cause thee to drink of spiced wine <sup>c</sup> of the juice of my pomegranate.

3 His left hand should be under my head, and his right hand should embrace me.

been generally understood as referring to the naked person of the spouse; and that this description is the language of the virgins, either in undressing or dressing her. It may be the latter: but we refer the doubtful passages, wholly to the dress, and that for the following reasons:—1. The language otherwise understood would not become the lips of virgins, much less the language of inspiration. 2. The other personal descriptions in this poem, and in the 45th Psalm, all expressly refer to dress. 3. The king was now waiting probably in the ante-chamber till the virgin attendants had finished the decoration of her person. 4. The Jews used to name the parts of the person for the dress of those parts, as the head, ver. 5.—5. The feet are clothed, which renders it more unlikely that the other parts of the body should be naked: ladies, we presume, do not bathe in slippers. (For farther illustrations, see notes.)

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—14. Mutual pledges of affection between Christ and his church, with an intimation of the calling of the Gentiles.—The concluding verses of the preceding chapter connect so intimately with this, that it seems necessary to refer to them. In the close of that chapter, the spouse solicits her beloved to take an excursion into the surrounding country, to observe the advances of the spring, which, we have already remarked, is the season of the poem. See chap. ii. 11—13. where her beloved first makes the proposal to which she now accedes. Whatever love we may show to the Saviour, it originated with him. "We love him because he first loved us" (1 John iv. 19). She promises to evince her attachment to him, by those fruits of faith and good works with which he is always well-pleased; at the same time she wishes to avoid the reproaches of the world on account of her attachment to the Saviour, for scorn and contempt are sometimes more difficult to bear than even imprisonment and stripes.

Ver. 5. commences a fresh stanza, or an idyl, (as Dr. Good styles it), and these words appear to be the language of the virgins, who, on seeing the royal palanquin approach, inquire, as on a former occasion, "Who is this that cometh?" &c. It need not, however, be referred to the same scene: the wilderness here meant, may probably intimate only one of the small wildernesses, or uncultivated spots, of which there were many in Judea, and some not far from the metropolis. These might, in the allegory, very properly represent barren and neglected spots within the boundary of the Christian church. The words "I raised thee," &c. are those of the bridegroom, reminding the spouse of her engagements to him by betrothment; and she begs (ver. 6.) to have a perpetual memorial in his heart. He then assures her, in return, (ver. 7.) that his love is as unextinguishable as it was unpurchasable.

The spouse, in ver. 8. presents a petition on the behalf of a younger sister, not yet marriageable, which Christian commentators in general apply to the case of the Gentiles, and ground here the calling of the Gentile church; and though some have objected to this interpretation, they do not appear to have supplied a better.

The bridegroom returns a kind reply: "If she be a wall, though low, we will raise her by turrets of silver;" that is, give her a marriage portion, that shall compensate all defects; and if she be an unprotected virgin, we will enclose and secure her from every danger.

The bride then turns his attention to herself: "I (was) a wall, and my breasts like towers;" that is, the Jewish church was, by the Spirit of prophecy, prepared for the coming of her Lord; then, says she, I was in his eyes "as one that found peace," or happiness. It was a time of love, when the bridegroom spread his skirt over her, and took her under his protection. (See Ruth iii. 9. Ezek. xvi. 8.)

At ver. 11. the subject again changes, and this verse is supposed to be addressed by the spouse to the virgins, as the next is to the bridegroom himself; neither of them are easy of explanation. The situation of Baal-hamon is unknown and unimportant: but what was the vineyard of the bride? The sacred history informs us, that Pharaoh (her father) having previously taken Gezer from the Canaanites, and burnt it, afterwards made a present of it to his daughter, the wife of Solomon. It is very probable, that after having burnt the city, and destroyed its inhabitants, Pharaoh might have turned it into some kind of plantation, which the Hebrews would comprehend under the general name of vineyard, which she here speaks of as hers, and from which she received a certain revenue. This falling into the hands of Solomon, upon his marriage, some years afterwards, he rebuilt the city, which, according to Reland, was called Ga-her Turkish dress, mentions her drawers, which came down to her ankles, as composed of thin rose-coloured damask, embroidered with silver flowers: "this surely is" like jewellery, the work of the hands of a cunning (or ingenious) workman. Dr. Chandler also describes drawers as part of the dress of the Eastern ladies, and mentions a fragment of Sappho, from which it appears they were worn in ancient Greece. See Parkhurst's Lexicon. The Lexicons of Buxtorf, Cocceius, Leigh, &c. favour this rendering. Ver. 2. Thy navel is like a round goblet that wanteth not liquor.—Applying this as the other verses to the external form, it very naturally refers to the girdle fastened with a golden clasp set with rubies, which may be well compared to a cup or goblet filled with wine that is mixed with aromatics.—Thy belly.—Rather body: it is a very general term, applied either to the body of the man, or the womb of the woman. (See Judges iii. 21. Psalm xxii. 9.) Also to the region of the bosom and the heart. (See Job xv. 35. Prov. xviii. 5. xx. 27. xxi. 17. &c.) As we have applied chap. v. 14. to raiment of white and blue, so here we incline to think the raiment of the bride must be intended. The original Hebrew term here used is explained by the lexicons to mean naked corn; i. e. the grains of wheat, which were heaped together after threshing, and, as some think, strewed with lilies. Lily-work we know was the favourite pattern of the Hebrews, and their tabernacle and temple were full of it; we think, therefore, it may with propriety be understood of a vest wrought with lilies, and fastened with the girdle before mentioned. Still, however, we consider this emblematical, and that her robes were thus wrought to complement her with the promise of fertility. So, Selden tells us, it was customary at the Hebrew marriages, to cast a few grains of wheat or barley over the new married couple, with friendly wishes of a numerous family; which was also probably accompanied by drinking together a glass of wine, (as at the present day,) and that possibly alluded to by "the goblet of wine" wrought in jewellery. These things may appear more probable, if we consider that the ancient Jews were accustomed to speak by action—(see the following Introduction to the Prophets,)—and were every where surrounded by types and figures.

Ver. 4. Tower of ivory.—The tower of David, probably, ch. iv. 4, supposed to have been built of pure white marble, polished like ivory.—Eyes like fish-pools—i. e. "Thine eyes are dark, deep, clear, and serene, as the fish-pools in Heshbon."—Bagster.—Nose as the tower of Lebanon—which had probably an abutment like a finely formed human nose.

Ver. 5. Like Carmel.—This was a mountain remarkable for its beauty, and might well represent a head erect, and crowned with the nuptial garland. The hair—like purple—not the colour, but the shell of the porpora, (or murex) which is spiral, and not much unlike the form in which English ladies of the present day roll up their tresses. (See Williams's new Translation.)—The king is held, or waiting in the galleries, or anti-chamber.—This we take to be an intimation from one of the virgin attendants, (or maids in waiting,) on which the king is immediately introduced, and "rejoiceth as a bridegroom over his bride." Isa. lxii. 5.

Ver. 7. Thy breasts to clusters.—Not of grapes, (as our translators have supplied it,) but dates, the fruit of the palm tree here mentioned, which is said to be sweeter than honey. The palm is celebrated for its being straight and tall. See Eccles. xxiv. 13, 14.

Ver. 8. The smell of thy nose like apples.—"The odour of thy breath like citrons." Williams.—The best wine for my beloved, &c.—Williams, "Which is sent to those whom I love for their integrity, and causeth the lips of those who are asleep to murmur."

Ver. 9. Roof of thy mouth.—Probably, as Houbigant and Dr. Percy understand, the voice or conversation of the bride; the roof of the mouth being one of the principal instruments of sound.—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Let us go forth into the villages—i. e. take a ride round the vicinity of the metropolis. The Italians call this villaging—going into Villaggiatura.

Ver. 12. Give thee my loves.—That is, give thee the proofs of my love, namely, in the pleasant fruits, laid up in the store-rooms.

Ver. 13. Mandrakes.—By these, some understand flowers, and others, fruit.

4 I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, 4 that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, until he please.

5 Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, leaning upon her beloved? I raised thee up under the apple tree: there thy mother brought thee forth; there she brought thee forth that bare thee.

6 ¶ Set me as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thine arm: for love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.

7 Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it: if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be condemned.

8 ¶ We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for?

d why should ye stir up,
 &c.

e Is. 49. 16.
 Hag. 2. 23.
 2 Ti. 2. 19.

f hard.

g Pr. 6. 34, 35.

h Ecce. 53. 33.

i peace.

j Mat. 21. 33

k Ge. 20. 16.

l Ps. 72. 17.
 19.

m c. 2. 13.

n flee away.

o Re. 22. 17,
 20.

9 If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar.

10 I am a wall, and my breasts like towers:
 then was I in his eyes as one that found favour.

11 Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-hamon;
 he let out the vineyard unto keepers; every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver.

12 My vineyard, which is mine, is before me:
 thou, O Solomon, must have a thousand, and those that keep the fruit thereof two hundred.

13 Thou that dwellest in the gardens, the companions hearken to thy voice: cause me to hear it.

14 ¶ Make haste, my beloved, and be thou like to a roe or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices.

zara, near Joppa. Now the object of mentioning this vineyard (as at that time it probably was) seems to be, that its revenue might be transferred to her younger sister: but this is offered only as a conjecture.

To allegorize these vineyards, with any degree of propriety, is not easy; nor would the genius of Bunyan, united to the Oriental literature of a Jones, be sufficient to open all the allegories of Scripture, without a degree of local knowledge, now unattainable. It is therefore much better to leave many passages in the obscurity in which time has involved them, than to make them more obscure by "words without knowledge;" at least by words without that knowledge which is indispensable to their proper explication. The Scriptures have, perhaps, suffered more from the determination of commentators to explain all difficulties, than from any other cause whatever. There are mysteries in Scripture as well as in nature, that every attempt to penetrate only renders more obscure.

The modern mandrakes of Judea are neither sweet nor fragrant—but they are used to excite love. Dr. Good's Translation.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 5. Leaving—That is, resting upon his bosom, in the parlour. I raised thee up under the apple tree.—Williams, "Under the citron tree I courted (or solicited) thee." We conceive, with Harmer, that this refers back to chap. ii. 3, on which occasion it is at least possible that her mother might be present. There thy mother brought thee forth.—This is certainly wrong; the bride was not born in Solomon's garden. Dr. Good renders it, "Led thee forth;" but in his note, explains it to mean, "pledged," or "plighted." So Dr. Percy, Michaelis, &c. "There she plighted thee that bare thee."

Ver. 6. As a seal—or signet. See Jer. xxii. 24.—A most vehement flame.—Ezek. "The flame of Jah (or Jehovah)." This we consider as referring, not to lightning, as many explain it, but to the sacred, inextinguishable flame upon the altar. See Levit. ix. 12. 2 Chron. vi. 1.—For love resembles fire kindled among coals, or charcoal, made of those kinds of wood, which emit the strongest heat and most vehement flame: and it is "a fire which no floods of water can quench; that is, no temptations or sufferings can prevail against it; nay, if a man possess this love, no wealth can hire him to renounce it; nor can any thing purchase it, or compensate for the want of it. The word rendered jealousy may signify zeal. "The jealous zeal which I have for thee, and for thy glory, consumes me, even like the grave, and burns me up like the coals of some most vehement and extreme fire." Bishop Hall.—Scott.

Ver. 8, 9. We have a little sister, &c.—"We have a sister who is little, and her breasts are not grown." Williams, Boothroyd, &c. The spouse, for the church which there was, seems here to intercede for the Gentiles from among whom God intended to take a people for his name. The spouse therefore calls that future church, "a little sister which hath no breasts." Though a few believers were even then found among the Gentiles; yet they had not the word of God, or the means of grace, and spiritual union with the promised Saviour, nor in due time they would "be spoken for" by him: and what was the church of Israel to do for them at that time, as instruments of effecting the gracious purpose of God? To this question Christ answers, "If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver." If the commencement of this work, even the conversion of the Gentiles by the Spirit of Christ, through the preaching of apostles and evangelists, raised up from the nation of Israel, were likened to a wall built upon Him, "the precious Foundation and Corner stone," to become a part of a spiritual temple; they would be so multiplied, and enriched in process of time, that the Gentile church would become as a palace for the great King, builded of solid silver, and far more splendid than Solomon's temple. If the first preaching of the gospel to them was compared to the making of a door, through the wall of partition; that door should be preserved most effectually, as if cased with boards of durable cedar.—Scott.

Ver. 10. I am a wall.—As there is no verb in the original, perhaps the preter tense would be better supplied, as in the exposition.—The ancient church seems here thankfully to reflect on her privileges: she was, before the coming of the Messiah, as a wall built on the precious Foundation, a part of the glorious temple which was to be erected; and the lively oracles and ordinances, which she enjoyed, were her security, as well as the sustenance and comfort of her character; and she was thus distinguished, because "unseen" (even when this difference originated) "she was in his eyes as one that found favour" or peace with him.—Scott.

Ver. 11, 12. Solomon had a vineyard.—Calmet thus translates these verses: "Solomon has a vineyard at Baal-hamon, he has let it out to keepers, each of whom for the fruit of it was to bring a thousand pieces of silver. As for me, my vineyard is before me; keep thyself, O Solomon, thy thousand pieces of silver."—Bagster. Solomon, probably, had a large vineyard, which he did not superintend himself, but let it out to keepers, each of whom paid him a thousand pieces of silver, or shekels, for the fruit, and they were supposed to clear two hundred. With allusion to this, the advantages or privileges of the ancient church are considered, according to frequent parables in Scripture, as a vineyard, intrusted by its owner to the rulers, teachers, and congregation of Israel; and the spouse, or church, determines to keep this vineyard under her own immediate care; that it may "abound in fruits of righteousness," to the honour of her Beloved, and the rich benefit of all employed in the care of it.—Scott.

Ver. 13, 14. Thou that dwellest, &c.—These verses close the conference between Christ and the spouse, and imply his personal absence from his people during their continuance on earth. Christ first addresses the spouse, as "dwelling in the gardens;" or vineyard, the assemblies and ordinances of his saints.—The word rendered "companions" being masculine, cannot mean the attendants on the spouse, so frequently mentioned, but rather those who were "the friends" and companions "of the Bridegroom;" the spirits of just men made perfect; "an innumerable company of angels;" and such men as John the Baptist, the apostles, and the most eminent instruments of Christ, in establishing his church. "Ask what thou wilt of me, and I will thee before all thy companions." "I will do it for thee."—Bishop Patrick. While the church professes her faith and love, and renders her worship, as in the presence of all the friends of her Beloved; the more she abounds in prayers and supplications, with thanksgivings, the greater measure of true prosperity and consolation she enjoys. Thus our Lord, just before his crucifixion, again and again exhorted his disconsolate disciples to "ask and receive, that their joy might be full." To this the spouse replies by craving his speedy return, not for a transient visit, but to take her to be wholly with him.—"The mountains of spices," seem to mean heaven and its exalted worship, of which all the incense and worship at the temple were a faint shadow. "Solomon here seems to long for the first coming of the Messiah, as St. John doth for his last, who concludes his book of Revelation in the same manner as Solomon doth this saying, 'Come, Lord Jesus.' " Bishop Patrick.—Scott.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SONG OF SOLOMON.

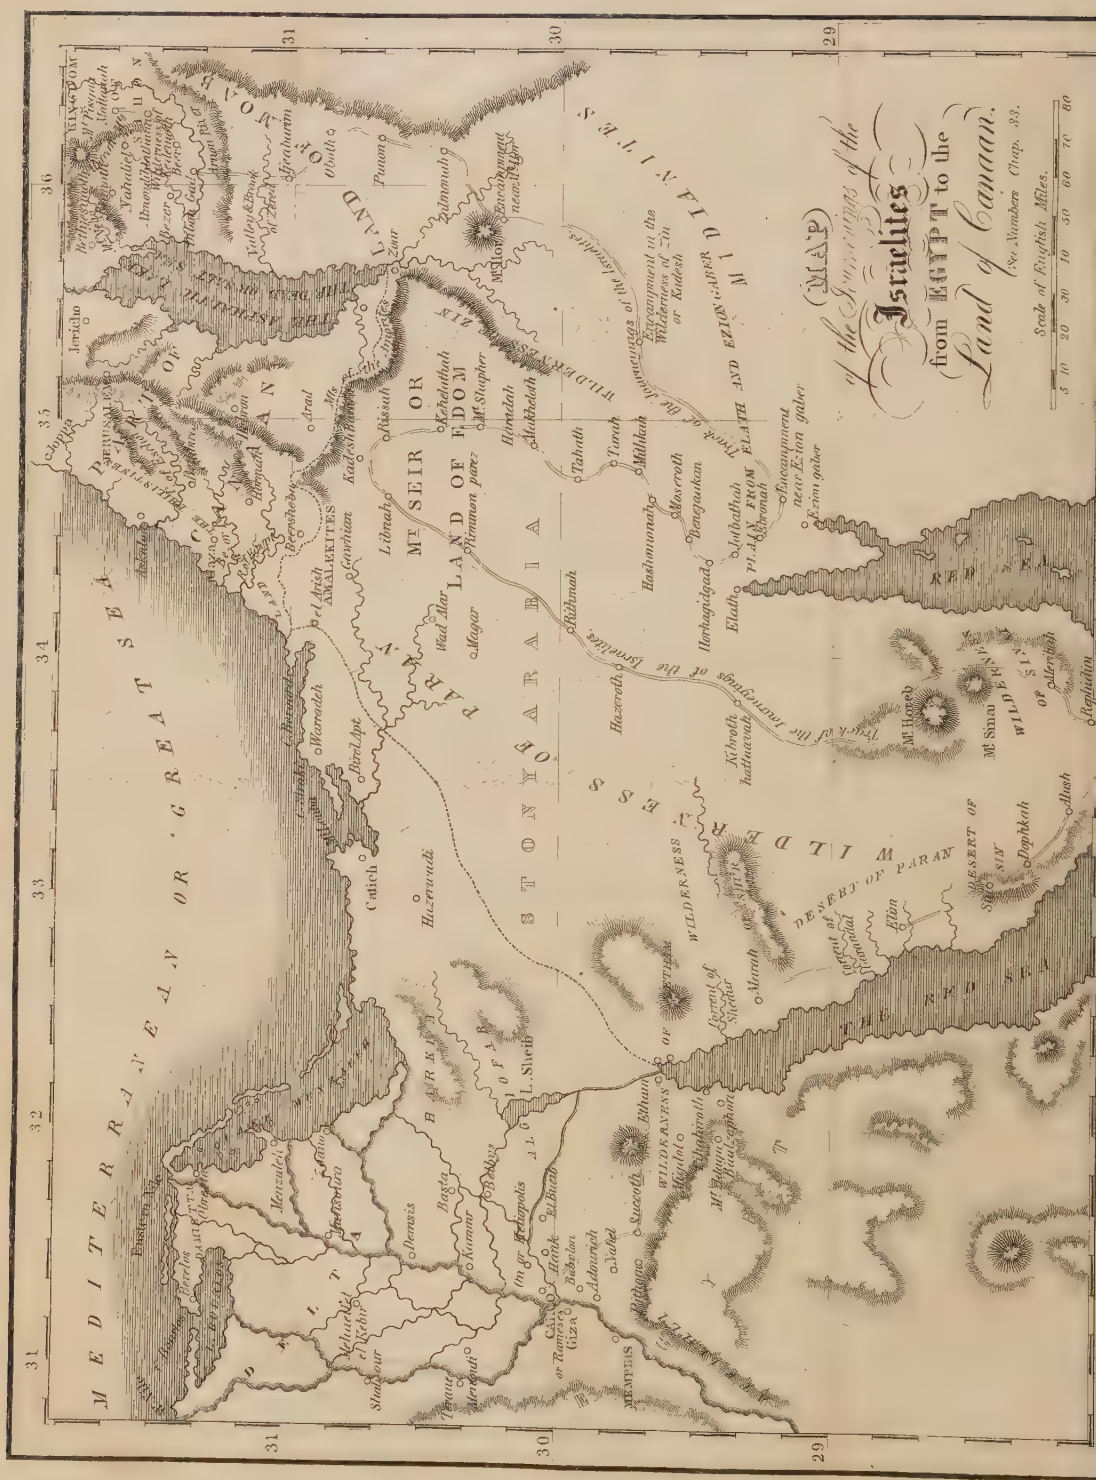

To whatever species of composition this beautiful poem belongs, it is, beyond all controversy, the finest for elegance and variety of imagery, and the choicest colouring of language, that ever proceeded from the pen of man. "Every part of the Canticles," says the learned and eloquent Bossuet, "abounds in poetical beauties: the objects which present themselves on every side, are the choicest plants, the most beautiful flowers, the most delicious fruits, the bloom and vigour of spring, the sweet verdure of the fields, flourishing and well-watered gardens, pleasant streams and perennial fountains. The other senses are represented as regaled with the most precious odours, natural and artificial; with the sweet singing of birds, and the soft voice of the turtle; with milk and honey, and the choicest wine. To these enchantments are added all that is beautiful and graceful in the human form, the endearments, the caresses, the delicacy of love: if any object be introduced which seems not to harmonize with this delightful scene, such as the awful prospect of tremendous precipices, the wildness of the mountains, or the haunts of the lions, its effect is only to heighten by the contrast the beauty of the other objects, and to add the charms of variety to those of grace and elegance." But this sacred poem was not merely designed to regale the senses, or to please the imagination, but to interest the heart, and to excite, regulate, and direct the chaste affections of the mind towards the Creator and Redeemer of the world. Nor was this allegorical mode of describing the sacred union of mankind and the great Creator peculiar to the Hebrew nation, but it obtained among all the Eastern peoples, from the earliest period down to the present time. Sir W. JONES assures us, that, according to the zealous admirers of HAFIZ, wine means devotion; sleep, meditation; perfume, hope of the divine favour; kisses and embraces, the raptures of piety; beauty, the perfection of the Supreme Being; tresses, the expansion of his glory, &c. &c. The loves of Mejnoun and Leileh also have been celebrated in the Arabic, Persian, and Turkish languages, with all the charms of poetic rapture; whilst the impassioned lovers themselves are regarded in the same allegorical light as the bride and bridegroom in this sacred poem. A similar emblematic mysticism is equally conspicuous in the bards of India; and the Vedantis or Hindoo commentators have in like manner attributed a double, that is, a literal and spiritual, meaning to their compositions. This is particularly the case with the pastoral drama called the Gitavinda, or songs of Jayadeva, the subject of which is the loves of Christa, the human soul; or the reciprocal attraction between the divine goodness and the human soul; the style and imagery of which, like those of the Royal Hebrew bard, are in the highest degree flowery and amatory.—Bagster.

(MAP) of the Journeys of the Israelites from EGYPT to the Land of Canaan.
(See Numbers Chap. 33.)

Scale of English Miles.
5 10 20 30 40 50 60

M. Osborne Sr.

M. Osborne Sr.

